Atlantans Go To Capital To Urge New Postoffice

HEAVY INCREASE IN LOCAL OFFICE WILL BE STRESSED

John K. Ottley, Frank Neely and Fred B. Wilson Will Present Facts To Solons.

NEEDS TO BE SHOWN IN GRAPHIC STYLE

Authentic Charts Demonstrate Marvelous Strides Which Demand New and Better Building.

Information showing the crowded conditions of Atlanta's postoffice and other federal offices and data demonstrating the need of a new federal building in this city will be submitted to proper congressional committees and department heads at Washington Monday morning by a special committee of Atlanta citizens, consisting of John K. Ottley, chairman; Frank Neely and Fred B. Wilson.

With complete information concerning the details of each federal office in Atlanta in their possession and with authentic charts showing the marvelous strides forward Atlanta has taken in recent years, the committee will show that Atlanta conditions cry for immediate relief from the government.

In announcing the purpose of the report the committee will present at Washington, Chairman Ottley declared that it will present "a graphic picture of the increase in commercial, civic and social activities of the community since the erection of the present building in 1911 as well as the prophecy of the increase anticipated in 1930 and 1940."

Ottley Left Wednesday.

Chairman Ottley left Atlanta Wednesday for Savannah where he attended a meeting of the board of directors of the Central of Georgia railroad. He left after the meeting for New York with Mrs. Ottley, and will go from there to Washington, where he will meet the other members of the Atlanta committee Monday morning to present the case of Atlanta to the proper federal authorities.

In outlining the committee's purposes in Washington Chairman Ottley issued the following statement: "Statement regarding committee's work on presenting to the treasury department and postoffice department data regarding Atlanta's needs for additional federal facilities."

"A comprehensive volume of facts of Atlanta's needs for additional federal facilities have been made up by the committee for presentation to the proper authorities in Washington."

"The spirit followed in this work has been that expressed in the short foreword of this volume, to-wit: This volume does not purport to suggest the architectural and technical details for a federal building in Atlanta, but brings a graphic picture of the increase in the commercial, civic and social activities of

Holder Qualifies In Triangle Race For Next Governor

SENATE ACCUSED OF FILIBUSTERING ON FARM MEASURE

Swanson, of Virginia, Declares Senator Willis And Others Seek To Delay Relief Action.

Washington, June 19.—(AP)—The McNary farm bill was caught today in the swirl of pre-adjournment legislation with a date for a final senate vote more indefinite than ever.

Defeated time and again in his effort to fix a day for a roll call, Senator McNary, republican, Oregon, manager of the bill, made another attempt today but failed again when Senator Willis, republican, Ohio, objected.

This brought Senator Swanson, democrat, Virginia, to his feet. Pointing a finger at the Ohio senator, he accused him of attempting to kill off the rivers and harbors bill by conducting a filibuster against the farm measure with the aid of a small group of senators.

There might be some question as to the constitutionality of the equalization fee provision, Senator Cummins added, but that could be fixed by amendment. He appealed to senators to support the bill if they believed it would contribute to the welfare of the people generally and not to the farmers particularly and not to be "frightened or terrorized by allegations that it was not within our constitutional power."

Senator Bruce went back to the race for governor in his argument, declaring the bill was a part of the same fallacy that had caused the defeat of John W. Davis because Governor Bryan, of Nebraska, had been put on the democratic ticket as his running mate.

"Bryan's name always had been an evil genius to the democratic party," he declared. "Had it not been for Bryanism in 1924 the democrats would have won."

He admonished the western farmers to stop their complaints and manfully work out their problem without coming to congress with every adversity.

WARNING TO SOLONS.

Washington, June 19.—(AP)—A briefing warning to opponents of the Haugen farm relief measure, declaring the farm organizations wanted the fundamentals of that bill or nothing, was issued here tonight by William Hirth, of Columbia, Missouri, chairman of the corn belt committee, who said both democrats and republicans in congress who vote against agriculture would have the opportunity to explain to their constituents in future elections.

MASS MEET CALLED TO PROTEST FIRING OF POLICEWOMAN

Leaders of Organized Women in Atlanta Sound Call To Consider Ousting of Miss Dupree.

PUBLIC HEARING PETITION MADE

Federation, Women Voters, Chamber Division, Methodist Service Workers, Civic Council Banded

Demanding a public hearing of charges against Miss Martha DuPre, secretary of the Woman's Bureau, who was ousted last Wednesday by the police committee of council, militant women representing leading women's civic and political organizations of the entire city Saturday announced that a mass meeting will be held the latter part of this week for the purpose of deciding on a "plan of procedure."

Women's organizations participating in the call for the mass meeting are the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs, the Atlanta League of Women Voters, the women's division of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, the Federation of Social Service Workers of Methodist Churches of the South Atlanta District, the Atlanta Woman's council and others.

Miss DuPre Saturday declined to discuss the matter in any way saying all she knew of the whole affair she had read in newspapers.

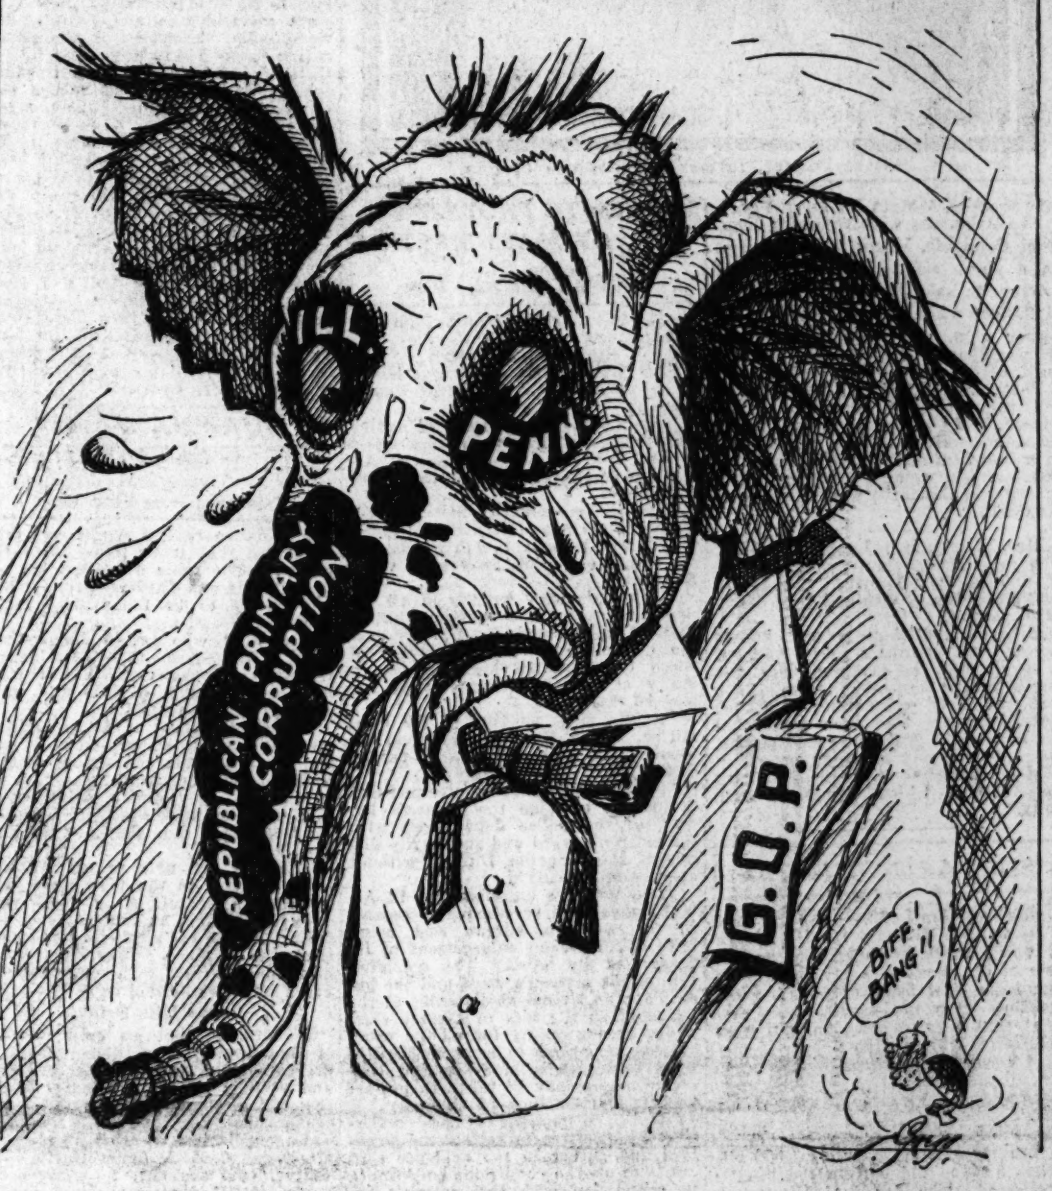

"I feel that there is nothing I should or can say concerning the affair," Miss DuPre stated. "Wednesday afternoon when I left the station I had my job, and when I awoke Thursday morning I learned by newspaper stories that I had been fired. So far as I know I did nothing to justify such summary action on the part of the committee."

"We consider Miss DuPre a capable and well trained woman, and fully competent to handle affairs of the department over which she had jurisdiction," one of the women calling the mass meeting said. "Women of the city want her to have a chance to be heard, and if there are any sound reasons for her dismissal the public is entitled to know about it."

The exact place, time and day of the mass meeting has not been decided on definitely yet, members of the committee of prominent women who issued

Judge R. Eve May Offer For Highest Court

Friends Here Say South Georgia Jurist Is Being Importuned To Run.

Judge R. Eve, of the Tifton circuit, well-known south Georgia jurist, may be a candidate to fill one of the vacancies on the state supreme bench, it was learned in Atlanta Saturday, when Britt W. Davis, court reporter of the Tifton circuit, and C. A. Christian, well-known Tifton citizen, were in conference with local friends at the state capital.

Both Mr. Davis and Mr. Christian arrived in Atlanta Friday afternoon to visit several days and spent Saturday morning conversing with local friends in regard to Judge Eve's possible entrance into the primary, which will be held in September.

"We do not speak as coming from Judge Eve," said Mr. Davis, "but we do know that he is being strongly importuned to allow use of his name for one of the state supreme court positions to be filled this fall. We are in Atlanta for a week-end trip, and as friends of Judge Eve we are casually looking into the situation."

"Judge Eve has been the judge of the Tifton circuit for ten years and prior to this service he was for six years judge of the city court of Tifton. There is not a lawyer in Georgia who is better equipped for service on the supreme court bench than Judge Eve. Whether or not he is going to permit the use of his name, we do not know, but we do know that his friends are urging him to make formal entry before next Wednesday."

AUSTRALIA ORDERS CENSORS TO BAR "THE BIG PARADE"

MOTHER'S BELIEF YOUTH WAS ALIVE TRIUMPHS IN END

Thomas W. Perry of Kingsland, Ga., Officially Reported Dead, Found in Illinois Hospital.

PARENTS EXHAUST FUNDS IN SEARCH

Youth Suffers Loss of Memory — Has Picked Up Foreign Tongue Since "Arca" Disaster.

Although officially listed as dead eight years ago, Thomas W. Perry, of Kingsland, Ga., young sailor in the world war, has been restored alive to his family as the result of a nationwide search by his mother who refused to believe the government report that her son had been "lost at sea."

The story, which rivals in strangeness the famous Bergeron case, though with a happier ending, is filed away in the records of the Atlanta Veterans' bureau and that organization, it was disclosed Saturday, is now endeavoring to make official the identification of Perry which his family and relatives no longer doubt.

Dreams and visions in which the mother asserts she was convinced she saw her son alive inspired the search which carried her to all sections of the nation, she declared. Always, she said, some force urged her on in the search until at last her boy was restored to her.

Perry was listed officially as one of the men lost at sea in 1918 when the steamship "Arca" was sunk but his mother never accepted this list as authentic and after pursuing an investigation lasting seven years located the man whom she positively identified as her son in the state insane asylum at Kankakee, Ill. Other members of the Perry family including his father, sisters and brothers have positively identified him and the United States Veterans' bureau in Atlanta is working through finger prints and other records to establish his identity officially.

While nothing is known concerning Perry's movements from the time of the sinking of his ship to his appearance in Illinois, the fact that at times he burst into speech in a strange illogical gibberish has led to the plausible theory that he was picked up in a physically and mentally exhausted condition by some Italian port, from which he worked his way home.

Reads Strange Fiction.

In the strange story of Perry enter the most extreme elements of fiction. It involves the tale of a

AUTO AND TROLLEY CRASH; FIVE HURT, 8 OTHERS INJURED

Automobile Carrying Five Occupants Rams Street Car — Two Boys Near Death.

Motor accidents figured in the injury Saturday of 13 Atlantans, five of that number being occupants of an automobile which rammed a street car early Saturday afternoon.

Granville Cox, 15, of 62 Cherry street, and Roy Strickland, 14, of 58 Cherry street, may die and three others were more or less seriously hurt in an automobile and street car collision at Tenth street and Hemphill avenue.

Cox and Strickland were both unconscious when brought to Grady hospital and doctors said both have slight chances for recovery. Both are believed to have brain concussion and Cox had a fractured pelvis and several fractured ribs. Strickland is believed to have been hurt internally.

The occupants of the automobile with the two youths were Baker Cox, 4, and George E. Strain, 25, both of 62 Cherry street, and Raymond Hollans, a negro, whom, police charged, was driving the machine. The child and Strain were both seriously cut and bruised and the negro sustained several minor cuts and bruises.

Held by Police.

The negro was treated at Grady hospital and after treatment was arrested on a charge of reckless driving. He is being held without bond, pending a complete investigation of the accident and the condition of the two injured boys.

According to reports filed at the police station, the automobile was being driven into Hemphill avenue from Tenth street when the accident occurred. The street car was an inbound Luckie street car and, as far as police were able to ascertain, no members of the car crew or passengers were hurt.

The street car was in charge of Motorman D. V. Bransell, 27, of 731 Capitol avenue, and a case of reckless driving was made against him.

Two other young men narrowly escaped death Saturday afternoon on the Marietta highway when a light touring car collided with a heavy

Give Them the Once Over

The merchants of Atlanta would not pay out good money to place their advertisements in The Sunday Constitution if they did not have something worth-while to offer you.

Before next Sunday you are going to buy something, perhaps several articles—and you will find them advertised in this morning's Constitution.

It is to your advantage, therefore, to read the advertisements in this issue of The Constitution, note where you can get what you want, and the price.

This plan will save you a lot of time on a hot day, and very likely it will save you a considerable sum of money.

'Farewell' for Dr. B. R. Lacy Will Assemble Prominent Citizens at Unusual Affair Lions Club Sponsors Program To Honor Atlantian Named To Head Union Theological Seminary.

A program of music, stunts and oratory in its briefest form will feature the semi-public valedictory dinner to be given Dr. Ben R. Lacy, Jr., pastor of Central Presbyterian church, by the Atlanta Lions club at the Ansley hotel Tuesday at 7:30 o'clock. Already a large number of tickets have been taken, and it is more than likely that the dinner will have to be served on the roof garden to accommodate friends of Dr. Lacy.

The affair is in the nature of a farewell party for Dr. Lacy, who goes to Richmond, Va., at an early date to accept the presidency of Union Theological seminary, of that city. Ladies are invited and a large number already have signified their intention to be present. Tickets may be secured at $1.50 at the cashier's office at the Ansley hotel, or from Victor F. Todd at the Piedmont laundry. No tickets will be disposed of after Monday night.

Several unique features will mark this dinner as a memorable one. It will bring together as speakers ministers from practically every denomination in the city. They will be given four minutes each in which to tell of the relationship of their particular denomination to the work and life of Dr. Lacy. A signal, with its red and green, will begin and end their four-minute addresses, and while none will exceed the time limit, there will be no limit to speed, the faster talkers having the advantage.

Besides ministers, Governor Clifford Walker and Mayor Walter A. Sims will make brief addresses and, as the orator of the evening, a brief address will be made by Honorable Ben A. Ruffin, of Richmond, Va. Mr. Ruffin is a polished speaker, a prominent business man of Richmond and a vice president and director of the International Lions club. He will speak on "Lion to Lion—Welcome to Richmond." Dr. Lacy himself will be the valedictorian.

Orchestra music and special musical numbers will be rendered, among them solos by Ernest Allen and Mrs. Samuel Metcalf, accompanied by J. Gordon Moore. A quartet will also render some improvised music.

Fried chicken, served in family style, and "lion" steak will be the menu feature. While lion steak is an innovation on the menu at the Ansley, it is understood the Lions club of this city has made arrangements for this delectable meat through the International Lions club.

"It is not going to be an evening of sadness—although we are saddened at Dr. Lacy's departure from the city—but an evening of jovial, congenial,

SIMS HEADQUARTERS FOR PIEDMONT HOTEL

Mayor Walter A. Sims, candidate for congress, announced Saturday that he will open campaign headquarters about July 1 in the Piedmont hotel. He stated also that he will probably begin an active speaking campaign early in July and stump every county in the fifth district.

The mayor said his campaign quarters will be located on the second floor at the hotel and a manager and corps of skilled workers will be in charge. The personnel of his organization will be announced later, he stated.

Mayor Sims stated that he has received assurance of support from every section of the district and is confident of the results in the primary in September.

Evangelist Opens Revival Meetings On River Car Line

Evangelist James A. Dennis, who attracted widespread interest in this city last year during a revival campaign in which many unique Biblical questions were preached on, will begin a series of meetings in the tent pitched at Simaville stop, on the river car line, Sunday night at 7:45 o'clock.

One of the features of Evangelist Dennis' meetings is the cordial invitation he extends to every one to interrupt him during his discourse to ask any questions they see fit, or to write out their questions and drop them in a "query box" he places at the entrance to the tent. The inquirers do not have to sign these queries.

Some of the subjects the preacher will touch during his present campaign will be: "Is it essential to be a member of the church to be saved?" "Christian Unity"; "God's Wisdom and Man's Folly," etc.

The tent is located in a cool spot and will be a delightful place to spend the hot evenings, and we will try to do everyone good who attends," the evangelist said Saturday.

JUDGE STEPHENS ASKS REELECTION

Asking support on the record of his first full term on the bench of the Georgia court of appeals, Judge Alex W. Stephens has made formal announcement of his candidacy for reelection. Judge Stephens is well known as a jurist and asks support of his ticket on his past work as judge.

Judge Stephens makes the following statement in regard to his candidacy: "I have endeavored to do careful and painstaking work, disposing of all cases assigned to me within the time allowed by law, and with the dispatch consistent with just and correct decisions and the duty which the law imposes of writing opinions which create precedents.

"The work and time necessary to the disposition of a case very greatly in proportion to the gravity and importance of the questions involved. I am serving my first full term as judge, and hope that my record and experience on the bench will be regarded by the people of Georgia as entitling me to the endorsement by reelection which is usually accorded judicial officers who have properly discharged their duties."

"The support of the voters will be appreciated."

SOFFE TO APPEAL DOPE ACT DECISION

Hooper Alexander, attorney in habeas corpus proceedings brought in federal court to test the constitutionality of the Harrison anti-narcotic law, has announced that an appeal will be filed in the near future from the decision rendered Saturday by Judge Samuel H. Sibley, of the United States court for the northern district of Georgia, in the case of Frank Soffe, prisoner at the United States penitentiary here, and remanded him to the keeping of the warden. Judge Sibley did not pass upon a petition for release on bail for Soffe, pending an appeal in the case. The judge stated that this was properly a matter to be taken up after the appeal was filed, at which time it could be passed upon in proper order by any federal court.

The habeas corpus proceedings were brought by Soffe on behalf of all prisoners convicted under the anti-narcotic law in order to test its constitutionality, and it was known prior to the hearing Saturday that it was the purpose of the litigation to cause the matter before the United States supreme court on appeal in order that that final authority might have the opportunity to pass upon the constitutionality of the act. It was pointed out during the hearing Saturday by Thomas W. Hardwick, former governor and United States senator, in the famous Doremus case the supreme court divided five to four on the question of the constitutionality of the act. Inasmuch as only two of the justices who supported the act are now on the bench, while three of the four minority remain, Mr. Hardwick expressed belief that the law taken there now it will be voided. This would result in freeing thousands of federal prisoners convicted under the act who are now serving sentences in federal prisons.

Many Prisoners Affected.

It is estimated that one-third of the prisoners in the Atlanta penitentiary are convicted under the Harrison law.

Assistant District John W. Henley, answering the habeas corpus proceedings, argued that Soffe had forfeited his right to appeal when no writ of error was filed in the term of court where he was convicted. The proceedings Saturday before Judge Sibley were brief, lasting only half an hour.

Mr. Alexander contended that, in substance, the Harrison act merely provided that it shall be unlawful to sell narcotics to anybody except those who give a written order as a receipt. He argued that the act was unconstitutional in that it would be sufficient to control sale of intoxicating liquors, employment of children or dealing in grain futures, and that no constitutional amendment would be necessary in any one.

Claims of Petitioner.

This following argument by Mr. Hardwick that the law was unconstitutional in that it invaded police rights of states. He cited supreme court decisions in various cases showing that congress cannot assume police power in the different states under pretense of its taxing power or any other assumption.

Mr. Hardwick, basing his argument on the basic clause of the American governmental structure that the state authorities possess powers not expressly forbidden them, whereas the federal authorities possess only those powers expressly granted them, argued that the Harrison act was unconstitutional in that it went outside authority of congress and took over police powers of states.

Dr. Soffe was convicted in Cincinnati upon a plea of guilt to having sold narcotics without having kept duplicate signed orders of purchasers as provided in the second section of the act. He was sentenced to 36 months and began his service on October 27, 1925.

In his petition for freedom on bail, Dr. Soffe set forth that he could not properly push the case and raise the necessary money for its expenses unless he was at liberty. It is understood that at least the initial expenses of the litigation are to be defrayed out of funds subscribed by the many thousands of convicted prisoners under the narcotic act now serving their sentences in various federal prisons of the country.

MRS. MARY P. HATCHER FUNERAL AT CORINTH

The body of Mrs. Mary P. Hatcher, 70, of Brookhaven, Ga., mother of Dr. Newdigate M. Owensby, well known Atlanta physician and step-mother of Cliff Hatcher, local attorney, who died Saturday morning at a private hospital, will be taken today to Corinth, Ga., for funeral services and interment.

A native of Grantville, Ga., Mrs. Hatcher has spent the greater part of her life in Marietta and Atlanta and was the daughter of one of Georgia's most prominent families. Her father was Dr. Newdigate Moreland, a prominent surgeon, who took an active part in the war between the states.

In 1880 she married John Owensby, who died in 1904, leaving her with one son. In 1907 she married Cliff Hatcher, of Marietta, who died in 1919. Since that time Mrs. Hatcher has made her home with Dr. Owensby at Brookhaven.

In addition to her sons here, she is survived by one other step-son, George Hatcher, of Macon.

8-Year Poetess Takes a Wallop At Older Folks

Sister, brother, mother dear, Father, baby, nurse, All help to make our happy home Better, if not worse.

That verse is the product of the pen and ink and paper of eight-year-old Emily Evans, daughter of Colonel and Mrs. S. N. Evans, of 38 East Fourteenth street.

The lines first appeared in the column of Franklin P. Adams in the New York World. Then Life picked up the verse with a warning to Nathalia Crane that she had better "look to her laurels."

By seeing her verse in Life and in the World, Emily has experienced a thrill which thousands of would-be poets strive for as regularly as the sun comes up. And E. P. A. doesn't print anything that isn't good. Neither does Life, as is evidenced by the number of rejection slips sent out by the editors of the two magazines.

Emily writes "when the spirit moves her," she says. While she posed for the picture which accompanied this article, Emily was busy framing these lines, which she presented to a blushing Constitution reporter:

I went into the hay field One midsummer's night; Look! What is that I see? Sh-sh-sh, 'tis a sprite. See it dance, around, around, around. See it dance on the hay field ground.

These lines do not compare with her poetical description of home life, but it must be considered that Emily wrote them while she was posing for a photographer who insisted on blowing off a terrible charge of powder every three or four minutes.

Emily will enter the third grade of the Tenth street school next term, where she is one of the institution's most brilliant little students. A rudely-complexioned, fair-haired child, Emily would hardly be suspected of possessing such tremendous poetical tendencies.

Ever since she has been able to support a pen in her little hand, Emily has been writing. She has many poems, the majority of which have to do with things of particular interest to a girl of her age. Every now and then, however, as may be seen in the verse which leads this story, young Miss Evans takes a well-aimed crack at the older generation.

Christian Scientist Says Advertisement Misrepresents Body

Editor Constitution: There appeared in your issue of Saturday, June 19, a full six column advertisement, setting forth certain views of Augusta A. Stetson, president of the United States in regard to a recent proclamation made by Mr. Coolidge. In the advertisement Mrs. Stetson quoted profusely from Mary Baker Eddy's copyrighted works, along with her own statements which are unlike the teachings of Mrs. Eddy. Such action tends to adulterate Christian Science, and to misrepresent to the readers of your valued paper the motives and aims of genuine Christian Scientists.

Mrs. Stetson has not been in any way affiliated with the Christian Science movement, or with Christian Scientists since 1909. Furthermore, Christian Scientists, as individuals or as a church body, are in no manner responsible for her advertisements or pronouncements.

BURIAL IN ATLANTA FOR FORMER CORPORAL

Funeral services for James A. Wilson, 25, former corporal in the United States army, who died June 12 at a private hospital in Denver, Col., after an illness of one year, were held Saturday afternoon from the chapel of the H. M. Patterson and Son company. The Rev. F. E. Lanford officiated. Interment was in West View cemetery.

ENGINEERS HONOR MEMORY OF DEAD

Dr. Will H. Houghton, pastor of the Baptist Tabernacle, will deliver the memorial sermon for deceased members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Ladies' auxiliary at the Tabernacle at 4 o'clock this afternoon. It was announced Saturday by Tull C. Waters, chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Atlanta division No. 207—J. A. Manning, H. G. Kitchins and J. J. Anderson; Gate City division, No. 368—H. P. Hancock; Curshaw division No. 696—H. E. Harris, and Better Half division, No. 21—Mrs. L. S. Morris and Mrs. R. Z. Gardner.

Other members of the arrangements committee in addition to Mr. Waters are H. T. Holland and Mrs. Cliff S. Crutfield. Mrs. D. L. Wood will play the organ prelude and this will be followed by a song in which the entire audience will participate. Dr. Houghton will sing a solo and Miss Joyce Smith will recite "Beyond." Other features of the program include the roll call by Mrs. J. E. Mooney, Mrs. C. E. Perkins and Mr. W. T. Thompson; solo, "One Sweetly Solemn Thought," by Mrs. Kate Heard and another song by the congregation. Morgan Blake will offer the invocation.

ONE LIBERTY DAY COSTS PRISONER YEARS FREEDOM

Frank Campbell, 66-year-old trusty at the Atlanta penitentiary, bartered a year of future freedom for one day of immediate liberty on Friday, when he walked away from the prison.

He was captured late Friday by H. G. Moore, of Conley, Ga., who notified officials, and on Saturday Campbell was back at the prison, with about one year of "good time" reduction on his sentence canceled because of his liberty break, according to Warden John W. Snook.

Campbell was acting as water boy for a number of prisoners at penitentiary farm No. 1, when he failed to return on one of his trips for water.

Old Guard Given Beautiful Flag On Philly Visit

The Old Guard of Atlanta won distinction and returned with honors from its trip to Philadelphia where the patriotic old military organization was invited to participate last week in the ceremonies incident to the 160th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

Atlanta's organization attracted attention all along the line of march, and these veterans of the past were applauded constantly. At Valley Forge the Flag Day exercises proved most colorful, and the Old Guard received a beautiful blue flag with thirteen stars in white on both sides, six-pointed. This silk flag adds to the collection of colors so highly prized by the Old Guard, and the full colors will be on exhibition Monday in the big window of Davidson-Paxon-Stokes company, on Whitehall street. This flag was presented by the city of Philadelphia to the Old Guard in token of appreciation for its part in the demonstration.

The rifle team of the Old Guard took seventh place in the list of twenty-one contestants, their total score being only eleven points under the winning team, the score being 472 in a possible 500. The winning team made 483. R. L. Bentall made the high score of 97 in the Old Guard team.

The Old Guard has been invited to parade with Disabled Veterans in Atlanta on Monday, and to participate in the reunion at Marietta on June 26 of the forces of the Blue and Gray.

MARTIN SUMMONS ACCUSED OFFICIAL

Tallahassee, Fla., June 19.—(AP)—Governor John W. Martin announced today that he had summoned M. Martin, Hillsborough county probation officer, to Tallahassee and declined to say whether his conference with the probation officer would be in connection with charges of wrongful treatment of orphanage inmates made in affidavits filed with him by Judge J. C. Darlington, of Tampa, early this week. Governor Martin said he was unable to say when he would be in position to make official comment on the charges.

JUDGE DARLINGTON ACCUSES LASSITER

Tampa, Fla., June 19.—(AP)—Charges that girls were sent to cities in other states, there to be subjected to "slavery conditions," and that young boys were confined in jails for weeks without hearings on charges against them were contained in the form of affidavits and signed statements laid before Governor John W. Martin at Tallahassee early in the week. It became known here today by Judge J. C. Darlington, of the Tampa circuit court, in requesting the chief magistrate to dismiss J. M. Lassiter, Hillsborough county probation officer, from the service.

In addition, Lassiter was charged with having "converted" to his own use funds donated for the purchase of delicacies for orphans in the children's home of Tampa. Judge Darlington, in making known the action taken against Lassiter today, declared that, regardless of what disposition was made of the case by Governor Martin, he would go before the Hillsborough county grand jury Monday with his evidence. He said the juvenile court magistrate charges that in an investigation he conducted himself he found Lassiter conducting a court of his own and that he had several boys in jail against whom no official record of charges had been made.

ATLANTA COMMITTEE TO URGE POSTOFFICE

The committee since the construction of the present building in 1911, as well as the prophecy of the increase anticipated for 1930 and 1940. "In trying to show the growth of Atlanta the committee has used charts which indicate Atlanta's steps forward in ten-year periods. "The growth of Atlanta in population gives a definite reflection of the size of the city. The charts emphasize the fact that the growth in Atlanta's civic and commercial activities far outstrip the growth in population. As a concrete example which the charts and tables show, the increase in Atlanta's postoffice receipts in the last five years has been 25 per cent greater than the increase in the ten-year period before that time. "The same relation will be seen, if the charts are carefully looked at, in all other activities showing the active life of Atlanta in relation to its population. These actual facts, as well as the fact that Atlanta is fast becoming the distribution, commercial and financial center of the south, make it very evident that in the next five years the growth will be double the last ten years and consequently the facilities must be planned on this ever-increasing ratio. "The tables which are to be submitted show that the government rents over 133,000 square feet of floor space at a cost of over $114,000 a year, whereas exclusive of mail, the federal activities using the government-owned building only consume 43,400 square feet of space. "In other words the government is now renting space far in excess of its own needs. "The committee is not attempting to show the crowded condition of the present federal postoffice because authorities themselves are constantly having these matters brought to their attention. The charts and tables when carefully studied reveal many interesting facts regarding the growth of Atlanta now, and the proposed growth for the future, which we hope to present in an editorial, interesting and convincing manner to the proper heads of the treasury and postoffice departments who are supervising and recommending the expenditure of the governmental appropriation. "We are indebted to the Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph company for able assistance and the use of their very carefully worked out figures of future growth which their experts have prepared in charts and tables. "The governmental civic and business agencies in Atlanta have been very magnanimous in cooperating with the committee in every respect in assisting in the preparation of this data and showing before the authorities in Washington resolutions, letters and data showing our needs for federal facilities.

"Respectfully submitted,
J. K. OTTLEY, Chairman,
"Committee for the New Federal Building, Atlanta."

The committee also prepared a special report showing the number of offices, the amount of floor space used and the expense per year in rental which the government now uses in office buildings of Atlanta other than the federal building. This report showed that the government agricultural department uses offices in the Citizens and Southern Bank building, Commercial Exchange building and the Atlanta Trust company, with 3,310 feet of floor space, employing 33 people with a rental of $7,366 a year. The army department uses offices in the Citizens and Southern building, Hurt building, Austell building and at 59 1/2 South Forsyth street with 21,677 feet of floor space, 297 employees and a rental of $27,638. For the United States Veterans bureau the Willis building, 70 East Pine street, is used. It has 20,257 feet of floor space, 168 employees with a rental of $16,635 a year. The office of the Public lands department in the Glen building uses 426 feet of floor space, four employees with a rental of $720 a year. Outside the postoffice, the postal service occupies offices in the Atlanta terminal, Peachtree arcade, Thresher basement, 152 South Forsyth street building and 154 South Forsyth street with floor space of $7,534 square feet, 208 employees with a rental of $62,299 a year. The government uses a total of 133,284 square feet of floor space outside the federal building. In these offices 791 persons are employed and the total rental a year amounts to $114,259. In the federal building the postoffice uses 2,530 square feet of floor space with 551 employees. Government activities in the federal building not including the postoffice together with the number of persons employed in each office are as follows: Bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, 5; assistant postmaster U. S. marine corps, 12; supervisor of radio, 5; U. S. civil service commission, 10; U. S. navy, 9; U. S. marines, 1; chief clerk district attorney, 2; district attorney, 8; secret service, 5. Internal revenue, 28; U. S. marshal, chief deputy and cashier, 10; clerk court of appeals, 7; assistant custodian, 1; interstate commerce commission, 1; district judge, 1; clerk of district court, 12; department of justice continued, 3. Department of immigration, 4; internal revenue, 32; bureau of animal industry, 6; intelligence department, 4; deputy collector of customs, 1; narcotic agents, 7; prohibition director, 12; custodian, special disbursing officer, 1; janitor service, operating building, 24; engineer and helpers, 2.

MISSING WAR HERO FOUND BY MOTHER

seven-year search of a heart-broken but hopeful mother who brooded over the loss of her son to the extent that she saw him living in a vision. Swept by this revelation she expended the scanty means of the family in a nationwide advertising search for her son and followed to an unsuccessful end numerous promising clues. At last, in 1925, seven years after her son was officially declared lost at sea by the navy department, the mother found the man who she asserts is her son in the Illinois asylum where Perry was suffering from complete loss of memory and where he was in an exhausted mental and physical condition. Since the government announced that Perry was lost at sea, it has sent regularly to the family the insurance and benefits carried for the sailor. Even since Perry has been restored the government continues to send these checks but they are not cashed by the family. In the eyes of the government Perry officially is dead although actually he now is an inmate of the government hospital No. 62, at Augusta, recovering his health. Young Perry is a member of the Perry family of Kingland, Ga., which is prominent in that part of the state. One of his uncles is head of a bank in Kingland. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Perry.

Career in Service

Perry enlisted in the navy April 4, 1918, and was sent to Norfolk, Va., for training. Soon after his arrival in Norfolk Perry wrote his parents that he would sail soon on the British oil tanker "Arca," as an emergency member of the naval signal corps assigned to that ship. Perry stated he would be the only American on the ship and that it naturally would be some time before his parents heard from him again. Records of the marine department show that the Arca was lost at sea October 2, 1918, a short time before the armistice was signed. It was stated that virtually all aboard were lost. Soon afterward the navy department informed Mr. and Mrs. Perry that their son was lost at sea in the performance of his duty and began sending the mother insurance and allotment benefits.

Mrs. Perry refused to believe that her son was lost and later declared that she had been informed in a vision that her son was still alive. She advertised extensively in newspapers throughout the United States for information concerning any man answering the description of her son. Numerous answers were received from different parts of the country and all clues were followed by the mother but with fruitless effect. The family finances were depleted in the search but the mother never gave up hope.

Government rehabilitation stations and hospitals as well as asylums were visited, including the one in Augusta and another in Washington, but the missing son was not found.

Found in Asylum

Mrs. Perry received a letter in March, 1925, from an inmate of the Illinois asylum stating there was a man there who resembled the description of her son. She visited the asylum at Kankakee and found there a man who she immediately declared was her son. In the first visit the man, who was registered as Thomas W. Perry, address and history unknown, failed to recognize Mrs. Perry as his mother. Two weeks later Mrs. Perry returned and the man at once greeted her affectionately and called her "mother" and recalled incidents of his childhood.

Perry was in poor physical condition and also was suffering with a mental affliction when found by his mother in the Illinois institution but one of the queerest things about his life was his possession of a pronounced foreign accent in his speech.

Records of the Kankakee institution showed that Perry had been picked up on the streets of Danville, Ill., June 24, 1921, suffering from loss of memory and in an exhausted physical and mental condition. He was sent temporarily to the Soldiers' home. As nothing but the name of the man was known, and as it could not be shown that he was a former soldier or sailor, he was transferred to the Kankakee institution where he was found three years later by Mrs. Perry.

Identified by Family. Through the efforts of state officials Perry was released from the Illinois asylum March 16, 1926, and was taken to Kingland, Ga., where he was identified positively by his father, two brothers and three sisters. He remained in Kingland with the Perry family and his physical and mental condition improved rapidly. He gained 20 pounds in weight while there.

Paul Miller, post commander of the American Legion at Columbus, Ga., became interested in the case and called it to the attention of the Veterans' bureau in Atlanta. The bureau began an investigation of the case of Perry and as a result he was sent to government hospital at Augusta on May 24 for treatment. This treatment will continue until Perry's status is recognized officially by the government and his official discharge from the navy is issued.

Officials of the Veterans' bureau in Atlanta are at work in efforts to complete a positive identification of Perry by means of finger prints and other government records taken at the time of his enlistment. In the meantime the mother and other members of the family visit the man who they believe to be the missing son and are certain that government records will establish his identity beyond doubt.

SENATE ACCUSED OF FILIBUSTERING

The Haugen bill is to industrialize America at the expense of agriculture," he said, "and if this brings about a bitter class struggle in a nation which has always been dedicated to the principle of equal rights to all and special privileges to none, the blood will not be on the farmers' hands." Mr. Coudage, elected upon a platform which contained a solemn pledge to give agriculture equality with other industry and it was not the fault of the farm organizations of the country if they do not conjoin to private life every republican member of congress who may violate that pledge. And in this heaving to the line we will not overlook those who profess to be friends of the farmer but who upon the pretext or another vote against the only measure that promises genuine relief.

"In the meantime, the apparent willingness of certain democratic leaders to coin the present agonies of the farmer into political advantage will avail them nothing. The democratic platform contains a straight from the shoulder pledge to support a corporation or commission to handle the surplus problem and this pledge must be redeemed before the democratic party will have any claims upon the farmer. In other words, the old axiom that he who invokes equity must come to court with clean hands applies in this instance. Furthermore, we desire to remind those democratic leaders that should the heartless ultimatum of Secretary Mellon drive the farmers of the country into a nationwide revolt against the protective system, this does not necessarily mean that they must seek to accomplish these ends through the democratic party, for in these premises there is more than one road that leads to Rome.

"The situation from the standpoint of both parties was admirably put by Senator Caraway (democrat, Arkansas) the other day when he said that in the coming showdown in the senate of the second day of the league assembly every vote from the industrial states to be cast against them, while on the other hand they expect every vote from the agricultural states to be cast for them. And the member of congress from an agricultural state who votes against agriculture in the darkest hour it has ever known will have an opportunity to explain his action to the farmers of his state in the coming election."

EPWORTH PAGEANT TO OPEN SESSION AT MACON TODAY

Macon, Ga., June 19.—(P)—A pageant depicting the history and progress of the Epworth league in Georgia during the past 25 years will be given Sunday afternoon on the campus of Wesleyan college as the program of the second day of the league assembly of the south Georgia Methodist conference. The pageant has been written and is directed by Miss Mammie Milner Quintman, Ga. More than 100 young people will take part in the pageant, which will be given in the open air. Mrs. Alice M. Twilley, widely known evangelist of Tampa, Fla., will give two addresses at the main sessions of the assembly tomorrow. She will speak at the morning and evening meetings. G. E. Barnhill, Glenwood, Ga., will lead the devotion at the sunrise services Sunday morning, beginning the second day of the assembly. Approximately 400 young people of south Georgia arrived today and registered at the college. A banquet in the Wesleyan college dining hall tonight was the opening feature of the program. Short speeches were made by various assembly speakers and representatives of the unions attending the meetings. The assembly will continue here through next Friday night.

ANGELICAN CHURCH DEBATES CHANGES

By JOHN STEELE.
(Copyright, 1936, by The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

London, June 10.—English bishops are still sitting behind closed doors at Lambeth palace, debating a question on which rests the whole future of the Anglican church and, incidentally, whether the Protestant reformation in England is to be overturned.

The technical question is whether a reservation of the sacrament is to be allowed—that is, whether the bread, consecrated at the celebration of the holy eucharist, shall be saved and kept on the altar to be reverenced as the host or body of Christ—but this is only an excuse for a decisive struggle between the Anglican Catholics and the Protestant party within the church.

If the matter is fought to the end, there can be little doubt who will win, for the Anglo-Catholics today are in a great majority in the church. Both the archbishops of Canterbury and York and a majority of the bishops, including the most important, such as those of London, Winchester and Oxford, belong to the Catholic party, while the bishops of Manchester and Birmingham are leading the Protestant party.

This is the first time the Catholic party has come into the open in a fight for a Roman doctrine, and the present situation draws attention to the growth of the Catholic party in recent years. In addition to the archbishops and bishops, a number of the clergy are members of the party which claims, probably correctly, the great majority of laymen at all interested in religion. The strength of the movement is shown by the fact that there are more Protestant monks and nuns in the English church than in the time of the reformation, and mass is said regularly in many churches and cathedrals.

In all except recognition of the pope as supreme ruler of the church, this party of the Anglican church accepts the Roman doctrine, and this has gone so far that when traveling in Catholic countries on the continent many English bishops and clergymen submit themselves to the Roman bishops of the diocese. The aim of many of these Anglo-Catholics is complete absorption by the Roman Catholic church, while others, probably the majority, hope to see the English church become a unit in the communion of Rome, as do some eastern churches, which preserve their own distinctive government and local rites.

Rains Follow Long Fasting And Prayers

Charlotte, N. C., June 10.—(AP)—

The fasting and prayers of thousands of persons apparently answered, steady rains fell over the North Carolina and South Carolina Piedmont today, breaking the long disastrous drought.

Many localities had no rain for two months past, and at Chester, S. C., rain fell today for the first time since early in April. Citizens there met twice daily in prayer this week and many had resorted to fasting.

Crop Damage Enormous. Damage to growing crops, though unestimated, has been enormous. Farmers hoped the rains came in time to insure the maturity of cotton and corn which in some sections had not yet come out of the ground though planted several weeks ago. In the tobacco belt the crop conditions were helped improved as a result of the rain.

Over most sections tonight the weather was cool and skies overcast. The forecast was for more rain during the week-end.

The first rain of consequence since April fell at Greenwood, S. C., today, and was not general and many sections of the county were still parched. However, indications were rain would come within a few hours.

Rain in North Carolina. Heavy rain fell over the tobacco district of North Carolina virtually all day long. Raleigh, Winston-Salem and high point reporting hard rain, and heavy rain over the entire state.

High in the mountains at Asheville sufficient rain has fallen for most crops. The drought in the mountain region of North Carolina has been a water shortage relieved by the recent rain.

There were generous rains in Spartanburg, Columbia, and in the vicinity of Greenville, S. C. today.

ROBBERS ROBBED BY STOREKEEPER

Columbus, Ga., June 10.—(AP)—

After two local business concerns had been held up and robbed by gunmen here tonight, the highwaymen were put to rout by the proprietor of a third place who engaged one of the robbers in a pitched pistol battle, in which one was injured. City and county police soon afterward arrested three Port Benning soldiers. The three places were held up within a period of 45 minutes.

City National Buys Two Miami Banks. Miami, Fla., June 10.—(AP)—Announcement was made tonight by the City National Bank and Trust company that it had absorbed by purchase the Miami Bank and Trust company and the Commercial Bank of Miami.

The town and the highway leading to the base of Kennesaw will be elaborately decorated. There will be a parade of the town and the highway leading to the base of Kennesaw will be elaborately decorated. Britain, France And Italy Plan Spoil Division. London, June 10.—(AP)—Conventions of the utmost importance are going on in Paris between France, Italy and Great Britain, which may result in a new alignment of powers in the Mediterranean with definite spheres of influence assigned to the respective powers.

There are expert seamstresses and exclusive New York shops where dainty ensembles and pretty gowns can be had for the asking, and the price. But a bride gown is a woman's own interest, and it was to be seen that the bride's gown was a masterpiece of skill and art.

Partition of Abyssinia. About the same time the Right Hon. Sir R. W. Graham signed an important agreement which meant in effect the partition of Abyssinia. The British and French had obtained the right to exploit the eastern and southern half of Abyssinia while Great Britain, with an eye on the water rights for irrigation in the Sudan, secured similar rights in the north and west.

There is no doubt that Premier Mussolini's threats to seize Africa and his spectacular voyage to Tripoli had the desired effect of frightening the British into accepting the British terms for the partition of Abyssinia. The British and French had obtained the right to exploit the eastern and southern half of Abyssinia while Great Britain, with an eye on the water rights for irrigation in the Sudan, secured similar rights in the north and west.

Bue and Gray Leaders Plan To Attend Marietta Reunion

Marietta, Ga., June 10.—(Special)

Commanders-in-chief of the two national organizations of Blue and Gray, the Grand Army of the Republic and the United Confederate Veterans, are expected to meet on a Civil War battle field for the first time in history tonight, when Marietta will celebrate the 62nd anniversary of the battle of Kennesaw mountain, fought at her doors in 1864.

General M. R. Vance, of Little Rock, Ark., head of the United Confederate Veterans, has accepted Marietta's invitation and will be the guest of Colonel J. J. Lyness, Confederate Veterans' General John B. Inman, of Springfield, Ill., commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, and General William P. Stokely, of the army engineer corps, now stationed in Atlanta.

"Whether or not congress will make the appropriation for the Kennesaw park largely dependent upon the interest shown by the public," said Colonel Stokely Saturday.

The $5,000 voted by congress for surveying the property largely will be devoted to a preliminary survey of the terrain. We shall first prepare a map showing the acreage required and the points of interest which probably will be marked by monuments. It will be necessary to make some historical research, and an estimate of cost must be prepared.

"I understand that many ancient landmarks still exist, including the old Kennesaw fort, which was naturally well preserved. General Leonidas K. Polk, of the Confederate army, was killed by a shell on Cheat Mountain, and the Confederate army, including many G. A. R. men from northern states, will be present.

Death Calls as Bride-To-Be Finishes Her Wedding Gown. (By Leased Wire To The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Hempstead, L. I., N. Y., June 10.—For two weeks Mrs. Marie Carolyn Willson, of Hempstead, had been busy with her needle.

There are expert seamstresses and exclusive New York shops where dainty ensembles and pretty gowns can be had for the asking, and the price. But a bride gown is a woman's own interest, and it was to be seen that the bride's gown was a masterpiece of skill and art.

Partition of Abyssinia. About the same time the Right Hon. Sir R. W. Graham signed an important agreement which meant in effect the partition of Abyssinia. "The Chocolate Soldier," tuneful, colorful, brimming over with comedy, is already for its first presentation Monday night at the Atlanta theater—the first production of the second season of Atlanta's own permanent comic opera organization.

Costume rehearsals of the last day or two give promise of a performance without a rough spot, as snappy, as finished, as complete in every detail as though the show had been running a month. Louise Hunter, as Nadina, has been singing "My Hero" and the "Letter Song" as though inspired; the two new leading men, Arthur Burckley and Louis Templeman, are thoroughly at home in their respective roles of Alexis and Bumerli; Lou Powers, the leading comedian, is having a great time with the part of Colonel Popoff, the Bulgarian flit; while Anne Yago, the contralto; Francis Tyler, the basso, and Mary Patterson, the only Georgia girl among the principals, are doing wonders with their roles. The final dress rehearsal Saturday night was almost a first-night performance in its smoothness.

Is "Good Show."

There is nothing "operatic" about "The Chocolate Soldier," except the high quality of the music by Oscar Straus. It may be called "light opera," "comic opera," or "musical comedy," but it is what the theater folk call a "rattling good show," with singing and dancing and comedy dialogue and queer situations. The scene is in the Balkans, while one of the usual wars is under way. The first act introduces Nadina in a fetching suit of pajamas, and the third act presents a Bulgarian wedding scene that gives the ballet and chorus a big opportunity for display of costumes.

"The Chocolate Soldier" has been given several times in Atlanta by excellent companies, making its first tour in the wake of "The Merry Widow" and closely rivaling the Lehar work in popular favor. The male chorus has a big chance in the many ringing military choruses, while the girls have several charming numbers. The ballet will give several feature dances, and there isn't a serious moment in the whole show.

Ising System Installed.

That the first night audience will fill the theater to the last row of the gallery is indicated by the advance sale of seats. Blocks of from six to ten seats for parties of friends have been taken by scores of patrons; out-of-town theatergoers have telegraphed for numerous reservations; Atlanta

'Chocolate Soldier' Called Best Show Ever in Atlanta

Lewis Haase, general manager of the Municipal Opera association, whose productions of musical comedy for the summer begin on Monday with the premiere of "The Chocolate Soldier," witnessed a dress rehearsal of that show Saturday.

"Even I, after hearing rehearsals for weeks, was delightfully surprised," said Mr. Haase.

"The production of 'The Chocolate Soldier,' is the best entertainment I have heard in many a long day. I am certain that, as soon as the public performances begin on Monday, all of Atlanta is going to sit up and take notice.

"The chorus is, beyond question, the youngest, best-looking, best-singing and liveliest I have ever seen in any city or in any show. That's strong, but I mean it.

"The ballet is going to be an astounding revelation. No more beautiful dancing ensemble has been seen than they give at the beginning of the third act.

"And at the rehearsal the principals really let themselves go for the first time. Louise Hunter, glorious. Arthur Burckley, the tenor, filled the Atlanta theater with the resonant power of his voice. And Louis Templeman, the baritone—he's a wow.

"Then, with glorious costumes and stage settings—all brand new—that are wonderfully effective, Atlanta may be prepared for the greatest show she has seen in years."

Mr. Haase has, for many years, been manager of the Atlanta theater and has brought many great road attractions here. For still more years, too many to mention, he has been in the thick of the theatrical business. So, his word means a lot. Weigh its value and then consider this closing remark of his:

"I've seen many and many a Broadway success, running for many months in New York, which wasn't as good a show or as fine a production as Atlanta is to see all next week, here in the Atlanta theater."

Historic Park on Site of Peachtree Disposal Plant Sought by Leaders of Sewer Bond Issue Committee

City To Be Asked To Give
tree Creek Disposal Plant For Recreation Ground.

With initial steps looking toward an elaborate sewer development for Atlanta already taken, leaders among those charged with the responsibility of the expenditure of the sewerage part of the city bond issue, have turned attention towards assuring establishment of a proposed historic park at the present site of the Peachtree disposal plant, it being generally accepted that the disposal plant must be removed from this location.

City council Monday will be asked to ratify a recommendation of its sewer committee looking towards appropriation of a $25,000 fund to begin at once a triangular survey of Atlanta and its environs which has for its ultimate aim establishment of a great central disposal plant on the Chattahoochee where the Peachtree creek and Proctor creek disposal plants will be combined.

When this is done, the city will be asked to turn over to the parks department of the city government the 125 acres now owned by the city for a park, and property owners along both banks of the creek from Peachtree road to North Side drive have expressed willingness to deed to the city strips to make a continuous park extending from Peachtree road to North Side drive.

Chairman White Approves.

Park officials were enthusiastic over the prospects of obtaining the site of the new park, where one of the bloodiest engagements of the civil war took place in the battle of Peachtree creek.

John A. White, chairman of the parks committee, stated that the site is ideally located to complete the circle of recreational centers around Atlanta, and is in line with the policy of the parks department to secure additional and valuable park sites.

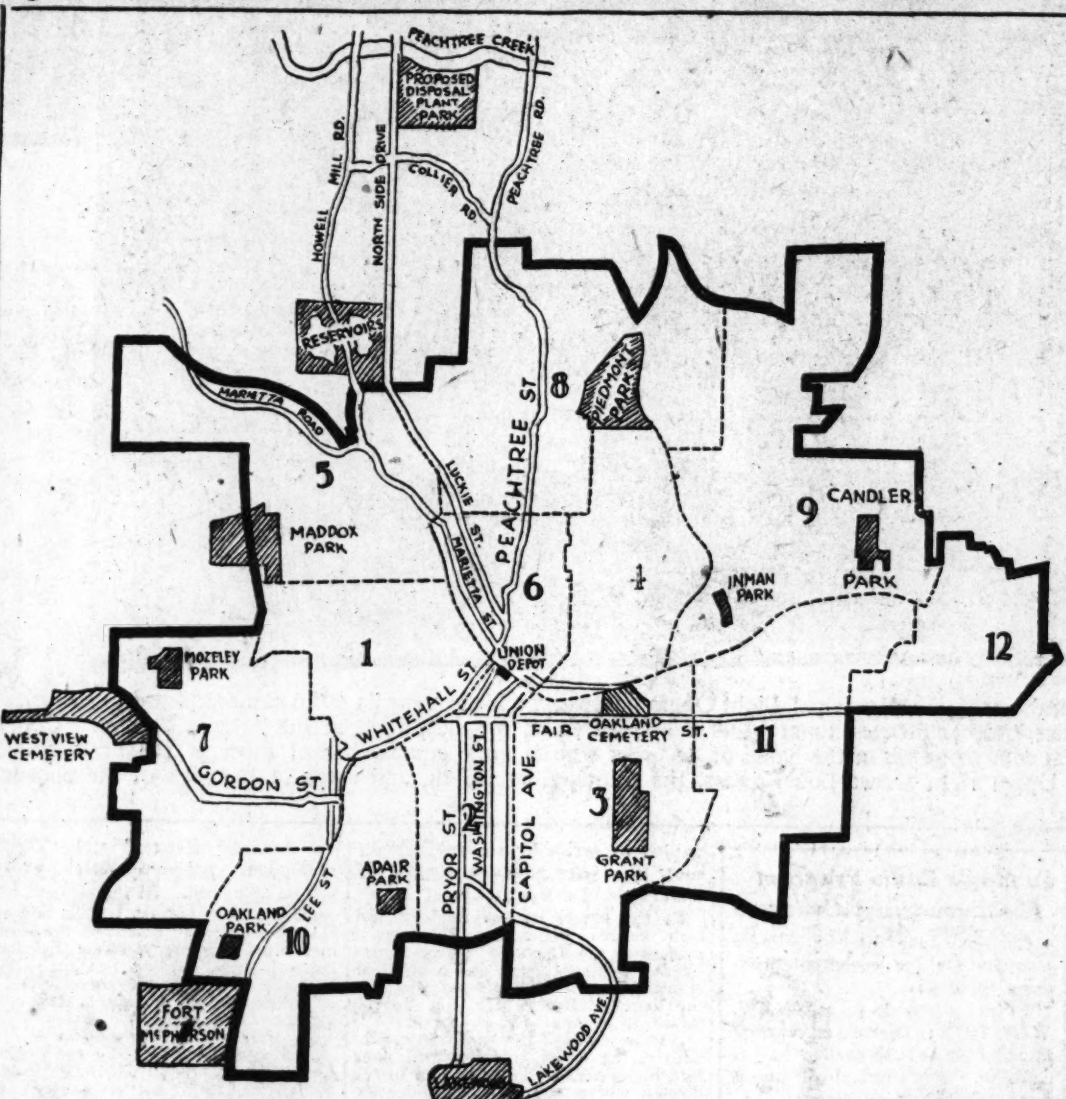

"The city could not do a better thing than to establish a great park at this point, thus fixing another memorial to the valor of Confederate dead who gave their lives to the lost cause," Mr. White said. "I heartily approve of the proposal on account of the historic value if for no other reason, but I am doubly in favor of it when I realize that a great recreational center here would mean so much to the city, as completing the 'circle of parks' around Atlanta."

L. L. Wallis, superintendent of parks and playgrounds, declared that the project has his hearty support because "Atlanta needs a large recreational center in this vicinity."

The proposal of the new park was first advanced by Henderson Hallman, chairman of the sewer committee of the bond commission, at an inspection of the Peachtree creek disposal plant on June 4. The inspection was made in order that members of the bond commission, the sewer committee of council and city construction chiefs might become familiar with the condition of sewers and the large amounts of sewage city throws into Peachtree creek daily because the disposal plant is too small to handle the refuse.

In discussing the removal of the plant and the consolidation of the Proctor and the Peachtree disposal plants, Mr. Hallman mentioned the historic value of the land and proposed a new city park, the land being

Map showing Atlanta's park system with location of proposed new city park on the city's 125-acre tract on Peachtree creek disposal plant, which on account of the rapid residential development of that section will probably be removed with the sewerage extension plan authorized by the city bond issue.

This park will complete the circuit of parks and public places around the city, all of these being shown in this map.

The corporate limits of the city are shown in the heavy black lines around the ward numbers. All of these parks are now connected by a chain of splendid drives around the city, the proposed disposal plant park being directly on the 18-mile North Side drive, which extends from Luckie street all the way to the Chattahoochee river. It is only a short distance from Peachtree road and property owners on both sides of the creek have offered land along the creek to connect the park with Peachtree road.

This property lies beautifully, abounding in hills and valleys, with great forests of original timber, and Superintendent Wallis, of the city's park and playgrounds, says that Chairman Henderson Hallman, of the sewer committee of the bond commission, is correct in the statement that this can easily be made one of the most beautiful parks in the south.

MADDEN PLANNING BATTLE ON EARLY END OF CONGRESS

Chairman of Appropriations Committee Declares
He Will Oppose Setting
Any Definite Date.

Washington, June 19.—(AP)—Notice has been served on republican leaders in the house by Chairman Madden of the appropriations committee that he will attempt to defeat any move to set a definite date for the adjournment of congress in the immediate future.

Announcing his stand after leaders had agreed tentatively on adjournment June 30, Representative Madden said he desired to have the second deficiency bill, to be reported by his committee next week, enacted into a law before adjournment on any specific day was decided upon.

Insists on Action.

He also asserted he believed that congress should not wind up its work and go home until it had disposed of the rivers and harbors bill and a farm relief measure.

"The second deficiency bill contains appropriations for a number of public buildings throughout the country," he said. "If a definite adjournment date is set, and some member is disappointed in not receiving funds for a building, he may kill the whole bill by a filibuster."

"For this reason, I feel that all items in the bill will be endangered unless it is passed by both houses before it is definitely decided when congress will break up and go home."

Madden, who represents a Chicago district, has been active in support of the Illinois river development in the rivers and harbors bill. In announcing his position on adjournment, he said that he believed the senate should act upon the measure

BEAUTY WINNER IN PHILADELPHIA TOURNEY MARRIES

Philadelphia, June 19.—(AP)—Annette M. Jackson, "Miss Philadelphia" in 1925 but later disqualified as an entry in the Atlantic City beauty pageant and Ormond W. Downes, Jr., of Haddonfield, N. J., were married unexpectedly today at Elkton, Md.

The former Miss Jackson, who is 18, had been engaged for several months and the wedding date had been set for August.

Downes is a nephew of the late Duke Downes, former banking commissioner of Maryland. His parents live in Denton, Md.

Miss Jackson was disqualified for the pageant when it was alleged she had signed a professional contract.

SHERIFF IS SHOT IN LIQUOR RAID; THREE MEN FLEE

Hart County Stirred by Wounding of High Officer—
Posse Seeks Alleged Bootlegger.

Hartwell, Ga., June 19.—(Special).—Sheriff A. Britt Brown, of Hart county, is suffering from a serious wound in the abdomen, while half a dozen officers are scouring the vicinity near Lavonia for Rutledge Smith, alleged bootlegger, charged with the shooting.

The trouble is said to have occurred near the home of Smith early tonight when Sheriff Brown and Deputy Sheriff Kay attempted to capture an automobile laden with liquor. The car was occupied by two unidentified white men, who fled when the shooting began, according to reports.

The deputy brought the wounded officer to town and attending physicians say he has a slight chance to recover. A posse was quickly formed, but no trace was found of the missing man.

Sheriff Brown is widely known and has been active in curbing run traffic in Hart county.

RELIGIOUS MEET FORMALLY OPENS IN CHICAGO TODAY

Catholic Dignitaries and Pilgrims Overrun Chicago
Congress Ceremonies.

BY EARL M. JOHNSON.

Chicago, June 19.—As the chiming of the church of Notre Dame de Chicago struck the hour of midnight, a procession of acolytes wearing their bright red cassocks moved slowly across the courtyard, marking the official opening of the 28th international eucharistic congress of the Catholic church.

Quietly, and with all the dignity of old world tradition, these boys, followed by his eminence, Allessius Cardinal Charost, of France, were performing the first of a series of ceremonies in which 1,000,000 pilgrims from all corners of the earth will take part.

As celebrant of the impressive pontifical high mass the old French cardinal wore vestments of cloth of gold which shone richly in the candlelight of the big chapel.

Thousands Line Streets.

Hushed thousands lined the streets in the vicinity of Notre Dame, but only a few could hope to attend mass inside the church. Only a few hundred could hear the soft tones of the organ or the choir intoning the "Kyrie."

It seemed to be enough for them that they were near and they remained outside, some kneeling in the streets during the brief ceremony.

Cardinal Charost, standing before the altar, bowed his head and repeated the centuries-old verse: "I will go unto the altar of God, to God Whom I seek."

Five hours later, just as the sun was coming up out of Lake Michigan, solemn high masses were to be celebrated in 353 churches of the Chicago archdiocese.

Ports Given Rates In South Atlantic Equal to North's

Shipping Board Announces Approval of Pact Among Steamship Companies in Southeast.

20-YEAR FIGHT COMES TO END

Shippers in Middle West And Southwestern Territory Now Can Use Nearest Port.

On freight rates for cargoes from the Atlantic ports for United Kingdom and continental European ports will in future be as low as from New York and other North Atlantic ports.

This result of a 20-year fight to end the preferential rates which the northern ports have enjoyed was realized last week when the shipping board announced that it had approved a rate agreement entered into between steamship companies operating from the South Atlantic ports, by which it is provided that for traffic originating in central freight association territory the ocean rates shall not be lower, but shall equal, the current rates from North Atlantic ports for the same destinations.

This action removes a gross inequality which has existed for half a century in favor of the northern ports.

Hitherto the northern rates have been much lower than those from southern ports that a shipper, even in Chattanooga, which is less than 450 miles from Savannah, found it cheaper to pay the railroad freight rate for the 1,000-mile haul to New York, than it was to pay the smaller railroad rates to Savannah, in order to enjoy the lower ocean freight rates from New York.

The new agreement, however, which makes ocean freight rates the same from either northern or southern ports, will allow shippers throughout the entire middle west and southwestern territory to take advantage of the shorter railroad haul and ship their goods from Savannah, Brunswick, Charleston, Jacksonville, or other southern ports, at a corresponding development in business and industry in the regions affected.

The agreement for equalized rates, it is stated, has been signed on behalf of the American Palmetto Line, Atlantic and Gulf Shipping company, Trost, Plant and LeForte, and J. A. Vandollen. It affects all shipments from South Atlantic ports to the United Kingdom, continental Europe, Pacific, Scandinavian, Portuguese, Spanish, Mediterranean and Adriatic, Black Sea and Levant ports.

EDOUARD HERRIOT LINES UP CABINET

Tentative List Is Proposed for Presentation to Doumergue—Caillaux
Not Included.

Paris, June 19.—After unceasing labor since 5 a. m., Edouard Herriot succeeded tonight in lining up a tentative cabinet to supplant the Briand government.

Later in the night, Herriot proposed to present President Doumergue with the following ministerial list:

President of the council and foreign minister, M. Herriot; minister of justice, Senator René Renoult; minister of interior, Deputy Camille Chautemps; minister of finance, Deputy Francois Pieter; minister of war, Yvon Faillier; minister of public works, Senator Anatole de Monzie; minister of marine, Jacques Dumetel; minister of public instruction, Edouard Bladier.

The proposed ministers were chosen mainly from among the radicals and socialists. Pieter is the only moderate and chief interest attaches to him because of the difficult task confronting any finance minister. He was Caillaux's choice for the post and his selection makes it virtually certain that Caillaux himself will not receive an appointment.

Pieter was elected to the chamber in 1924 to represent Corsica. He is now as a keen student of finance and has made several brilliant speeches in the chamber of deputies on the subject of finance.

BIG COLLECTIONS TO BOOST SURPLUS PAST $300,000,000

Amount Now in Sight for U. S. Treasury Declared
Far in Excess of Official Estimates.

Washington, June 19.—(AP)—Big collections of income taxes for this quarter reported to the treasury today boosted the prospective surplus for this fiscal year, ending June 30, to more than $300,000,000—far beyond the official estimate.

This is the largest surplus since 1924 when the year was closed with a margin of $505,000,000 and comes on the heels of a heavy reduction in the income tax rate which was effective on both quarterly payments this year.

Despite the recent slash in rates, income tax collections for the June 15 installment already amount to more than $2,000,000 above last June with indications that the total will be well over the collection of $377,000,000 received at this quarterly payment a year ago.

No Tax Cut Promised.

In the face of the prosperous condition of the treasury high administration officials refused to concede today that another early tax reduction was in prospect. It will be impossible, they said, to gauge the real effect of the lower rate provided by the new revenue law and of the expenditures authorized for next year for some time.

The administration had figured the recent tax reduction would cut the surplus for this year below $200,000,000. While income tax returns have exceeded those of last year under the higher rate, receipts from the miscellaneous tax fell considerably below last year's. Most of these taxes were repealed by the new revenue law.

$2,331,829,988 Collected.

For the first eleven months of this fiscal year, up to June 1, internal revenue collections totaled $2,331,829,988, an increase of $195,481,478 over this period last year. Of this increase income tax receipts accounted for $141,105,000.

Receipts from individual and partnership returns in May showed an increase of $13,751,413 over May, 1925, but corporate tax collections for May amounted to $22,008,238, or a decrease of $2,727,415 from last May.

FOUR ARE KILLED IN BATTLE WAGED IN WEST VIRGINIA

Bluefield, W. Va., June 19.—(AP)—Three men and a woman were killed in a free for all fight tonight at Lindsey, Mingo county. The victims were Tennessee Carter, George Hardin, Sidney, national secretary and vice commander, will respond. The principal address will be delivered at this session by Mrs. A. McClure, of Kansas City, Mo., of the American War Mothers' association. The convention will continue through Friday, adjourning as the veterans' convention ends. Baseball Game Is Stopped O'DONNELL GREETS RUTH, TOSSES FIRST BALL As Umpire Greets Cardinal

Chicago, June 19.—(AP)—Patrick Cardinal O'Donnell, primate of Ireland, attended the New York-Chicago baseball game today and stopped the contest.

Wearing a long black overcoat turned up about his throat and with a soft black hat pulled low over his eyes, he faced the cold Chicago wind with fortitude and remained for the entire game.

Cardinal O'Donnell, introduced to the great American game in New York, seemed to enjoy his experience today hugely. He came with a party of distinguished clergy and hundreds of fans tried to reach his side to greet him.

Babe Ruth was one of the first to salute the prelate and knelt and kissed his ring. Doffing his hat, Cardinal O'Donnell threw out the first ball while the band struck up "The Weir of the Green." Then as an after thought the band decided to do more

MAMMOTH PARADE SET FOR TUESDAY

Elaborate Entertainment Program To Feature
Five-Day Session at Ansley Hotel.

BY ALBERT HARDY, JR.

More than 5,000 delegates, alternates and visitors are expected to attend the sixth annual national convention of the Disabled American Veterans of the World War convention which convenes at 10 o'clock Monday morning at the Ansley hotel.

Throughout Friday night and Saturday trains, automobiles, and other means of transportation, brought to Atlanta streams of men who fought on foreign battle fields.

Headquarters of the convention at the Ansley was thronged with Atlantans Saturday, eager to do anything and everything to make the "boys" really enjoy themselves, thus in a small way, expressing their appreciation for men of America who left behind them their friends and loved ones to give their all if necessary for America.

Final plans for an elaborate entertainment as well as for one of the most successful conventions ever held by the veterans have been completed under direction of the Woodrow Wilson Chapter No. 1 of the organization, located in Atlanta, official host to the convention.

Delegations Arrive.

Among delegations arriving Saturday were those from Dallas, Texas; Detroit, Denver, Muscogee, Okla., Salt Lake City, Chicago, Cincinnati, and other cities. A riotous row and bumble corps sounded off Saturday afternoon announcing arrival of the Minneapolis men.

Throughout Saturday morning an executive session of the organization was held at the Ansley at which matters of importance to the convention were worked out, rules adopted, financial matters discussed, and other routine business transacted. John W. Mahan, national commander, presided.

Among other officers present were John W. Scott, Gary, Ind., senior vice commander; Claude L. Gray, University, Va., Harry Westworth, San Francisco; James J. Brown, Scranton, Pa., and Gaylen Young, Salt Lake City, junior vice commanders; Vivian D. Corby, Cincinnati, Ohio, national adjutant, and Hugo Maudrich, Chicago, Ill., sergeant at arms.

The following are national committee members in attendance: Thomas McLagan, Hartford, Conn.; Thomas Tuf, Scranton, Pa.; John N. Egan, Portsmouth, N. H.; J. L. Cavaller, Oteen, N. C.; Walter Loflin, and others.

Mayor Walter A. Sims and Mrs. Sam D. Jones, president of the Service Star legion, will deliver addresses of welcome Monday, and Mrs. Lola Sidney, national secretary and vice commander, will respond. The principal address will be delivered at this session by Mrs. A. McClure, of Kansas City, Mo., of the American War Mothers' association. The convention will continue through Friday, adjourning as the veterans' convention ends. An elaborate entertainment program has been arranged for visiting women and their visitors.

JOHNATHAN DAVIS IN TEXAS RACE FOR GOVERNOR

Topeka, Kan., June 19.—(47)—Former Governor Jonathan M. Davis will seek the democratic gubernatorial nomination in the August primary. His declaration of candidacy was filed today.

Mr. Davis, a farmer, was tried and acquitted twice on pardon bribery charges, following his arrest two months ago for accepting a bribe to allow a republica in January, 1925.

TWO FARM PAPERS OF SOUTHEAST MERGE

Beginning with the June issue, Farming, published at Knoxville, Tenn., by W. M. Goodman, will have a circulation of more than 20,000 among farm owners of eastern Tennessee, western North Carolina, Georgia and Alabama merged with The Southern Cultivator under the new name, Southern Cultivator and Farming.

Farming, under the editorial management of George Gooden, has become noted as an advocate of soil building with lime and legumes and the use of improved farm equipment, and the new magazine will carry on this work in a way that will make it a power for good in all agricultural sections of the southeast. Mr. Goodman will conduct the farm machinery department of Cultivator and Farming.

The Southern Cultivator is the oldest farm paper that has been published continuously in America, and has throughout the 33 years of its life been stood for conservative progress through diversified crops, rotation, livestock and legumes.

ATLANTANS EXPLAIN CHINA MISSION WORK

Nestled by the sea in the shadow of the Great Wall of China at Lanchow is one of the famous points for missionary medical work. Day after day hundreds of poor Chinese patients are treated in the hospital but little is heard of the work except through Baptist missionary papers and in Baptist circles, for it is a hospital devoted to a great extent to benevolent work.

In charge of the hospital are Dr. and Mrs. J. M. Gaston, former Atlantans. An interesting word picture of the work is given in a recent issue of The New East, a denominational publication, by Mrs. Gaston.

Dr. Gaston was a graduate of Boys' High school and the University of Georgia. He later graduated in medicine at the Southern Medical college, practicing medicine in Atlanta for several years. He and Mrs. Gaston have been in China now for 18 years, carrying on medical work under auspices of the foreign mission board of the Southern Baptist convention.

Mrs. Gaston's story of the work is interesting and throughout the story is written the faithfulness of a missionary work.

"We want the hospital to be a very vital factor in the religious life of the community," she says, "and feel that these Chinese of the hospital force are themselves making it such."

Tablet Unveiled To 14 Heroes Of Shenandoah

Lakehurst, N. J., June 19.—(AP)—Completion of the work started by those who lost their lives in the destruction of the naval dirigible, Shenandoah, was the solemn duty of the nation, Rear Admiral Moffett, chief of the bureau of aeronautics, declared today at the unveiling of a memorial tablet to the fourteen men.

The two dirigibles to be constructed for the navy were described as imposing monuments to the victims of the disaster by the admiral who said: "That the lives of the heroes of the Shenandoah may not have been in vain, it is our solemn duty to carry to completion the work which they have started. Let the Shenandoah be a milestone in the development of a new age of civilization."

The tablet was presented by the New Jersey department of the veterans of foreign wars. Before unveiling the tablet, Commander Charles E. Rosendahl, senior surviving officer of the Shenandoah, called the roll of the ill-fated craft. As each name of the dead was called, a wreath was placed upon the plaque by a school girl. The tablet was made of metal, parts of the Shenandoah.

ELECTION CONTEST TRIAL ON MERITS RULED BY COURT

The state supreme court ruled Saturday that a contest proceeding brought last fall in the East Lake election for mayor by H. A. Watson against R. W. Crenshaw must be tried on its merits by the ordinary of DeKalb county.

In the election Crenshaw polled 165 votes to 153 for Watson. The election was contested and Ordinary V. S. Morgan, of DeKalb county, dismissed the contest proceedings on demurrer. An appeal was taken to the Stone Mountain circuit court and Judge John B. Hutcheson, of that court, ruled that Ordinary Morgan must hear the case tried on its merits. The ordinary appealed this ruling to the supreme court and that body sustained the decision of Judge Hutcheson.

BRITISH WOMEN ATTACK WARS

London, June 19.—(AP)—Women of England bent on the abolition of war, after a patient and toilsome pilgrimage from the ends of the country assembled today in Hyde park, London's great rendezvous for reformist demonstrations, and there adopted a resolution calling for arbitration, security and disarmament.

The weather favored the culmination of the women's endeavor with a glorious hot summer day. Considering the many rival Saturday attractions in the shape of outdoor sports of all kinds and counter attractions even in the park itself, the women of London mustered in force to lend their presence and sympathy and to give added strength to the demand that the nation's rulers do everything in their power to make certain that never shall a nation resort to war until every method by arbitration and other means has been exhausted, in settling international disputes peacefully.

Women's societies, some forty in number and representing every phase of feminine activity, joined in the demonstration and many prominent women gave their personal assistance. Sybil Thorne, the actress, headed one procession into the park, and other prominent actresses, Nancy Price, with her pupils, was the moving spirit of the peace pageant staged at the marble arch.

Perhaps one of the most striking of the scenes was the great number and novelty of devices and notices displayed on the banners. "War is a massacre of the innocents," "The world is a family, not a barracks," "Where reason rules there is no war," "War is hell!" "End war or war will end us!"

Hundreds of the women who gathered in Hyde Park had marched for miles, their travels carrying them from remote corners of the country, and during the progress various groups had held meetings in villages or towns through which they passed. The marchers were delivered an address of peace colors; some of them had the suffragette colors flying and some were in summer frocks of white.

Many ladies and men were seen undertaking parades of Harry G. Poole. The youth was one of 30 boys sent to various schools throughout the country by the Atlanta Rotary club. He is said to have been playing on the campus when an ice truck driven by one of the students came in from Sparta. He attempted to get on the truck and slipped and fell under the wheels, it was said.

Serum Maker Owned Big Still, Police Charge

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)
Chicago, June 19.—Dr. L. B. Huff, reported to be a millionaire serum manufacturer, did not make his million out of serum, according to charges filed by federal officials following the doctor's arrest as the head of a giant illicit distillery on the banks of the Fox river, just north of Aurora.

The plant, a building one block long, formerly occupied by the Fox River Packing company, was raided and seized by prohibition agents under Captain R. W. Merrick, chief prohibition enforcement officers and deputy United States marshals under Deputy Harry L. Carr.

Equipment found in the place included 25 large wooden vats filled with mash, a 30-foot column still and $50,000 worth of recently perfected machinery used to hasten the fermentation process.

According to Captain Merrick, the still has been turning out 1,200 gallons of pure grain alcohol a day for a weekly gross business of about $72,000.

Rounding up of the distillery employees entailed an all-night visit on the part of the agents. They first arrested Dr. Huff, shortly after their arrival in Aurora. Several hours later they took into custody William Brown and Theodore Haas. The guard at the distillery this morning took six other employees who reported for duty at the distillery.

'WHITE WINGS' AUTHOR PLAYING IN MOVIES

Banks Winter, famous Georgia singer and composer, is now in Hollywood, Cal., where he is playing parts in motion picture productions, it was learned by friends here Saturday.

For half a century Mr. Winter was one of the best known concert singers in the country. He began his career in Macon almost fifty years ago and has appeared in many of the leading theaters in this country and Europe. He composed "White Wings," a ballad which is now used as the official song of the Y. M. C. A.

Mr. Winter is the father of Winona Winter, popular musical comedy star, and he recently appeared in "Old Home Week," and "Tongues of Flame," motion pictures.

HEAVY NEW DOCKET IN CRIMINAL COURT

New York, June 19. (AP)—The cotton market showed a generally steady undertone today. Selling appeared to be held in check by uncertainty of the effect of rains or showers reported in the southwest, and after early irregularity, October working, closing at 16.47. The general market closed steady, not unchanged to 7 points higher.

The opening was steady at an advance of 2 points to a decline of 4 points, with some light trading. A firm on further covering by July shorts. Setbacks of a few points occurred after the opening under realizing, with some southern and local selling, but after easing off to 17.75 for July and 16.43 for December, the market steadied on reports of wet weather in Texas.

No general or aggressive buying developed, but offerings were light and comparatively small buying orders sent prices up to 17.57 for July and 16.54 for December in the forenoon, net advances of about 4 to 10 points on the general list. The market was held by western belt forecasts of the official talk of shower prospects for over Sunday probably disappointed some of the early buyers, but the showers reported in the eastern belt with a forecast for more, was considered a favorable feature. These factors probably helped to restrict buying on the advance, particularly as there was a diversion of opinion regarding the effects of the southwestern rains and the market closed at reactions of 3 points.

Western Cities Hit as Jealous Trade Rivals

Chicago, June 19. (AP)—Jealousy and rivalry among cities of the Great Lakes region were called the source of opposition to the Lakes to Gulf waterway plan by H. W. Seaman of the Inland Waterway Corporation operating the government-owned Mississippi Warrior. Barge line in a report tonight to the Mississippi Valley Waterway association, Duluth, Detroit, Cleveland and Montreal were termed by Seaman as jealous trade rivals of each other and Chicago.

Cleveland, Seaman said, in an effort to rival Chicago and to keep the waterway plan from reaching the Gulf, would place Gary, Ind., in a position to obtain ore from both the Lake Superior mines and Latin America by water at a price which would raise Gary in importance in the industry and interfere with Cleveland's plans.

Montreal, he said, opposes the waterway as it does the deepening of the Welland canal fearing that both projects would increase Chicago's position as a waterway and detract from Montreal's ranking as the second greatest American seaport.

Detroit's opposition, Seaman declared, seemed to be about 100 per cent jealousy through a desire to supplant Chicago as the dominant metropolis of the Great Lakes.

Duluth's position, Seaman said, is more intricate and subtle. It is a defense of her reputation as a grain shipping center. Logically, he said, the waterway to the Gulf should open up new outlets for her grain. But she fears that the Mississippi river is deepened as provided in the rivers and harbors bill that St. Paul and Minneapolis will become rivals as grain shipping centers. If the Mississippi is not deepened, Duluth will acquire almost a monopoly on the grain trade of the northern region.

The alleged jealousy, Seaman described as "illogical and foolish," adding that the Lakes to Gulf waterway will give no exclusive advantage to any lake city but will result in development and prosperity for them all.

prices moved with extremely narrow and irregular limits in today's market. With new offerings running close to $175,000,000 this week, the second largest this year, trading in listed securities was temporarily relegated into the background.

Foreign issues attracted the most attention, heavy purchases of late being reported for the account of small investors which are finding it difficult to maintain high interest rates to depositors through the employment of funds in the relatively low yield of high-grade domestic issues. Oriental development 6s, which are guaranteed by the Japanese government, advanced a point. Mexican issues also changed hands at advancing prices in anticipation of an early resumption of interest payments.

Foreign issues drifted lower despite predictions of unusually favorable May earnings statements next week. Long Island of 1938, however, touched a new high for the year at 93.

Considerable irregularity developed in the industrial group but price advances were duplicated on the fractional character. Wicksie Steel 7s dropped 3 points on one sale to a new low at 57 and North American 6s were down 1 point. U. S. government issues were relatively steady.

Lake Avondale To Be Opened For Water Sports on July 4

Work Now Nearing Completion on Attractive Casino; Tennis Tournament Being Planned.

Lake Avondale, amid a setting of green beauty that is developing under summer sun and rains, will be opened for water sports July 4. By that time, it was announced Saturday, the bath house and casino at the head of the lake, in one of the loveliest spots of Avondale Estates, Atlanta's new suburban city, will be completed.

The casino, a substantial brick building of the dominant old English type of architecture, had reached an impressive stage Saturday, with the structure completed and the brick walls practically all in place. It is to be a house of rustic character, with graceful gables and a broad terrace that overlooks the clear-water lake and the beach of thick white sand stretching from its steps out into deep water.

Sand Is in Place.
The sand has been placed to the thickness of 15 inches upon the bottom of the lake as far from shore as the bath house and casino are to be deep water and the diving tower soon to be erected. Several other carloads of this sand, taken from one of the famous Florida beaches on the Atlantic, have been obtained to be laid in equal thickness on the shore, from the margin of the lake to the terrace.

Work is in progress and is expected to be completed July 4, for development of the wooded peninsula that juts into the lake as a park site. Nothing has been done in this development to mar the natural beauty of the peninsula, the changes to consist of a certain amount of grading, leveling and planting of a rich variety of grass. In that portion of the park site beyond the woods, formal gardens will be planted, a rustic summer house in its midst, and through the eight acres of the park rustic seats and benches will be placed.

Rapid development of the beautiful lake section of Avondale Estates, and of the other details of the suburb's building and recreational program, has been reflected in increased sales and enhanced values, said G. F. Willis, owner of Avondale Estates.

Sales in the last two weeks have been greater than at any other time since the "suburb" was opened, being recorded at a rate of $3,000,000 a year, and rapidly disposing of available homes and home sites in the first and second units. This far exceeds the sales quota undertaken with the start of development.

Resales Profitable.
Enhancement of values and the substantial nature of the development is reflected also in the record of numerous resales, transactions being reported at profits to the original purchaser ranging as high as $1,500 on building lots in several instances, and representing in all cases 100 to 400 per cent of the original partial payment, which in many instances of resales was said to be the only investment.

One of the reasons for enhancement of values, according to real estate observers, is the fulfillment of predevelopment projects and the execution of the $1,000,000 building program for 1938, which includes, in addition to the lake plans, erection of a minimum of 100 new homes, 20 of which are under way, paving and development of seven miles of street frontage, construction of a series of championship tennis courts in the park adjoining the Avondale pool and playground and completion of the new business block, which is to be ready for occupancy, by July 15.

Opening of the tennis courts will be accompanied by an invitation tournament, expected to assemble net stars of Atlanta and Georgia, in which valuable trophies will be given. M. Grant, one of Atlanta's group of championship players, will assist Mr. Willis in arranging the tournament.

Tech Designated As Distinguished By Army Leaders

Georgia School of Technology is one of six colleges in the fourth corps area of the United States army given designations of "distinguished colleges" by the war department for the scholastic year just completed, it was announced Saturday by Major A. T. Colley, general staff publicity officer for the area, which has headquarters here.

There are thirty-three "distinguished colleges" in the United States, the department stated. In addition to Georgia Tech the following institutions in the fourth corps were given the distinguished appellation:

University of Florida, Clemson college, Louisiana State university, Alabama Polytechnic institute (Auburn) and Davidson college.

It also was announced that Major Ronald D. Johnson, field artillery, on duty with the Georgia national guard at Savannah, has been detailed as an instructor at the army field artillery school at Fort Sill, Okla.

POPE TO DISCUSS MEXICAN SITUATION
Rome, June 19. (AP)—Pope Pius will deliver an allocution in a secret consistory on Monday but it has not been decided whether or not it will be made public.

It is believed that the allocution will contain a passage concerning the political and religious situation in Mexico. Reports that Monsignor Mora y Del Rio, archbishop of Mexico, will be created a cardinal, are regarded as improbable in vatican circles.

Reports are believed to have arisen through the church's tradition to honor prelates who have been the object of persecution. The tradition began by the elevation to the cardinalate of Monsignor Ledochovsky, archbishop of Posen, who was imprisoned by Bismarck during the "kulturkampf." Pope Leo XIII made the archbishop a cardinal while he was still in prison.

(Archbishop Mora y Del Rio recently was acquitted of sedition charges prompted by his attitude toward the Mexican revolution. He protested to President Calles last month over the expulsion of priests from Mexico.)

WOMAN RUNS MILE WITH BLACK SNAKE AROUND HER NECK
York, Pa., June 19. (AP)—Attacked by a black snake at her home today Mrs. Cynthia Chancere ran a mile over the hills for aid, with the snake girdled around her neck and almost choking her. She was near collapse from pain and shock when the reptile was killed by men who went to her assistance. The snake was seven feet long and four inches thick. Mrs. Chancere had gone to the chicken house and reached into a nest above her head. The snake darted out and entwined itself about her neck and arm.

"LA BELLE HELENE" HELD SHAPELIEST OF ART MODELS
Paris, June 19. (AP)—"La Belle Heleene" was proclaimed the fairest model of the annual art students' arts ball, which developed into the most beautiful party in the history of Paris.

The big moment came when the most shapely models of each of the art schools exhibited curves in competition. "La Belle Heleene" was adjudged the shapeliest.

Phyllis-Walt Nuptials To Be Solemnized Next Thursday

Quite the most interesting wedding in the comic strip set will take place on June 24, when the beautiful Phyllis Blossom will become the cool and collected bride of blushing Walter Weatherly. Hundreds of friends will crowd the church, where the ceremony will take place, according to the wishes of the bride. There will be no reception following, by request of the bridegroom.

So, with the wishes of both respected, all is merry as the well known marriage bell, and preparations go on apace, with far less friction than is customary in less exploited affairs of the heart.

In spite of many dark warnings from men friends, which all the readers have followed, more or less sympathetically, according to their station; in spite of Madame Octave's many and constant snipes of opposition and enmity toward the bland and harmless Walt; in spite of many minor adjustments, which too often cause major disagreements, the wedding plans have reached the final stages. True love always finds a way, so we are told, or is it the "never runs smooth" one that fits here? Anyway, let us all go to the church with the Alley bunch and see what a few minutes it takes to do a whole lot of devilment, as Rachel has aptly said.

Bride's Gown.
Mrs. Blossom's dainty figure will be gowned in a diaphanous frock of moonlight crepe and lace of cobwebby fineness, and she will wear a picture hat of transparent straw.

Walt's life long dream of a bride in the world today is the conclusion of the annual art students' arts ball, which developed into the most beautiful party in the history of Paris. The big moment came when the most shapely models of each of the art schools exhibited curves in competition. "La Belle Heleene" was adjudged the shapeliest.

PEACH MEN PROTEST MISLEADING DATA

Macon, Ga., June 19. (AP)—The Georgia Peach Growers' exchange announced tonight that it had protested to the United States department of agriculture, through United States Senators Walter F. George and W. J. Harris, of Georgia, against issuance of "erroneous and misleading government crop estimates which have proved hurtful to the industry."

The exchange issued an estimate of probable yields, by varieties, after a survey of all orchards in Georgia, showing a probable yield of 13,850 cars, or slightly more than last year's crop.

Shipments of early varieties are falling below the exchange's estimate, it was announced tonight. The government estimate was 8,178,000 bushels for Georgia, which the exchange claims is about 8,000 cars too high.

W. C. Bewley, general manager of the exchange, stated tonight that the bulk of the Hileys and Georgia Belles are grown south of Macon and will be out of the state before the Elbertas, the bulk of which are north of Macon, start moving. Most of the crop south of Macon, where the crop is shorter than last year, will move in the next few weeks, it was announced.

Carmans start moving Monday, practically all of the early varieties being cleaned up.

Governor Byrd Demands Action On Gas Probe

Richmond, Va., June 19. (AP)—The importance of quick action in an investigation of gasoline, kerosene and other oil products was urged in a letter of Governor Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia, to President Coolidge today. Governor Byrd asked that the president have the federal trade commission report its findings direct to the chief executive and not to the senate.

The letter was written on receipt of a letter from the president which called attention to the fact that the senate had started an investigation as to the strength of the appeal which Governor Byrd made to the president June 1. The president promised to supplement the investigation if necessary.

A delay of six months will be necessary if the federal trade commission must report to the senate, Governor Byrd pointed out in his letter. He again recalled that the recent increases in prices are placing "an additional annual burden of $500,000,000 upon the people."

Thirteen governors have joined with Virginia's chief executive in asking for the inquiry into gasoline and oil industry that Governor Byrd charged in his letter of June 1 was a monopoly with every indication of price arrangements.

ASHES OF CORTEZ ARE TO REMAIN IN MEXICAN GRAVE
Mexico City, June 19. (AP)—The ashes of Don Hernan Cortez, conqueror of Mexico, will remain forever in Mexico, according to his only living descendant, Antonio Pignatelli. Pignatelli, a descendant of the Cortez family of Oaxaca, this ended a long discussion among Spanish enthusiasts endeavoring to have the remains of the conqueror removed to Spain.

It was first reported in the press that permission would be sought of the Mexican government to remove the ashes to Spain. This gave rise to a long-drawn-out debate between historians and authorities on Hispanic-American history which seemed to have been ended by the statement of Prince Pignatelli, as the Cortez descendant is known in Mexico.

The remains of Cortez now rest in a vault in the Hospital de Jesus, founded in the sixteenth century by the ancestors of Pignatelli. The hospital is the oldest in Mexico.

BABY WITH PIN IN THROAT RUSHED TO PHILADELPHIA

Little Rock, Ark., June 19. (AP)—An open safety pin lodged far down in its bronchial tube, the 7-month-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Clinas, of Malvern, Ark., is being rushed tonight to Philadelphia, where a specialist is to perform the delicate operation which may save its life.

An X-ray picture taken here revealed the location of the pin, which the baby swallowed during the course of a bath Wednesday. The child is expected to reach Philadelphia at noon today.

OWNER OF DOG CARRYING RUM SOUGHT BY POLICE

Brownsville, Texas, June 19. (AP)—Canine rum-runners have appeared. The first of the new breed was stopped on the international bridge here Friday with a bottle of tequila tied to his collar.

The four-footed bootlegger came trotting across the bridge at 11 o'clock. When accounted by an inspector, he stopped, and on examination the bottle was found.

The dog was released but its owner is sought.

HAGEN OVERTAKES MITCHELL TO BEAT HIM 2 AND 1

Star American Pro Wins Large Amount In "Title" Contest

Weybridge, England, June 19.—Walter Hagen has paired with Bobby Jones tonight as the second American of the week to startle the British by amazing performances on British links.

Babe Ruth, snatching victory from defeat by a home run with bases full and two strikes on him, could have offered no more dramatic achievement than the American professional's capture of his 72-hole match with Abe Mitchell, of England, today on the historic St. George's Hill course.

The match had been touted as an "unofficial world's professional championship."

Winning 2 up and 1 to play, Hagen had begun the second 36 holes four down. Mitchell had established his big margin Friday at the Wentworth club, Virginia Water.

A purse of $5,000 and the proceeds of several side bets went to the American, who is regarded as one of the best "money players" in the game, and who played amazing golf to justify this reputation in his match with Mitchell.

A large gallery and a brilliant sun attended Hagen and Mitchell as they began their last 36 holes.

Putted Phenomenally.

Putting phenomenally, Hagen took the second, fourth, fifth and sixth holes on the greens and made the match all square. At the turn he had a 24 and the match was still all square.

Mitchell failed to resume the lead after the tenth, when Hagen established his margin by holing a chip shot of almost 30 yards. They halved the next four. Hagen putted for a win on the 15th. Mitchell won with a beautiful 3 on the 17th and the morning round ended with Hagen 1 up.

With 34s in and out, Hagen had equaled Mitchell's course record of 68.

Mitchell tightened going out in the afternoon round. But Hagen stayed with him and they did the first nine in 34. Hagen was 2 up when he took the fourth, but Mitchell won the sixth. Hagen then took the 15th, but

CUBS SURPRISE OF NATIONAL THIS SEASON

BY FRANK GETTY.

New York, June 19.—Before the current big league baseball season opened, the experts thought the management of the Chicago Cubs had done them a favor by providing the dopesters with a certain eighth place team.

President Veeck had entrusted the club to the management of Joe McCarthy, who had never even played in the big leagues. It was not so much that Joe was considered incapable, but the Cubs as he took them had no pitching staff, no infield, no outfield, no hitters and only a mediocre bat boy.

Before mid-June, McCarthy had the Cubs fighting for first place, and never out of the one-two-three holes. He had inspired Hack Wilson to become the idol of Chicago fandom, and the most dangerous hitter in the league. He was winning ball games with skill, hitting, pitching, and occasionally luck. But mostly with nerve.

McCarthy is 37, somewhat of a baseball curiosity. He has had 20 years' experience in the business. In the American association, he proved a capable leader, after a hard career with nine different clubs.

Joe is a college graduate and played ball years ago for dear old Niagara U.

"In 1914 I was with the Brooklyn Federal," replied McCarthy when asked if he ever had played ball with the majors. "That's the closest. When that league broke up I went to Louisville. I was 26 then, too old to be a big league rookie, or so I thought."

"Down in Louisville I had pretty fair success, a couple of pennants, and a team that was usually up with the leaders. Now I've got the job of my life—and you bet I appreciate the chance."

The Cubs probably will not finish in the first division, since room must be made for the Pirates, Reds, Giants and Robins, but it will be a fighting sixth place team that finishes the season under Joe McCarthy, more power to him.

Sportively Speaking

by H. C. HAMILTON.

Britishers' Last Stand.

Jones' Great Playing.

Gunn Coming Champ.

THIS week the English make a last stand in defense of their final golf championship of major importance—the open. And if the playing of Bobby Jones and Walter Hagen in recent days has any important bearing on the matter they may as well get the cup ready for another American name. Five times since the war the championship has rested in American hands and twice the hands were those of Walter Hagen. Jim Barnes right now is the open champion. He is an American, although he was born in England.

Golf, though, is an exceedingly difficult game to figure. You may know that Bob Jones is sure to shoot good golf and the same thing is true of Hagen, but Jones was in such rare form at Sunningdale that he may have burned out his supreme golf and be in for a poor round at St. Annas which may have a deadly effect on his total score.

AT Muirfield when Bobby put Robert Harris, the playing-through British champion, out of the amateur tournament he did it with a flash of extraordinary golf and there were many who shook their heads that night and feared the worst. Their fears were realized next day when Bob succumbed to a player of less class than Harris. His driving was inaccurate, and where he had been good on the greens against Harris he was only occasionally good against Jamieson.

Bob suffered from a rheumatic shoulder the day he tackled his conqueror, but he never said a word about it. He just picked up his clubs and grittily played golf. A masseur had worked on the shoulder for some time before he went to the golf course.

WHILE every one is saluting Jones and Hagen for their fine performances since leaving Scotland, I want to call your attention to one Watts Gunn, of Atlanta, who, if he really starts to play golf of which he is capable, will make the going extremely hard for his opponents. Gunn is a fine golfer and a serious player. He has nerves of iron and he is a fighter. When his shots are going straight he is unbeatable.

Gunn is a little faulty with his tee shots at times and that is one thing which annoys him. Not that he worries over the outcome of a match. He never does that, but he becomes aggravated with himself.

THE English and Scotch people are very fond of Gunn. They appreciate the fact that Bob Jones is the world's greatest amateur player. They admire his elegant style with his clubs, but they predict that Watts Gunn some time will become the greatest golf player in the world. His iron shots particularly have captivated them.

TOM GRIFFITH IS PURCHASED BY MICHALOVE

Dan Michalove, president of the Atlanta baseball club, still confident of his hired help, has taken more steps to strengthen his team. Saturday, just before the Memphis-Cracker game, he announced the purchase of Tommy Griffith, outfielder of the Little Rock club. Griffith was formerly with the Chicago, Cincinnati and Brooklyn clubs of the National league.

Griffith is known as a heavy hitter and a fast and clever base-runner, and the Cracker boss believes he will be a big factor in the playing of the Cracker through the rest of the journey to the land of Pennantville.

With the announcement of the purchase of Griffith, who probably will take the left field post, one Cracker player will have to look around for a job on some other roster, but just who that player will be is not known.

President Michalove also announced that next Saturday, June 26, the Cracker will raise the 1925 Southern league pennant, which they won. It will be raised at the opening of the game with the Nashville Vols at Spiller field.

Despite the fact that the Cracker are stuck in fifth place, they are coming along steadily, pushing the Nashville Vols closely for fourth place. If one remembers correctly, the Cracker were trailing along about the same places in the league standings last year and they began to climb until they had secured the top berth in the pile of figures. And judging from the present actions of the Cracker it would not be surprising if the Atlanta clan did not repeat the same stunt again this season.

Gulfport Plans New Yacht Club

Gulfport, Miss., is soon to boast one of the most modern yacht clubs and yacht harbors in southern waters. The Gulfport Kiwanis club, headed by Captain G. W. Kennedy, is behind the movement and will raise $150,000 for the project. A harbor such as contemplated is a much desired port of refuge in case of a storm.

Hard Downpour Robs Memphis of Contest In Seventh Inning

BY H. C. HAMILTON.

Rain, which fell in sheets and soaked Spiller field, came to the rescue of our faltering athletes in the final game of the Memphis series Saturday afternoon, the score reverting back to the end of the sixth inning, a tie at 1 to 1. This may or may not have been a lucky break. Any rate the Chicks had just scored a run and had men on second and third when the skies opened.

PEL INFIELDER LEADS HITTERS IN SOUTHERN

Memphis, Tenn., June 19.—(P)—Hendrick, New Orleans first baseman, still continued to hold his lead in individual batting in the Southern association through games of Wednesday, with a total of 63 games and 100 hits for a percentage of .413.

Hendrick is the sole survivor of the .400 hitting class in the association. D. Williams, Mobile outfielder, was in second place, with 63 games played and a percentage of .398.

Carroll, Chattanooga outfielder, was third member of the "above .375 class," with 62 games for a .387 percentage.

Yarman, Birmingham, with 57 games, and Murphy, of Atlanta, with 46, each had .374. Camp, Nashville, 42 games and .373, and Taylor, of Memphis, with 65 games, and Tucker, of New Orleans, with 62 games, .372.

Sixteen batters were hitting above the .350 mark.

West, Birmingham outfielder, led the home run list with a total of 11, and Yarman, of Birmingham, had 9 home runs.

Griffin, Memphis, and Crenshaw, New Orleans, topped the list of pitchers, with an .857 percentage. Griffin has started in 18 games, won six and lost 1, while Crenshaw has started in 14 games, won six and lost one.

Crowder, of Birmingham, has started in 20 games, won 11 and lost two, for a percentage of .840.

Nashville continued to lead in team batting from last week, with .318; Memphis was second with .312, and New Orleans third with .308.

New Orleans headed the list in team fielding with .974; Nashville was second with .964, and Memphis third with .961.

The game not only was hot and well-contested, but it provided a feature for the folks in the grandstand when Turner Barber became peeved at a decision by Umpire Johnson and talked himself out of the ball game. Barber attempted to win a foot race with Red Murphy in the sixth inning, after having fielded the utility man's grounder.

Murphy Fools Chicks.

He lost the decision by a close shave, but, like all the other Memphis players, thought the player had been called out and started off the field. All the other players started off, also, with the result that Murphy calmly trotted on to second base, thereby further infuriating the visitors. Barber was particularly heated up over the decision and vented his disgust in language which seemed to Johnson to be a little too colorful. He ran only was ejected from the game, but was ordered off the field. He left with a flow of conversation and gestulation directed at Umpire Campbell, although that gentleman had nothing to do with the proceedings.

It looked very much as if the game might go to the Chicks, for Guy Morton had held the Cracker to three safe hits, while Cliff Markie, though pitching in excellent form, had been touched for five and had yielded three in a row with none out when the contest was stopped. Leo Durocher had thrown in a pair of errors for good measure in that inning, but they and the hits, of course, do not figure in the box score. That guess might well be wrong, for with Barber out of the lineup the Chicks might have been rather shaky.

Brook First Man On.

The first man to reach first for the Cracker was Johnny Brock, who walked and attempted to steal. He was pegged out by Catcher Kholbecker.

In the third Gilbert led off with a single to left. He reached second and third on sacrifices by Durocher and Markie, and Red Murphy obliged with a single to score him. Murphy was tossed out when he tried to steal.

That was the end of the scoring.

Emmett Spicer Wins Southern Golf Championship

Memphis Star Beats Jones on 29th Hole To Take Title, 8-7

Memphis, Tenn., June 19.—(AP)—Emmett Spicer, Memphis, tonight won the title this afternoon when he defeated L. P. Jones, also of Memphis, 8 to 7, in the 36-hole finals of the annual Southern Golf association tournament.

After a morning round during which he took a six for one hole and five for five of the 18, to stand up, Spicer played sterling golf to end the match at the 11th green in the afternoon round.

Four birdies were among his afternoon collection and he finished the first nine holes of the afternoon two strokes below par.

The youth was seldom off the fairway and consistently outdrove Jones. Few long putts were holed, but on few greens was there any necessity for a third.

After gaining a one-hole lead on the first green, Spicer halved the next two and lost the fourth when he missed a two-foot putt and took a four for the hole. He halved the fifth and lost the sixth to stand one down.

The seventh was halved and he went two down at eight when he missed his second putt. He brought the score back to one down at the ninth, however, when Jones needed three putts, and won the 10th, 11th and 12th to stand two up when Jones had trouble finding the greens.

The remaining holes of the morning were halved with both occasionally hitting above par.

In the afternoon, however, after halving the first and second, winning the third and dropping the fourth, Spicer began swatting his drives far up the fairway, laying his second upon the green and consistently sinking his second putt, in addition to holing enough first putts to ring up a quartet of birdies.

Spicer captured the fifth and sixth, halved the seventh, and won the eighth, ninth, tenth and eleventh, to win the match.

Spicer came through the hardest matches of the tournament to win the title. In the first round of match play, he beat Fred Lamprecht, New Orleans, 5 and 4. Lamprecht recently added the Louisiana state title to his previous designation as national intercollegiate champion.

Two other fellow townsmen then fell before Spicer before he tackled Bill Dyer, of Nashville, in the semi-finals yesterday and met Jones today. W. C. Harris, an outstanding tournament player and a vigorous opponent of Spicer in many previous matches, gave him one of the hardest fights the tournament witnessed. Harris carried the fight to the 20th hole before losing, previously in the semi-finals.

Frank Dyer, also of Memphis, former Metropolitan champion, next was beaten by Spicer on the sixteenth green, and Bill Dyer, of Nashville, the champion of Glen Criseman, last year's champion, was beaten in the semi-finals, 4 and 3.

Jones came into the finals after beating R. E. McDade, Shreveport, 2 and 1, and H. G. Bush, Jr., of New Orleans, in a struggle which lasted to the 15th hole. He was the conqueror of Glen Criseman, last year's champion, was beaten in the semi-finals, 4 and 3.

His hardest fights came from Giddens and Bush. Bush, a veteran of golf, in the first round of match play beat F. U. Gardner, Columbus, Ga., 4 and 2, and had been expected to go far in the tournament. Giddens was an old opponent of Jones, having two having previously met in the semi-finals of local tournaments.

The match between Ewing Watkins, Chattanooga, and Spicer, a medalist honor, will be held at a time and place to be decided upon later, association officials announced tonight.

Both were on the green with their second. Jones overran a long putt and Spicer laid his head for a par four to win the first hole.

Spicer slammed his drive straight down the fairway and Jones dropped in the rough but he sent his second over the trees to the green. Both sank their second putts to halve the second hole.

Squares Match.
The match was squared at the fourth when Spicer missed a long putt for a four. The third had been halved in par 5.

The fifth was halved in four. Both overran putts on the sixth and Jones for the first time became one up when Spicer missed his second and took a six for the hole.

Jones was over the seventh with his drive but played a good chip and the hole was halved in three.

Jones seemed to have a certain stride on the eighth when he laid his second six feet from the pin but the ball hit the edge of the cup on his putt and swerved out. Spicer missed his second putt and lost the hole to stand one up at the turn.

Jones was short of the tenth on his drive and required two putts to sink the ball after his iron had brought it to the green. Spicer squared the match with a par three.

Spicer Regains Lead.
Spicer brought his ball to the edge of the 11th green on his second for a hard hit and laid his third while Jones laid his third while Spicer laid his ball near the pin. He overran his putt, however, halving the hole with a bogey five.

Spicer Two Up.
Spicer was trapped on his second and missed a long putt to halve the 12th hole in five and stand 2 up.

Both were caught behind the bunkers at the short 10th and both putts were short. They halved the hole in four.

The seventeenth was halved with par fours.

Jones was in the trap with his second to the eighteenth and was short with his third, but Spicer laid his ball on the lip of the cup between Jones and the hole, to close for a stroke, and the hole was halved in five.

Both were on the nineteenth green on their second shot. Jones overran a long putt and Spicer laid his down for a par four to win the hole.

The twentieth was halved with par fours.

Spicer's drive to the 21st hole of the match was in the rough, but Jones hung to the edge of the fairway. Both sank their iron shot on the 21st hole but Spicer sank a four-foot putt to 8-7.

HASTE WINNER BY NOSE OVER BRADLEY COLT

Collinsville, Ill., June 19.—(AP)—To the fleetness of foot of J. E. Widenor's Haste and the skillful riding of Jockey Earl Sande goes the distinction of breaking the wonderful string of victories of E. H. Bradley's Baggage and Boot to Boot.

Haste raced to a smashing victory in the $25,000 Fairmount derby here this afternoon, finishing a short nose ahead of Baggage after a thrilling mile and a quarter struggle.

Boot to Boot, after surprising the crowd of 20,000 by taking the lead at the start, tired in the killing stretch drive and finished third, closely pressed by Rock Man, of the Sagamore stable. Dr. Cardenas, the only other starter, was never prominent and finished last.

The time was 2:03 2-5, a new track record.

Victorious in two of the biggest features for three-year-olds this season, the Louisiana and Latonia derbies, and second in the Kentucky derby, Baggage was generally conceded the best chance to win and the Bradley entry was heavily played in the betting. However, there were almost as many who liked the chances of Haste. A $2 certificate on Haste paid $4 to win and $2.10 for place. Baggage paid $2.10 for place.

EASTERN OPEN ATTRACTIVE TO GOLFERS

Delaware Water Gap, Pa., June 19. The forthcoming eastern open championship, which will be contested for the first time on the links of the Wolf Hollow Golf club on the 19th and 20th of next month, will present the competing professionals with a worth-while goal in the way of prizes.

The latest addition to the regular prize money is a donation of $500 from Mr. Percy Townsend, of Bloomfield, N. J.; $100 will be given from this prize to the winner, and $100 for the low score in each of the four rounds. The regular prize money, in addition to this, includes $1,500.

A handsome gold medal, studded with two diamonds, will become the property of the winner. The trophy will become significant each year as the badge of the eastern open championship title.

Indications are that well over 100 professional golfers will take part in the tournament, with a sprinkling of amateurs in addition, will take part in the championship.

putt and won the hole with a birdie four to stand three up.

Spicer was short of the 22nd on his drive, while Jones landed near the pin. Both missed putts, and Jones won the hole with a par three to stand two down.

Both got long drives to the 23rd, but Jones' second was on the edge of the green, while Spicer's iron was only six feet from the pin and he sank the putt for a birdie to go three up.

Spicer got a longer drive than Jones to the 24th and dropped his second near the pin, while Jones landed near the green and rolled into the sand. His third brought him fourth to take a five while Spicer netted a birdie three to go four up.

Both were on the short 25th with their drives but Jones was 30 feet from the pin. He laid his second near the cup, halved the hole with a par three.

Stymies Opponent to Win.
Spicer's second to the 26th approached short, but a fast, sloping green carried the ball near the pin and Jones overtook his third, undershot his fourth. Spicer missed a putt but stymied his opponent, who conceded the hole, and Spicer went five up.

Spicer had a long drive to the 27th and a short chip brought his close enough for a 6-foot putt to net him a birdie and stand six up.

Jones was short on the 28th with his drive, and Spicer landed near the edge of the green. A long approach putt brought Spicer close enough to sink his third and go seven up.

Jones was short on his drive to the 29th and his brassie landed in a sand trap near the green. Spicer was over the green with his second and came near sinking a long putt for a birdie. His ball was holed, however, and Jones still made distance away.

for the Crackers. Murphy beat out his blow to Barber in the sixth and reached second as related, but Niehoff was robbed of a hit when Shortstop Jenkins, of the visitors, scooped up his fast grounder with one hand and tossed the ball out at first.

Taylor doubled in the second, but was stranded when Markle got the next three men, taking the third out himself when he grabbed Reese's sharp grounder and ran to first with the ball.

Necessitates Double-Header.
In the fourth inning Barber led off with a single and went to second on Taylor's sacrifice. Barrett shot a single to deep short, putting Barber on second. The first-basing outfielder scored when Niehoff threw out Jones.

The tie makes it necessary for the Crackers to play two double-headers with the Memphians when they return here in August. One of these will be played on August 2, but the date for the second one has not yet been set.

Saturday's game was preceded by a sandlot city championship game between the Rinky Dinks and the North Side Bulldogs, which was won by the Rinky Dinks, 3 to 2.

Plan Artificial Rain For Scioto Course

Use of "rain makers" in order to have the course suitable for play is one of the innovations to be provided by those in charge of the national open golf tournament at Scioto Country club at Columbus, Ohio, July 8 to 10. Aerial bombs and other stunts will be resorted to by specialists in being on a drenching "it needed."

Mitchell played desperately and captured the next one.

The 15th was nearly fatal to Hagen; only he could have retrieved it, the Americans in the gallery declared later. With a wide drive and inexplicably poor approach shot, he took a 6. This only squared the match, however. Mitchell was unable to better his 5 of the morning for this hole, although Hagen previously had done it in a 4.

Gallery Quivering.
The gallery was virtually quivering. A great deal of money and that "unofficial world's championship" hung by a thread, oscillating between Walter and Abe.

Americans gnashed their teeth as Hagen drove into a roadway on the 16th. But a moment later he had played a masher shot to within two feet of the pin on a third stroke and Mitchell had failed miserably to sink his ball after driving it to atop feet from the hole on his own third shot.

Hagen was again 1 up, with 2 to play. Flushed with anticipation of victory, he took the 17th when Mitchell, obviously nervous, sent his second stroke into the crowd and the next into a rut from which he failed to get well out. The match ended on the 17th hole.

Pitchers Lazy, Says McGinnity

New York, June 19.—(AP)—Joe McGinnity, who claims to have thrown more curve balls than any other two pitchers in organized baseball, says that "iron men" have passed out of the major leagues because most modern hurlers grasp the pellet improperly and fail to take the mound often enough.

McGinnity, whose pitching career extended over a period of thirty-two years, maintains that "curve pitching, properly done, is no greater strain on the arm than fast ball pitching."

"After pitching a game, the young fellows of today lay off for a week," he continued. "I don't think I ever went a season in the majors without pitching at least fifty games."

McGinnity was first called the "iron man" when he pitched six games in seven days and won them all. He has since been called a "pitching coach" with the Cleveland Nationals.

CHARLEY HOFF COBB'S NAME RAPS UNION AT LAST IN AND ATHLETES HALL OF FAME

New York, June 19.—(AP)—Norwegian pole vault champion, Hoff, bitter against the treatment accorded him in this country, according to an article published under his signature in the Ohio, Norway, After Posters.

Hoff, in the article which has just been received here, not only attacks the Amateur Athletic club, which barred him from further contests in this country because of his refusal to participate in a contest at San Francisco on the plea of poor condition, but also criticizes Lee Barnes and Harold Osborne, the two best American pole vaulters.

Referring to Barnes, Hoff wrote, "He has avoided me on all possible pretexts."

"Barnes is far from being the best American pole jumper, but he won after a tie in the last Olympic games. He is to become a professional before long and do jumps for a big theatrical revue company here in America. He knows that if he is beaten by me his eventual salary will be reduced by one-half. According to what he says he is offered $300 a week, which is not so bad."

Hoff wrote that an attempt was being made to arrange a meeting between Osborne, Emerson Norton and "Tony" Plinsky and himself in a deathly (10 event competition), "but at the present the chances of this coming off are not very good."

Hoff's statement: "Then Hoff made the following attack upon Osborne: 'Osborne stopped in the middle of the heptathlon (seven-event competition), which was arranged between him and myself, on the pretext that he had sprained his foot. But not even the Americans believed that, seeing that seven days later he took part in a new seven-event competition in Cuba and won five of the events. A sprained foot is not cured in a week.' The article was dated 'Los Angeles, in May.' At that time Hoff had not yet learned of his final disbarment from competition here. The athlete was particularly critical about the system of judging events here. He charged that in Los Angeles and Lawrence, Kan., the steel tape used to measure the height curved downward from the cross bar. 'I am quite certain that my world's record in the pole vault will be beaten one day in the same manner,' he wrote.

ONE SHOOT STARTS HERE ON MONDAY

The most important event of the year for southern trapshooters, the Atlanta zone trap shoot, will be open Monday over the traps of the Atlanta Gun club, beginning a program which will extend over four days to include the most attractive program of trap events ever held in this city. The southern zone, embracing all the southern states, recently was engaged to include the Canal Zone and Puerto Rico, as well as Oklahoma and Texas, so the meet here will draw instant shots from all sections. The event itself ranks with the grand national amateur championship in its importance to the section involved. A national, of course, takes in the entire country, but to the southern zone the southern zone shoot is the top competition of the year. On Monday, the first day of the meet, 200 targets will be thrown for the entrant, amateurs and professionals, all six of the class championships being at stake. They run from the A. A. down to include class E. Numerous silver prizes are provided for these events in addition to money prizes for the professionals. The doubles will be on the traps for Tuesday, the second day, fifty pairs listed as the entrants. Hand-me prizes also will be awarded the winners in this event. Wednesday the singles championships will bring out an array of shots to rival anything ever seen in this section. Two hundred clay pigeons will be tossed to destruction, the prize for every entrant. A gold medal will go to the winner of this event and silver trophy will go to the runner-up. The women's championship and professional singles also will be contested on this day. The big day of the shoot is Thursday—the day of the southern zone indicat shoot. Two hundred blue clay will be thrown for each entrant. The day also sees the presentation of medals and trophies to winners of her events.

Valued Trophy Found in Shop Japan's Baseball Pioneer Quits

At the recent old athletes' reunion connection with the intercollegiate meet in Boston, Chairman W. G. Gordon showed a silver cup won by Dr. Edward E. Culver, of Union College, in an intercollegiate meet in 1875, the year before the intercollegiate A. A. A. was launched. Dr. Culver won the 440-yd. run. The cup, lost for many years, was found in a workshop in one of the Union college buildings several years ago, being used to hold nails. The cup was worth $100.

Brinke Defeats Stapp For Ky. Amateur Title

Fort Thomas, Ky., June 19.—(AP)—Chris Brinke, of the Audubon Country club, Louisville, today won the Kentucky state amateur golf championship, in one of the greatest battles ever staged in the middle West, to beat Darwin Stapp, of Fort Thomas, at the Highland Country club, 2 and 1 on the last green. Stapp won the Kentucky state open last Monday.

Dogs Were Thirsty; Melted Rickard's Ice

Tex Rickard recently hired a team of timber wolves to give exhibitions of mauling in his new garden and the trip involved considerable expense. When they came out on the ice to do their stuff, they all sat down and refused to move. When they tried to drag the animals off the ice a snarling fight resulted and proceedings were delayed for 15 minutes. "What ails them dogs?" Rickard asked the musher. "The keeper didn't give them a drink all day and when they got out there they tried to melt the ice for some water."

CLEVELAND ADDS BODY DIVISION

"Since the inception of the Cleveland six, it has always been the desire of its makers to build in its own plants as much of the car as possible," states C. S. Thompson, president of the Atlanta Marmon company, local Cleveland six distributor. "They were convinced that in adhering to this manufacturing practice of having the various major units of the car's construction built under their own control, in Cleveland shops, a definite standard of quality workmanship could be maintained."

"That this policy was sound has been proven by the fact that from the beginning the Cleveland six has built its own motors, transmissions, rear axles and other vital elements in the car's makeup. With the addition of a large body division to Cleveland factories the car is now approximately 100 per cent Cleveland built."

"The new body division forms a wing of the big main production plant and is equipped with only the latest body-building machinery."

"If one were to take a trip through this new body division, it would reveal that Cleveland bodies are being built to the highest standards; identical with practices followed by many of the country's best body builders. The bodies are built on what is generally termed a track system. This is a progressive assembly process."

"At one end of the track the frames of the bodies are started down the line. As they move along on the track, one gang will fit and attach the panels of steel farther down the line. They are then moved into a complete metal surface conforming exactly to the contour of the strong frame underneath. After the steel panels are attached the metal is thoroughly glazed to remove any foreign particles. The trimming and finishing operations are done in the same plant, but on different floors."

"The capacity of the body-building division is ample to allow for further expansion as conditions demand."

"In commenting on this new department, company officials said that this addition marks the final step in this company in achieving what has always been its objective—to build the Cleveland six in its entirety in Cleveland."

FARM BODY GETS GEORGIA ISLANDS

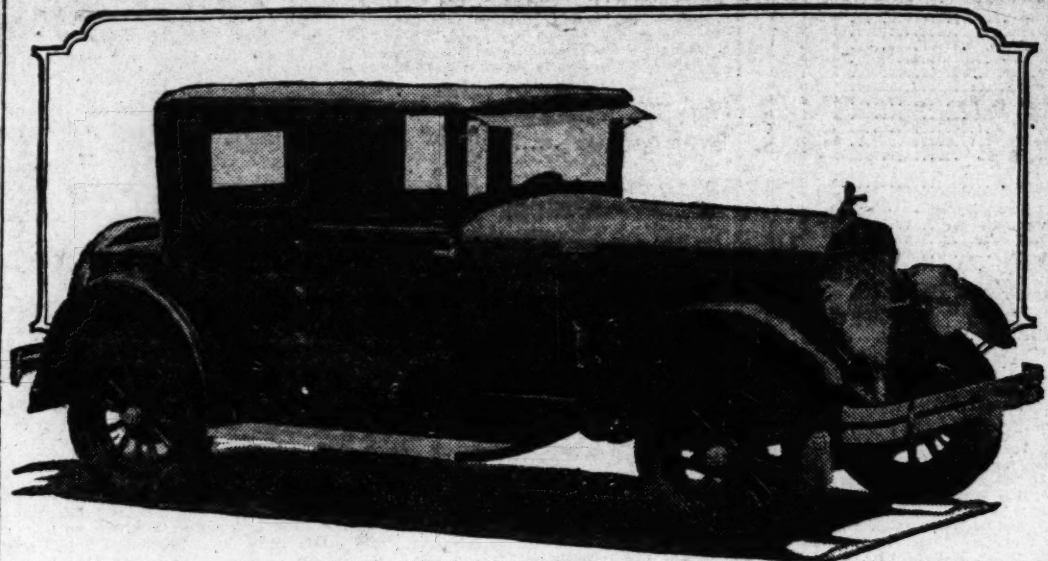

Washington, June 19.—(Special.)—Following a request made by Senator George that Blackbeard Island, Blythe Island and Grover Island, off the coast of Georgia be taken over by the department of agriculture for agricultural purposes and game preserves, the secretary of agriculture has advised the senator that plans are being made to request the navy department, which has been nominally in control of Blackbeard Island, to transfer this island to the department of agriculture, as provided by house bill 10312 recently passed by congress.

The department has been administering the island as a bird refuge for several years, and is now being used also as an experimental station for the acclimatization of certain foreign game birds.

Blythe Island and Grover Island have been found not suitable for national forest purposes. The secretary stated that the temporary use of these two islands was granted by the navy department in 1922 for experimental work by the bureau of plant industry, especially in relation to cotton breeding. In early 1925, however, this temporary use was relinquished in view of the necessity for economy in developing the field work of the bureau of plant industry. Because of difficulties in clearing the land and establishing experimental work there, it was determined inadvisable to attempt the development of these islands.

These islands are among those authorized under a bill recently passed by congress for disposal as no longer needed for naval purposes. The secretary of the navy is authorized to transfer the control to any executive department or to dispose of on public sale, such lands and improvements and equipment thereon.

New Custom-Featured Franklin Victoria

Being shown by the Franklin Motor Car company, local distributors, 151 West Peachtree street.

First showings now are being made of the Franklin Victoria, 4-passenger closed type, new to the Franklin line and new to motordom from the standpoint of body style and features. Distinguished by the external characteristics of the Franklin 3-passenger coupe including clear driver's vision, wide doors, English coach boot and a cabriolet type top, this new Franklin introduces interior construction affecting passenger roominess, comfort and convenience never before afforded in a car of this type.

The latter is illustrated by the design of the seat. The driver's seat is conveniently placed. Leg room is ample. The folding seat is of unusual width, both in seat cushion and seat back and is upholstered to give maximum comfort on long trips. This auxiliary seat is supported from the front by a bracket which allows the seat to fold under the cowl; the front side mounting of the auxiliary seat bracket makes possible a clear space under the folding seat.

The offset seat accommodates two passengers. Directly behind the driver is a roomy package compartment which, combined with the special English coach boot, gives an unusual amount of luggage room for a car of this type. The new Victoria is upholstered with broadcloth; fittings are in hammered silver finish; the exterior is Lush green. In line with the new reduced Franklin prices, effective in May, the cars sell for $2,750, which price includes all equipment, even to spare tire and tube.

5,000 TO CELEBRATE DETROIT'S BIRTHDAY

Detroit, Mich., June 19.—(Special.)—Two hundred and twenty-five years ago the French explorer, Sieur de la Mothe Cadillac, landed on the shores of a broad river, built a settlement which he called Fort Pontchartrain and laid the foundation for the present city of Detroit. Five thousand French-Americans and French-Canadians will meet here this week to celebrate the anniversary.

The event will assume national significance, as two other anniversaries will be commemorated at the same time. One is the landing in the American colonies of Kosciuszko, Polish patriot, 150 years ago, and the other is the death of Thomas Jefferson, author of the American Declaration of Independence 100 years ago.

Observance of Patriotic week will begin Saturday, June 26, and extend into July. Several "days" have been set aside for special observance: namely, "Patriots' Pledge of Faith day," Universal Education day, Founders' day, Greater America day, and Signers' day.

During pioneer days, Detroit, because of the fact that it lay in the heart of the Great Lakes region, was the gateway to the northwest. Three flags were raised over Detroit at various times—French, English and finally the Stars and Stripes.

To preserve memory of the important steps Detroit has taken in American progress, tablets and memorials have been placed on all historical sites. One of these is the battle of Bloody Run, which revealed the notorious Pontiac conspiracy.

'80' COACH CROSSES CONTINENT IN 7 DAYS

As the official car of the Lee Highway association, a Pierce-Arrow series 80 coach has just completed a trip that crossed the continent twice and is now back in Washington after its long journey.

The trip was made by Dr. S. M. Johnson, general director of the Lee Highway association, Major I. C. Barber, U. S. A., and James A. Whitcomb, the owner of the Series 80.

The party left Washington on April 9, stopping in 33 towns in the interest of the association and spending two days at the sixth annual convention at Frederick, Okla., and arriving at San Diego on April 29. The actual running time for the trip across the continent was seven days.

Returning, the party visited the Grand Canyon and passed through Albuquerque and St. Louis. No out-of-the-ordinary adventure was experienced during the trip. The roads were in very good condition.

Mr. Whitcomb, who purchased the car for the double cross-continent trip, is a retired New York capitalist, now living in Washington, D. C. This is the fifth Pierce-Arrow that he has owned.

J. O. WOOD SPEAKS AT WOODSTOCK, GA.
Woodstock, Ga., June 19.—(Special.)—J. O. Wood, representative in the Georgia legislature from Fulton county, and candidate for governor, spoke here Saturday afternoon to a large audience.

Mr. Wood outlined issues of the campaign and predicated his claim to the governor's post on a clean, business-like and economical administration.

PAIGE FACTORY IS SPOTLESSLY CLEAN

What price cleanliness? The Paige-Detroit Motor Car company spends $100,000 a year just to keep its plant clean, yet considers it cheap at the price. Before it installed the special equipment and arranged the present elaborate clean-up system, the cost was higher—but it was figured in production totals, in injuries to workers, faulty workmanship, and damaged parts. With the increased expenditure for cleanliness, final costs were reduced, so that the purchaser of a Paige or a Jewett not only gets a better car, but saves on the purchase price.

The effects of constant cleaning are not only physical, but psychological. In a clean plant, the workers naturally do clean work and turn out clean jobs.

Few kitchens are kept cleaner or watched more carefully than the mammoth plant in which Paiges and Jewetts are constructed. Everything is ship-shape.

Before the Paige plant operated on its present system, time had to be allowed for the workers to sweep up around their machines, cover up so often, as steel chips or shavings or other waste accumulated. Now, guards have been installed on all the grinding and boring machines, so that the chips and shavings leave the machine through chutes, to be collected in receptacles. One worker, making regular rounds, empties the receptacles, and this one man now does the work formerly requiring five men.

Twice a day the cement floors of the wide aisles through the factory are scrubbed with soap and water.

In one department, cleanliness is carried out to the extent of barring every one but the operators of the machinery, even factory officials and executives being refused admittance. This is the great enclosed enamelling department. Filtered and washed air circulates through the immense chamber containing the conveyors and ovens, through which thousands of metal parts pass hourly. Unfortunately, this interesting operation cannot be exhibited to visitors, for if only one man walks through, lint from his clothes and dust from his sole-leather mars the work.

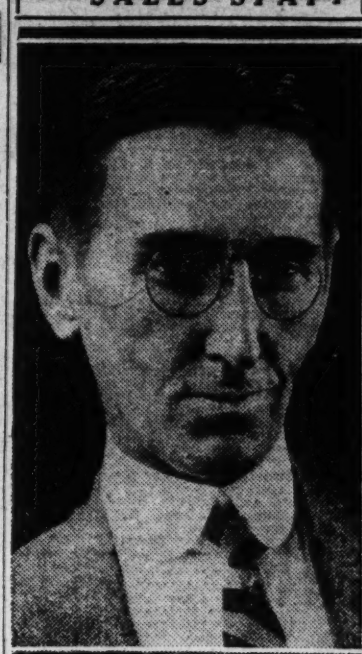

In all other departments visitors are welcome.

NEW PEST RAVAGES FARMS NEAR FORSYTH

Forsyth, Ga., June 19.—(Special.)—Considerable alarm was manifested by local farmers today because of the appearance in cotton fields of insects known as "Texas fleas."

T. R. Talmadge, manager of the Southern Cotton Oil company, today exhibited a stalk of cotton damaged by the insect. The stalk had the appearance of being attacked by lice. No boll weevils have been seen here this year, but farmers claim the new pest is worse.

JOINS YARBROUGH'S SALES STAFF

H. MILTON SMITH.
Announcement has just been made by officials of the Yarbrough Motor company of the appointment of H. Milton Smith as retail sales representative.

Mr. Smith is well known in Atlanta and prior to his entering the automobile business five years ago was proprietor of the Milton Smith Men's Shop on Edgewood avenue.

ASA G. CANDLER, JR., VISITS MILLEN, GA.

Millen, Ga., June 19.—(Special.)—Asa G. Candler, Jr., prominent Atlanta capitalist, visited Millen today to inspect the plant of the Southeastern Compress & Warehouse company, of which he is sole owner. He was accompanied by W. H. Glenn and T. E. Fugate, officials of the warehouse company.

Mr. Candler and associates were given an automobile trip over the county as guests of Robin Gray, H. W. Matthews and J. K. Cameron, of Millen.

FINAL RITES TODAY FOR JAMES W. BUSH

Barnesville, Ga., June 19.—(Special.)—Funeral services for James W. Bush, 58, one of Lamar county's most prominent citizens, who died in Atlanta Friday night, will be held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Redbone district. The Rev. H. H. Jones will officiate and interment will be in the local cemetery.

Besides his wife, he is survived by one daughter, Mrs. W. R. Bartlett, of Griffin, and four sons, Clark T. Bush, of Athens; Hugh W. Bush, of Atlanta, and Charles and James Bush, of Barnesville.

SOCIETY LEADERS TAKE OWN CARS TO EUROPE

Americans who visit France season are going to see places of interest other than the famous auto centers, if one may judge from rapidly growing practice of taking private motor cars right along on same steamer that takes one to continent.

The big French liner, "Paris," its last trip out, for example, carries no fewer than 28 passengers who checked their automobiles right along with their baggage and will drive the right off the dock at Havre.

Among these were Miss Anne Morgan, noted society leader and well-known worker, who took along her Chrysler Imperial "80" town car; Mrs. Ed Chase, editor of Vogue Magazine, who took along a Chrysler "70" sedan; and Keith McLeod, who shipped a Chrysler Imperial "80" roadster. Five of the private cars shipped on this voyage of the Paris thus were Chryslers, dictating the immense popularity of this line.

American cars are for sale and rent in France, of course, but the idea way to tour the country or visit places of interest is in one's own car, with which one is familiar and of which one knows the mechanics and the private cars, more and more, they are doing so.

Under the present plan, it is longer necessary to create an automobile in order to ship it on an ocean liner. Instead, one drives it right to the dock, it is hoisted on board by a crane, and is tethered in the hold of the vessel by means of ropes attached to the wheels. On arrival at one's destination, one's car is gently out on the pier and the owner gets in and drives away.

Miss Morgan will use her Chrysler in visiting the devastated regions of France, for the rehabilitation work which she has been working over since the armistice, while the others employ theirs in touring France and other European countries.

COLLEGE MEN SOUGHT
BY MANY FACTORIES

Doors leading to high executive positions in the automotive industry will be opened to 20 college graduates this summer at the Oldsmobile factory by the Motor Works, Lansing, Mich. Young men will be given every opportunity to develop their talents in all fields of the industry—factory production, engineering laboratories, inspection, service and all phases of selling activities.

This plan is being adopted to assure the continuance of the creed and traditions of Oldsmobile Works and obtain and train young men to fill executive positions being created in the expanding Oldsmobile organization.

This is the first time an automobile company has adopted a broad program of going to leading universities to select its future executives, though this plan has been used by other companies in several other branches of business. Its adoption by Oldsmobile is in line with the pioneer of this veteran company has done to promote automotive advancement during the 20 years of its business.

Early this spring letters were sent to the deans of the college of engineering in seven universities, outlining the Oldsmobile plan and requesting cooperation, which was cheerfully given in each case. Later E. E. Eby, assistant manager of Oldsmobile Works, visited the universities and personally interviewed senior students who had a career in the automotive industry. Those who filled the preliminary requirements were brought to the Oldsmobile plant at Lansing, Mich., where through the factory, interviewed executives and some of their number chosen.

The 20 graduates will work under a direct and close supervision of the personnel department. They will be rotated through the organization to determine their individual talents. Those who show an aptitude for sales and service work will be given a different rotation than those whose talents tend toward engineering and production. It is the belief of Oldsmobile Works officials that this new plan will bring the automotive industry some of the best talent of the next generation, backed by a university education and year's practical work under the

RATES ON EXPORT
COTTON APPROVED

Washington, June 19.—(P)—The interstate commerce commission has found to be justified proposals to increase rates on export cotton to New Orleans from stations on the Atchafalaya, Topeka and Santa Fe between Texico and Corral, New Mexico, and from stations between Hatch and Berino, New Mexico. The increase would be from $1.06 to $1.19 per hundred pounds.

The new schedule, against which protests were made by the New Orleans joint traffic bureau, acting in behalf of shippers of cotton, had been under suspension until June 27.

ALBANY MEN LEASE AMERICAN THEATER

Americus, Ga., June 19.—(Special.)—Gortatowsky Brothers, of Albany, have leased the Rylander theater for 10 years, from Walter Rylander, who erected the building here several years ago. The theater was formerly operated by Emory Rylander, R. B. Wilby and Herbert Kinney, of Selma, Ala. R. A. Herring, and D. F. Fields, the present manager.

The Gortatowsky interests, it is stated, will present high class legitimate road attractions at the playhouse, in addition to moving pictures, and the theater will be linked in with amusement houses at Albany and Athens.

WISCONSIN SCHOOL WILL ACCEPT GIFTS

Madison, Wis., June 19.—(P)—Accepting gifts approximating $84,000, including $30,000 from the engineering foundation, the board of regents of the University of Wisconsin indicated today that it will not follow a policy of refusing gifts from educational foundations, except from the Rockefeller and Carnegie foundations.

Supervision of interested executives, these young men will be enabled to develop their talents more rapidly than if they first had to overcome the barriers of chance before finding their proper niche in life.

The automotive industry is young and has been the product of young men. Oldsmobile officials, who themselves are young, believe that the industry must keep this youthful spirit if its future progress is to be commensurate with that of its past.

HUDSON, ESSEX
PRICES LOWER

Hudson and Essex cars are now at the lowest price levels in the company's history, following reductions which have just been announced. The new schedule brings the Essex coach to $735, the Hudson coach to $1,065, the Hudson brougham to $1,285 and the Hudson 7-passenger sedan to $1,550; all prices f. o. b. Detroit.

This reduction came at the end of a five-month period in 1925, in which Hudson-Exsco buyers broke all records in their demand for these cars. The January-June period saw 114,500 cars shipped from the plant, or practically 1,000 in excess of the 1925 period—the record-holding season up to date.

At the same time these figures became available it was stated also that the retail sales for May had reached 33,500 cars. Considering holidays, this was practically at the same high rate as obtained in April. The April and May months saw the delivery of 68,500 cars to Hudson-Exsco buyers, which is said to be far in advance of any previous mark.

The reduced prices on Hudson and Essex cars, said R. D. Chapin, chairman of the board of directors, "are in line with the company's policy of offering outstanding values to the motoring public."

"This year to date has brought us an exceptionally active business. We have enjoyed too the advantage of large additional production of quality motor cars on a basis of great economy. Our company has always maintained a reputation of unusual values by motor purchasers. Never have we been able to offer such low prices before."

DISCONTINUANCE OF FLINT CARS DENIED

In a communication received Saturday from W. C. Durant, president of Flint Motor company, the management of the Atlanta Flint branch is informed that the proposed sale of the Flint plant in Flint, Mich., will in no way affect the production of Flint motor cars.

Mr. Durant advises that the proposed sale of the plant in question is wholly dependent upon the approval of stockholders on July 1 next and that in event of acceptance of the offer to purchase the production of Flint cars will continue uninterrupted in the two other factories owned by the company.

Reasons given for the proposed disposal of the factory are the immediate application of the funds accruing from the sale toward increased production facilities in the other two plants and manufacturing economies made possible by the lower operating costs engineers have found possible under the changes considered.

RECORD OAT YIELD HARVESTED IN FLOYD

Rome, Ga., June 18.—(Special.)—Eighty bushels an acre was the average production of oats on a 70-acre field at Berry schools where threshing has been completed, according to C. F. Russell, superintendent of the farm. The average per acre for the United States is 30 bushels of oats and the average in Georgia is much lower than that, he said.

Ten years ago the field on which this crop was grown, was like hundreds of other fields in the flatwoods section of Floyd county, where much of the land is considered the poorest in this section of Georgia. Under a system of crop rotation and soil building the land was built up to the point where 70 acres produced 5,550 bushels of oats.

Installing Ginners.

Millen, Ga., June 19.—(Special.)—John C. Wilson and G. C. Dekle are installing a large gin here and the Millen Ginners is being repaired. These two plants have a capacity of more than 100 cotton bales daily.

Overland's Used Car Home

In keeping with the high standards of their company, the Willys-Overland, Incorporated, have leased one of the most modern buildings in Atlanta to house their used car department. This company, like many others in Atlanta, offer the public some real values in reconditioned used cars and which has much to do with Atlanta's tremendous volume of used car sales each month.

NEW YORK FOUND TO BE 'WIDE OPEN'
BY ADVERTISERS

New York, June 19.—(P)—Advertising men from all parts of the British empire have found New York so "wide open" they do not have to be presented with a key to the city. Mayor Walker was told when he greeted them today at city hall.

Mayor Walker had just presented the advertising men, numbering 40, with a scroll of welcome.

"We don't give keys any more," he said.

"Oh," said Charles W. Stokes, vice president of the Advertising club of Montreal, Canada, "we don't need a key. The town is wide open."

A roar of laughter from those in the mayor's guest room, participated in by the mayor himself, brought an explanation from Stokes.

"I meant New York's hospitality is so boundless, its facilities for making guests at home so great, that no name tag is necessary," he said.

GEORGIA FOUNDRY
SHIPS BIG ORDER TO SOUTH AMERICA

Cartersville, Ga., June 19.—(Special.)—The Cartersville Foundry & Machine company has just shipped four large ore jigs, weighing 12 tons each, to the Guggenheim mining interests in Bolivia.

The order was obtained after a representative of the mining concern came here and investigated other jigs made by this firm for miners in the Andes mountains. The order was shipped to New York and from there will be transported to South America by steamer.

GASOLINE WAR ON IN SOPERTON, GA.

Soperton, Ga., June 19.—(Special.)—A gasoline war is on here! Early today the product was selling for 28 cents and late this afternoon it brought 15 cents. The war started when an agent put up a sign advertising gas at 25 cents, three cents under the price of other dealers.

HUPP '8' ROADSTER
A POPULAR MODEL

Here's a jaunty sport roadster, all trimmed up pretty ready to go. It is a Hupmobile straight eight, and although its "official" passenger seating is four, Son Jack or Sister Sue can, crowd in the whole gang when they take off for a spin in the country, without any strain to anyone's comfort or good nature, according to T. E. Cauthorn, of the Thompson-Cauthorn Motor company, Hupmobile representative in this section.

"The popularity of the roadster, however, is not limited to the more youthful drivers as might be presumed," continued Mr. Cauthorn. "It appeals as well to middle-aged and veteran drivers who want something of the swank and swagger that goes with this car. It is the ideal companion for the business man who has a fondness for golf. With this speedy sport car he can be on time for those important afternoon business appointments that are best kept in the open, preferably on a good golf course."

"We are very enthusiastic in expressing our praise for this car. Its flare of bright colors and nickel trimmings will command respect, whether speeding along the highway or pulling up to the porte-cochere of the most fashionable country club. It is built in response to the many requests we have had for the powerful, straight eight Hupmobile motor in a sport model. Its proved performance in smoothness, power, pickup and speed makes the motor especially suited to withstand the excessive wear and tear that comes to a car of this type."

"Mounted on the 125-inch wheel-base chassis this car is long and low with a sprightly array of colors and striping to accentuate its sportive lines. The body is finished in two shades of light green with darker green striping and belt line. Standard equipment includes five steel wheels and balloon tires and it lists at $2,045, f. o. b. Detroit."

"This car leaves nothing to be desired, even by the most fastidious buyer. The list of equipment is especially suited to meet the needs of the sportsman. It includes removable California khaki top with natural wood bows and nickel-plated supporting rods; the car's colorful appearance is further embellished with a generous selection of nickel-plating on all lamps, windshield supports and windshield wiper. Adequate carrying space

GENERAL BUSINESS
GOOD, SAYS JORDAN

Four things will make 1926 a most satisfactory year from the standpoint of general business, as well as from the standpoint of the automobile industry, according to Edward S. Jordan, president of the Jordan Motor Car company.

1—The fact that everyone is buying conservatively, conserving resources and not expanding inventories, is the most satisfying fact in the present merchandising situation.

2—If everyone was buying recklessly we would have cause for apprehension. Cautious, conservative buying means the continuation of an even curve of rising demand throughout the balance of the year, with a replacement business which will be very healthy in the fall.

3—The awakening of automobile manufacturers to the necessity of regulating production in keeping with the financial resources of the dealer's organization, has sufficiently restrained production to avoid any slump which might come as penalty for over-production.

4—The public, from whom the demand for new cars is insatiable, is beginning to reduce prices on their old cars, realizing that the dealers cannot afford to pay as much for second-hand automobiles as the public thinks they should. This means a decent profit for the dealer and his entry in the general market as a class with substantial buying power.

—The automobile industry, which is buried once a year by people who sell stocks short in the market, was slated for a funeral this spring. This was fortunate, because it was the means of curtailing production at just the time when over-expansion was threatening.

Sales during the second quarter will again demonstrate the fact that the saturation point will never be reached until everyone has one and none ever wants out.

is provided in rumble compartment and the seat cushions may be easily removed if greater space is required. Locker space in the rear deck is also reached by convenient door on the right side."

Los Angeles Man
Elected President Of Optimist Clubs

Lexington, Ky., June 19.—(P)—On car E. Smith, of Los Angeles, Cal., was elected president and Denver, Colo., was selected as the meeting place for 1927 by the eighth annual convention of Optimist International, at the closing session of the 1926 meeting here today.

It is expected that the Denver convention will be held the first week in July, 1927. The other officers elected today are: N. F. Nolan, of Dayton, Ohio, vice president; Paul Gibbons, of Philadelphia, second vice president; A. B. Walker, of Houston, Texas, third vice president; and E. F. Chapell, of Toronto, Canada, fourth vice president.

Merger of Optimist and Civitan clubs will not be considered by Optimist International until next year, as the convention here voted to postpone any action of the matter until next year.

It is not known by Optimist officials whether the Civitan clubs will vote on the proposed merger at their national convention in Philadelphia the latter part of this month.

HAMRICK KILLED
SPAN ON BRIDGE

Tallahassee, Ga., June 19.—(Special.)—Arthur Hamrick, 24, well-known resident of this town, was killed early Saturday when his automobile was wrecked on a span at Mize bridge, near here. His car fell 10 feet below the span and he was grasping the steering wheel when he discovered.

Boy Bourne, of Stendman, was slightly injured at the same bridge last Tuesday.

Funeral services for Hamrick will be held Sunday afternoon.

Jackson Delegates Return.

Jackson, Ga., June 19.—(Special.)—The Jackson Kiwanis club had the largest number of delegates at the International Kiwanis club convention at Montreal of any club in Georgia, according to local delegates. Those who made the trip from here were O. A. Pound, W. A. Boster, J. W. O'Neal and E. R. Edwards.

Fine Manufacturing and its result

Hupmobile Eight—So Superior That It Seems Like a New Principle—Initiates Momentous Change in Motor Car Buying

Hupmobile with its Eight is leading the way in a momentous change in the motor car industry.

It believes that the surface has not yet been scratched in revealing the fine things in beauty and performance which will inevitably be achieved in cars priced around $2500.

For its own Eight incorporates a value hitherto unknown—and must be regarded as first to proclaim, on behalf of the industry, the era—which is surely here—when the very topmost in beauty, and quality, and performance, can be bought for a $2500 expenditure.

The confirmation is in the Hupmobile Eight itself—in its distinguished beauty and its spacious luxury—its unexcelled smoothness and agility—its super-abundant power—its unexampled ease of handling—its engineering superiorities—its assured longer life—its ability to stay put—in every one of the special qualities which are making the straight eight the preferred fine car today.

The reason why Hupmobile gets results out of the straight eight, and puts qualities into it, so superior as to make the Hupmobile Eight seem like a new principle, is—

That Hupmobile has kept its mind—first, last and all the time for 18 years—on the highest type of manufacturing and engineering, above and beyond every other consideration.

Engineers are saying now that the only eight which comes close enough to the Hupmobile to justify comparison is a fine Italian car selling for several thousand dollars more than the Hupmobile price of $2345—and this is probably true.

The reason why this is true is the precise reason already given.

In Europe large production is impossible. So manufacturers give all their time and thought and creative genius to the advancement of fine engineering and manufacturing.

Over here, America became the world's masters of mass production, because of our enormous sales possibilities, and the opportunities for the legitimate profit which accrues.

But, with a few honorable exceptions, this proud position has been attained at the expense of fine manufacturing and real engineering progress.

Hupmobile has never deviated from its original purpose of putting manufacturing and engineering first—never for so much as a single month yielding to the tempting lure in the other direction.

Now, in this Eight, it adds surpassing and exquisite beauty of line and riding luxury of the highest degree.

This very Straight Eight was being developed all through the years while Hupmobile was earning its world-wide reputation for manufacturing and engineering.

Hupmobile simply took the soundest principle—which any manufacturer of the finer, higher-priced cars might have utilized—and applied the scientific Hupmobile practice of search and research, test and re-test, analysis and re-analysis (which is the practice obtaining in Europe's leading cars).

Thus it produced the Eight which is now carrying its magnificent success to heights far above the unprecedented level reached in its first year.

During the years that this Eight has been in development and production Hupmobile has advanced into the first rank of American manufacturers, and is applying to the Eight the precision manufacture and the beauty ideals which are its guiding stars, and with the wonderful results which such manufacturing assures.

And the public's record-breaking buying of the Eight as one of America's finest and most distinguished cars, has come as a reward of the fine manufacturing and engineering which is Hupmobile's history.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

THE ADVANCING SOUTH. In his book, "The Advancing South" (Doubleday-Page), Edwin Mims has written one of the best chapters of our history, a chapter of events so recent that many of us have not thought of them as history; for his is not the usual eulogy of a lost cause, but rather a chronicle of the living liberalism of a growing south.

Mr. Mims is professor of English at Vanderbilt university. Himself a southerner of note, he is in a position to know of the many ways in which enlightened thought is penetrating the states that have been supposed to be solidly reactionary. Published now in the midst of booms and advertising campaigns, the book will serve to inspire those of our people who are eagerly looking for signs of similar development in thought and art. It will give hope to the pessimist. It will remind the optimist that all is not accomplished. For the very fact that

Mr. Mims could include in one small book all the liberal tendencies—and one is impressed with the fact that he included them all—is in itself a sign that the heaven has not yet reached to the mass of the inhabitants of our southland.

No doubt some will class Mr. Mims with other authors who are accused of "throwing off" on the south for sport. But this criticism will be more unfair than it usually is, as this book is very largely a defense, albeit an unintentional one. To some conservative the admission of the need of the south for a defense will be as onerous as a criticism. But it is against the reputations fixed on us by such people that Mr. Mims is defending us. Our over-ardent patriots, however, need not worry about the satisfaction any critics will derive from this clear and true statement of conditions in the south. In the first place, not many will read it, as the book will be thirteenth in development of the south, and are eager to learn about it. In the second place, those who do read it will not be surprised and favorably impressed with the progress we have made. Mr. Mims brings out facts that even our friends scarcely suspect.

"The Advancing South" is really a collection of essays, some of which have been previously published in periodicals. The author deals in turn with the condition of our agriculture, industry, educational facilities, press, literature, women, negroes and church. In each of these phases he goes into detail about the progress of rational thought in its perpetual battle with outworn conventions, and in all he holds out definite hope for a victory of general enlightenment.

Georgians play a conspicuous part in these pages. From Sidney Lanier and Henry Grady to Frances Newman and John Wade there have always been some citizens of this state at the front in the fight for liberalism. Unfortunately, as Mr. Mims points out, Georgia has not kept the lead which her citizens made for her intelligently after the civil war. Not only that, but, as the author shows, we have done most to hold the south back. The young Georgians can find inspiration in this volume, and they can see the desolation brought on by ignorance and prejudice.

Such a book is needed. Those leaders of progress in different lines can now learn of the work of one another and together push on towards true democracy. (Clark Foreman.)

"HEAL." When Isa Glenn wrote her first story, Atlanta and the south, the home of her childhood not only expressed appreciation of her work, but predicted that she would make a place for herself on the list of popular writers. Atlanta was right and today Atlanta and the south are proud of Isa Glenn, for in her latest book, "Heal," she verifies the prediction that she would be successful in the world of fiction.

The author locates her story in the far away Philippines and American life in this country is an old, old story, and Miss Glenn has not only given a description of these conditions from her personal viewpoint, but she relates in clever style why Americans go to the Philippines, what they are supposed to do while there, and how they while away their leisure hours.

Isa Glenn weaves her story around a young West Pointer, Tom Verney, one of the world's dreamers, who goes out to Manila to join his regiment. He is young, attractive, and with life visions too fine for the drab routine and temptations of army life in the tropics. He lands at the army post. On the same boat was Charlotte Carson, a young woman whose mission was to teach the young natives the story of civilization. And there was Richard Salsbury, who knew Tom Verney better than he knew himself. Captain and Mrs. Jennings and Major and Mrs. Robbins, the latter being a friend of Miss Carson's mother.

The author's picture of the rainy season in this tropical land is wonderfully written and will be read with great interest. She proves to be a skillful writer in portraying the different effects of the influences that are thrown around the characters she has selected to tell the story of life in the Philippines.

The leading idea of the story so cleverly written by this young southern woman is to impress upon her readers the life led by Americans, especially in the army, in the early days of this century. She has had the effect of the atmosphere on the Americans from a mental, physical, social standpoint, and even the social standpoint, for here, as well as in other countries, there are pink teas, gossip over the telephones, much criticism, and a little sarcasm caused by the same old jealousy that continues to rule the world in all walks of life.

The writer of "Heal" married an army man and she is thoroughly familiar with army life. She has written away Manila, so what she has written bears the seal of authenticity, and is after all, something more than a love story of the Philippine Islands. (Alfred A. Knopf, publisher.)

NEW FICTION RECEIVED. God and Tony Hewitt. By Albert Kinross, author of "The Torch." A brilliant novel of London journalism, in which the author's own life is a pathetic description of the war in the Near East, and a most entertaining romance. The story will be read with interest. (Houghton Mifflin Co., Boston.)

Pine Creek Ranch. Harold Bindloss, is filled with the incidents and the adventures that the name suggests. The story is woven around a young girl, the mistress of Pine Creek ranch, whose husband is the victim of a plot not only to cheat him of his ranch but to take his life. With the assistance of a young neighbor, whose ranch is also in danger, this brave young woman put up such a plucky fight the robbers and swindlers were outwitted at the last moment.

It is a real story filled with adventures and with all the charm of the prairie. (Frederick Stokes & Co., New York.)

Men of Mystery. By Wilder Anthony, whose stories of the west—"the old west of hard ponies and harder men"—are being very much enjoyed by lovers of the hard days that were lived by men and women of courage and strength.

The story of Bob Lindsay and the fight he made for name, honor, love and life is worth reading. (Macaulay Co., New York.)

The Haunting Hand. By W. Adolphe Roberts, who is well known as a writer of mystery stories. The story is truly American, and the author's style is around "movie men and their mannequins." (Macaulay Co., New York.)

SMALL BOOKS. Zuleika Dobson. By Max Beerbohm, with introduction by Francis Hackett, of which the publisher writes: "It is a long story with no dullness, plenty of variation and such a solicitude for words."

De Profundis. By Oscar Wilde, with introduction by Frank Harris. The stories included in this volume are the last writings of the author—it was written during the last six months of his imprisonment, "when courage and hope had been crushed from his soul." (The Modern Library, Inc., New York.)

These little books are of brown limp leather with gold decorations, hard-bound. Price 55 cents.

The Road to a Loving Heart. Compilation by Helen M. Winslow, the poems being by such writers as John Oxenham, Edgar Guest, Ella Wheeler Wilcox, Herman Hagedorn, etc. (George Sully & Co., New York.)

Constructive Modernism. Positive Factors in the Sanest and Strongest Spiritual Movement of the Christian Era. It is by Lawrence W. New. (Banner Press, Emory University.)

The Beauties of Friendship. One of a series of "Sentiment Books," by Samuel Francis Woolard, that took the country by storm a few years ago. The million-dollar mark was soon passed, and then came the world war! During the last two years the request repeatedly came to republish the little volume, so this has been done in sheer self-defense. The Goldsmith-Woolard Pub. Co., Wichita, Kan.)

BOOKS FOR BOYS AND GIRLS. When Yesterday Was Young. By Isla May Mullins, who is well known to the juvenile world as a writer of popular and interesting stories. The first chapter bears the headline of "Beginnings and Endings" and the beginning of the story is during the summer time in the state of Alabama. The story opens during the Civil war and to a little girl it is a wonderful sight to see the marching of soldiers, but she does not understand why they are hidden away when the strange men in blue uniforms are ransacking their home. It is a thrilling story with just the appeal to touch the young reader's heart as she follows the little southern girl of sixteen summers and then on and on until romance comes. George H. Doran and company, New York.

THE CLOTHES WE WEAR. This is the subject of interest to a Journey club of travels for a class of school boys and girls with a most attractive frontpiece, entitled "The Journey Club Meets." This book is one of the series by Frank G. Carpenter and Frances Carpenter. The story goes that the school children decided to take a journey and to see for themselves how the cotton clothes they wear are produced.

These most interesting and intelligent boys and girls had learned through the training of a real teacher to "find out" things for themselves, so it was with keen zest that they started to call on a farmer and to inspect the cotton fields. This was the beginning of learning about cotton goods, the manufacture of it, etc. After this other subject was studied bringing both interest and information to these bright young minds. The American Book company.

"The Children's Classics." McMillan, New York.

The Fairy of Intra. By Johanna Spyri, author of Heidi, with translation by Elizabeth P. Stork. The little book is interestingly illustrated with four full page color pictures. This is one of the children's classics as published by Lippincott.

The Child on His Knees. By Mary Dixon Thayer, is the title of a collection of poems simply expressing the thoughts of a child who has been instructed in the Catholic religion. It is published by MacMillan. Among the poems a very simple thought and one that follows the child through-out life is "Giving Back."

"I have so many lovely things That seem to be my own, But it was You who gave them all, Dear God, and when I'm grown Please show me how to give them back."

CURRENT MAGAZINES. The Century Magazine for June has for its leading article "A Woman for the Senate—Party Affiliation and the Woman Voter," by Ida Clyde Clarke. "If Lincoln Had Yielded, and Withdrawn Major Anderson from Fort Sumter in 1861," by Webb Watson. "The Americanization of Canada," Socially American, the Dominion Remains Politically British, and other interesting articles by well known writers will prove of interest to the reader, as will be "Idle Hands," a human interest story by Janet Fairbank.

Scribner's Magazine in its June issue is unusually interesting and should be found on the library table as well as the newstand. The picture of "An Italian Peasant," from the water color by Fortuny, makes a most attractive frontpiece. William Allen White's story is "The End of an Epoch—The Passing of the Apostles of Liberalism in the United States," with illustrations by C. R. Hildreth. Huntingdon discusses intelligently "What the Weather Does to Us," Galsworthy serial, "The Silver Season of Co-Education," by Frank R. Arnold, is clever.

The St. Nicholas Magazine for the month of June will frequently be seen as part of the bag and baggage of Camp Fire and Scout girls, for they have closed their school books and are now on the way to attractive camps among the mountains, north, south, east and west. Fortunately is the girl or boy who has the opportunity of enjoying camp life—counts you can tell them in any crowd.

LITERARY DRIFTWOOD.

In the person of Julia Collier Harris, another Houghton Mifflin company author is presented among the recipients of the Pulitzer prize awards. Amy Lowell was awarded the prize for poetry for her volume "What's O'clock; and Julian Harris, son of the creator of Uncle Remus, Joel Chandler Harris, and editor and owner of the Columbus, Ga., Enquirer Sun, accepted the Pulitzer medal for the "most disinterested and meritorious public service" only on the condition that his wife, Julia Collier Harris, share honors equally with him.

She, who has aided him in all his campaigns against the Klan, anti-evolution laws, lynching, and injustice and incompetency generally, is herself the author of "The Life and Letters of Joel Chandler Harris," and the translator of "The Foundling Prince," which will be published in a new popular edition this fall. Mr. Harris was also unanimously nominated as a member of the advisory board of the Columbia School of Journalism, to fill the vacancy created by the death of Solomon R. Griffin of the Springfield Republican.

Everyone coming up from Washington remarks the vogue in political and social circles there of Claude G. Bowers' "Jefferson and Hamilton." Body of Russian Singer Is Found In Hudson River

New York, June 19.—(AP)—Last April Alexander Nijen, Russian artist and singer, vanished from the stage of the Forty-fourth street theater.

Early today his brother-in-law, Jacob Volkoff, also an artist, identified a body which was taken from the Hudson river last night as that of Nijen.

Volkoff told police he had been in touch with Nijen twice since the disappearance. On May 25 Nijen called at the studio apartment that they had shared together, and said he was worried about the welfare of his wife and two children in Russia.

"I am sick and tired of it all," he declared. Shortly before he dropped from the chorus of the "Song of the Flame," in April Nijen painted a set of Easter eggs and sent the picture to President Coolidge, who wrote him a letter of appreciation.

JACKSON WILL HEAD CARTERSVILLE SCHOOL.

Cartersville, Ga., June 19.—(Special.)—Jesse W. Jackson was named principal of the Douglas Street school, at a meeting of the board of education Thursday. He also will teach the seventh grade, a new addition to the curriculum of the school.

A summer school is in progress at Market Street school, H. B. Robertson, Mrs. Robertson and Miss Katherine Stowe being in charge.

The lobbies and cloak-rooms of congress also, the sensation of Mr. Bowers' book is still unabated. Houghton Mifflin company announce that "Jefferson and Hamilton" has recently gone into its seventh printing.

W.C.T.U. CHAPTERS WILL HOLD RALLY AT CARTERSVILLE

Cartersville, Ga., June 19.—(Special.)—Leaders in the Woman's Christian Temperance movement in the seventh district will attend a rally here next Wednesday.

Mrs. John W. L. Brown, of Cartersville, district president, will preside at the exercises, a feature of which will be an address by Judge Malcolm C. Tarver, of Dalton, on "Law Observance."

Mrs. Mary Harris Armour, of Macon, president of the Georgia division of the W. C. T. U., also is expected to be present, together with Mrs. Lela Dillard, secretary of the state organization, and Mrs. Martin Williams, of Atlanta, the vice president. Mrs. William J. Neel will deliver the address of welcome, and Mrs. L. D. Yergan, of Rome, will respond.

Dr. I. A. White will conduct the opening devotional service. Lunch will be served at noon, and the program calls for an afternoon session and a union service at 7 p.m. meeting congregations at night.

RECEIVERS NAMED FOR TRI-STATE TOBACCO BOARD

Elizabeth City, N. C., June 19.—(AP)—Federal Judge I. M. Meade today announced the appointment of M. L. Corey, of New York, James H. Pon, of Raleigh, and J. S. Ward, of Washington, N. C., as receivers for the Tri-State Tobacco Growers Cooperative Marketing association.

Counsel for the association and the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank of Baltimore, a co-defendant in suit, gave notice that an appeal would be filed in the circuit court of appeals for this district.

Responding to the appeal, the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, which is a co-defendant in the suit, gave notice that an appeal would be filed in the circuit court of appeals for this district.

The program calls for an afternoon session and a union service at 7 p.m. meeting congregations at night.

With Thousands turning to the New Willys-Knight Six

Why should you be content with less?

It has:

- Speed between 60 and 70 honest miles an hour.
- Extraordinarily long sustained high speed.
- Power on any hill to pass most cars on high.
- Quick as a cat—acceleration 5 to 25 miles in 7½ seconds.
- Powerful four-wheel mechanical brakes, the last word in safety.
- 54 horsepower, long stroke motor, rated at 20.
- The tax saving is only part of this economy.

STARTLING changes are occurring in motor cars.

Cars that have been "modern" for five years are being swept into the discard by the revolutionary efficiency of new engineering . . .

The Willys-Knight "70" Six with the most powerful standard motor of its size in America was born this year.

It embodies the most advanced—the most efficient engineering—from both sides of the world.

Admittedly the most up-to-date car in America, tests prove it to be the most efficient . . .

Today, six months old, it is the fastest selling Six of its price in the world.

Thirty thousand were sold the past three months. Production, twice increased, still lags behind demand.

Every owner tells a friend. The story spreads.

Its motor is an exclusive feature, possessed by no other car in America. A feature that other manufacturers would give millions to get. A feature that means more to you than all the others, . . . the famous Willys-Knight sleeve valve motor, patented.

Twelve years' tests have proved it to be the most efficient type of automobile motor built.

Better and more powerful than any other motor of its size when new, it grows smoother, more powerful, more efficient with use.

It has no valves to grind. You never lay it up for carbon cleaning.

It has no springs to weaken.

It is practically fool-proof and wear-proof. No Willys-Knight motor, so far as we know, has ever worn out . . .

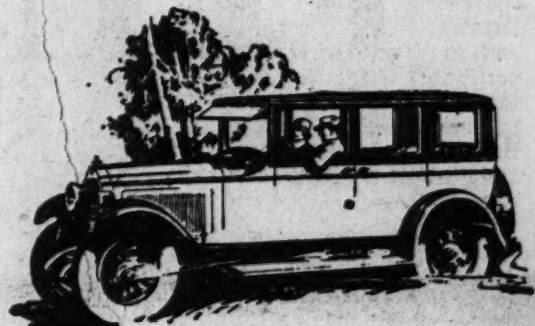

Such advantages cause owners to speak of Willys-Knight with extravagant affection—cause them to drive their cars far beyond the average life of the average car—cause Willys-Knight to take top place in resale value.

You will find the Willys-Knight Six to be the most economical and continuously satisfactory car you can drive.

We believe it is the most perfectly suited car for most families.

Please ride in it. We believe you will find it the car you long have been looking for.

The Willys Finance Plan means less money down, small monthly payments, and the lowest credit cost in the industry. Willys-Knight Six prices from $1295 to $2495 f.o.b. factory. We reserve the right to change prices and specifications without notice.

SHOUPERIOR VALUES

THE following income property will make an ideal investment for some one who wants a home together with a substantial income.

Corner Duplex close to Ponce de Leon

APPRAISED recently at $14,000. Six large rooms in each apartment. The upper apartment has two baths and two separate entrances. It can be divided into two separate apartments each with bath.

Substantial Enhancement Sure

THE proximity to Peachtree and Ponce de Leon make great enhancement a certainty. While this enhancement is taking place the rental will yield a very attractive return on the investment, thus making an ideal home investment. Price for immediate sale, $13,500.

Four-Unit Apartment Reduced $4,000

AT the reduced price this is a remarkable investment. On an important north side street the gross rental is in excess of $2,000. Price only $10,000. $2,000 cash will handle it. It carries a loan of $10,000 and it will quickly pay itself out over the loan.

Richard and Shoup Associates, Inc.

The purchase of a residential lot has been the foundation of many real estate fortunes.

Advantages of TEN-YEAR TERMS

This week a gentleman asked us to look at a certain house that the owner asked $12,500 on the usual 5-year terms. This party said it was what he wanted but it would cost him $153.00 per month in interest and principal payments—more than he could pay. We figured how a house of the same price on our 10-year terms and all payments, including interest, would cost him only $112.00 per month.

One-Third Less Per Month

On our plan of ten years to pay, you are enabled to own a home, built specially for you, of scientific material, on terms of rent, making it within your reach. The terms are about one-third less per month than you now have to pay on a ready built house of inferior construction.

It Saves a Commission

Under the usual 5-year plan you have to re-finance the balance of the creeping notes and mortgage at the end of 5 years, pay a commission on the first mortgage, refinance the difference and run the risk of losing your home. On our plan you know now what each month will cost you and it does not get larger. No refinancing to do.

The Big Advantage

The government will allow on the ordinary frame or brick veneer home a 4% annual depreciation for repairs. On our construction with hollow tile walls it is 2% annually, a saving of one-half. Which means the price of a new home every 15 to 25

THE owner of this house has been transferred from Atlanta to another city and has turned the property over to us for sale. We are offering this place on account of its choice location. It is right near the intersection of Peachtree and East Fifth streets. It is one of the finest residential settings in the entire city of Atlanta, a section made up of beautiful homes and occupied by people of prominence in the social and business world of the city. The house we offer is a two-story structure, well designed and well built. Downstairs there is an entrance hall, living room, library, dining room, kitchen and lavatory. The second floor consists of five bedrooms and two baths; there is a servant's room and bath in the basement. This house is located on a large lot with a number of trees, both front and back; the house has never been occupied except as a personal home and is in the best of condition. Under the circumstances we are in position to give some home buyer an unusual value in this well located home. We like to be in position to give our customers the benefit of advantageous prices for such fine homes.

Mrs. Brenner Speaks Wednesday
At Club Institute on "Finance"

Mrs. A. H. Brenner, of Augusta, vice president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, will preside at the club institute beginning June 28, at the University of Georgia, and will be present throughout the week, and will be the principal speaker. She is written by Mrs. A. P. Brantley, of Blackshear, who will not be able to attend the sessions this year. She has been away from home so much attending the state and general federation conventions, and many district meetings, that she will not be able to come. It is possible for her to leave on the dates selected for the institute.

Speaks Wednesday.

Mrs. Brenner appears on Wednesday's program, June 28, which features the methods of efficient club work, discussed in an open forum of 35 minutes. Her topic, "Finances," will be under this caption: "How can a be a mendicant; subjects for discussion, dues, endowments, assessments, budget, duplication of membership.

"Club members are an important item of education," she says. "I want them. We should study, and promote department chairman. Rotation in the office of treasurer will furnish experience to a greater number, experience that is becoming more and more essential to every woman. Is there any similarity between the home budget and the club budget? How does the club do that shows it to have personality? Does the club work for the service between the club? If the club works for you is it entitled to a living wage? Every person's income should be sufficient to pay for the necessities, benevolences, investments and taxes. Does the state federation and the general federation have these obligations? What may be the legitimate and dignified sources of income should be included under 'personal needs.' What per cent of the income should be set aside for different items? An outline will be used to show that all of the work of the state federation, to which the local clubs contribute, is included under 'taxes,' and may be promoted by a single per capita fee; as is done in some states.

them, not simply that our clubs may receive the most obligation; but we should enlarge and multiply our financial activities as a means of education.

The office of treasurer carries with it an obligation similar to that of a club president.

"Those who expect to attend the institute are asked to give this question of finances careful thought in order to give brief and constructive help in the discussion," concludes the vice president of the state federation.

"Rural Clubs" To Be Featured On Program by Mrs. Farmer

This year's program will be in charge of Mrs. Ira E. Farmer, chairman of home demonstration for the second biennial. Mrs. Farmer attended the national convention of the Federation of Women's Clubs held recently in Atlantic City and spent most of the week at the annual convention in the conferences of the

Mrs. Farmer was also one of the 15 farm women who attended the conference of farm women at Chicago in March, the findings of which have just been published in pamphlet form and which has been characterized as "the beginning of a farm women movement which will be duplicated around any farm home. They will be brought in close touch with the work being done to dignify home making and stop the trend of girls to the cities. And withal will be the spirit of the old college and its culture and satisfaction which mean a new motive power in American life." Mrs. Farnum, in her position of director of public relations for M. Rich and Brothers company, has

Mrs. Pledger Elected Ninth District Treasurer.

Mrs. Henry Pledger, of Windsor, was elected treasurer of the ninth district at the convention held in Martin, June 10 and 11.

She is a valued member of the Windsor Woman's club and the efficient chairman of the department of citizenship.

Mrs. Henry Pledger takes an active part in the progress and welfare of her town and state, and a more capable person could not be found for this office. The district is to be congratulated upon securing her services in this connection.

There are not alone members of the Twentieth Century club, but ladies of every church and club in the city together with those from foreign lands.

Under the leadership of Mrs. J. A. Horn, the newly elected president, who is also first vice president of the Women's Club of the Twentieth Century Club, the club has laid plans for many more activities.

The Twentieth Century club is one of the most cultural organizations in the city. It has a special hour for the children each Saturday afternoon during the winter giving the children many special entertainments along the lines of story, song, hour, and play.

Conducted by one of the teachers who had taken a special course at Co-

FUNERAL ON MONDAY FOR COLONEL J. R. LEE

Funeral services for Colonel Joel B. Lee, 64, retired colonel in the United States army, who died Friday at his home 304 West John Calvin avenue, College Park, after a lingering illness, will be held Monday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the chapel of the A. C. Hemperly company, The Rev. Horace Chase, rector of St. John's Episcopal church, will officiate. The service will be taken up by William D. C. Monday afternoon for interment Tuesday, with military honors, in Arlington cemetery.

Colonel Lee served for more than 20 years in the United States army and at the time of his retirement of $80 has been raised to purchase books for our library. Eight children have been put through our spring term of school due to the education committee's efforts, and clothes furnished for them where needed. The programs for the year have been usually interesting and the finale a song, "The House and the Garden." A park at the depot was planted with roses and shrubbery by a special committee, and the final report of the horticultural committee was that the shrubs planted in yards around our little city, known as "The Hub of the South," were the best of the kind for the beautifying of the town as well as along all cultural avenues.

Feltonian Club Plans July Pageant.

The Taylorsville Feltonia Woman's Club of the 7th district held its regular business and social meeting at the home of Mrs. L. M. Whiteside with Mrs. A. R. Davis as joint hostess. The club voted to celebrate the Fourth of July with a pageant, "The Conquest of the South" the name being directed by Mrs. E. O. Davis and Mrs. W. D. Trippie, Jr., assisted by the committee.

Members were sold by private subscription to the amount of about $100, and same amount sent to headquarters. Coin to be suitably framed and presented to the club. A hall to be built until a clubhouse can be had. A splendid program was then rendered on "Legislation," after which the presentation of the program was paid by Mrs. E. O. Davis.

Walter Jewell's last public demonstration of balloon control and parachute jumping in Atlanta will be made immediately following the "Fathers Day" musical concert at Lakewood Amusement park this afternoon. It was announced Sunday by Oscar Mills, secretary-manager of the Southeastern Fair association and the park. The aeronaut will take off for his ascent at the first favorable turn of the wind between 4:30 and 5:30 o'clock.

Officers and members of the Disabled Veterans of the World War, who are the free guests of the Southeastern Fair and Lakewood park concessionaires at a carnival frolic and dance at Lakewood park Monday afternoon and evening, will be the guests of honor at the Sunday concert.

FUNERAL SATURDAY OF ROGER W. DAVIS

Funeral services for Roger W. Davis, well-known business man and civic leader of Charlotte, N. C., formerly of Atlanta, who died at a private home here last Sunday, will be held Saturday morning from the chapel of H. M. Patterson & Son. The Rev. J. Sproule will officiate. Burial will be in the Crossview cemetery.

Dr. E. L. Connally Relates Early Impressions of City

The following interesting historical data about Atlanta was written by Dr. E. L. Connally, pioneer and beloved Atlantan. Dr. Connally was asked to write the data by the Historical society, and much of the information was experienced personally.

INCIDENTS WHEN ATLANTA WAS A CROSS-ROAD TOWN

By Dr. E. L. Connally.

My father, Thomas W. Connally, and my mother, who was Temperance A. Peacock, were married in 1839 in DeKalb county, Georgia, near the old Mount Gilliam church, of which my mother was a member. Following their marriage, they moved to near Rome, Ga., where my father owned a lot of land, and I was born there in 1837 among the Cherokee Indians. (I am, therefore, a native Cherokee.) In the early part of 1845 they moved back to "Terminus," afterwards called "Marthasville," and then "Atlanta." I have, therefore, been a citizen of Atlanta practically all my life, with the exception of the first seven years, and later a few years in Albany, Ga. I can possibly claim to have lived longer in Atlanta than any other man, at least longer than I know.

For this reason I have been asked by members of the Atlanta Historical society to jot down some of my early recollections of the city. Some time before there was a railroad here Jonathan Norcross, first mayor of the city, owned a small sawmill located near the end of East Alabama street, where the Georgia railroad depot now stands. I do not know how long it was in operation. I have been unable to find a person living who remembers having seen this mill. It was a fascinating object to me, then a boy of 7 or 8 years of age, and made a lasting impression on me. It was crudely constructed, having a small circular inclined platform on which a horse walked, round and round, the walking of the horse put the machinery into motion, causing the saw to work rapidly. This mill cut a large amount of lumber, which was used in building the town. The slabs from the mill were given to the people who lived on the road connecting the town with the road to Decatur, which came to be known as "Decatur street." They patched these slabs together and made shanty houses, which caused that part of town to be called "Slab Town."

Decatur Tradition. There is a tradition in connection with the beginning of Atlanta to the effect that Colonel Edgar Thompson, who located the railroad from Augusta, wanted to stop the line in Decatur, but there was some objection to this, and he ran it south of Decatur, stopping in the woods where the old depot is now located, some six miles west of Decatur. Decatur was a very nice town of about 1000 people. The largest and most fashionable church was the Presbyterian, built of brick, with Rev. Dr. Wilson as pastor. He was afterwards called to the First Presbyterian church of Atlanta, which was located on Marietta street where the federal reserve bank now stands. It was probably because they were a church-going people that they did not want the railroad to stop there. They did not want to be disturbed by noisy, smoky engines.

Mr. Mitchell, who lived in Zebulon, Ga., owned land No. 77 (which is now in the heart of Atlanta, and probably worth one hundred million dollars). He donated this land to the railroad for depot shed, railroad purposes and a park, extending to Decatur street, or road as it was then called. In the early 1870s I was on a trip from Chattanooga to Atlanta with Colonel Dick Peters, a prominent citizen of Atlanta, one of the old pioneers and superintendent of the Georgia railroad. At that time he was running a four-horse stage coach line from here to Griffiths and Columbus and Montgomery. I remember as a small boy having seen that line in operation not far from here. Colonel Peters told me of a conversation between he and Mr. Mitchell, with reference to Atlanta, which I will repeat as I recall it:

Tells of Conversation. "Mr. Mitchell came to my horse stable one morning and told me that he was going to the Grants on Whitehall street, at the viaduct, and said to me: 'Colonel Peters is an old fellow, but he has a lot of money and wants to dispose of my interests here.' 'I said to him: 'Mr. Mitchell, I have no money; I cannot buy.' 'I said: 'Well, I will take $20,000 and would be willing to take your note for that amount.' 'I was having supper that night with Colonel Edgar Thompson and Colonel Long, who was locating the road to Chattanooga for the state of Georgia. I told them about Mr. Mitchell's talk and proposition. I suggested that we three buy his holdings for one-third each. They laughed at me and said, 'Why Peters, Terminus will never be anything but a way-station. Chattanooga will be a better town.' 'About this time the Charleston and Memphis railroad system had also been spoken of, and to some extent adopted."

Decatur Tradition. There is a tradition in connection with the beginning of Atlanta to the effect that Colonel Edgar Thompson, who located the railroad from Augusta, wanted to stop the line in Decatur, but

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

New York, June 19.—As the pleasure-loving population of New York, which after all constitutes but a small part of the total number of people in this city, has left for Europe or points thereabouts, Gotham is sinking into the torpor of summer and dull nights. Night clubs are closing and the number of speak-easies is noticeably on the decline. Still they will be resurrected when the summer season sets in. For the heat of summer is not exactly convivial to burning drinks and hot dancing rooms.

There is a distinct change in the type of people who go abroad this year. Formerly only the elite made a yearly jaunt to the continent. Slowly we find that other and less covering that the expenses won't be so very heavy and that you can live for half the money in France, Germany and Italy. And so they also are bitten by the travel bug. The more that bug bites, the better the steamship companies like it.

A subtle change has also taken place in the cultural standing of the traveling public. Whoever traveled through second-class, say 25 years ago, now travels through first-class. I mean to say that the cultural caliber of second-class passengers has deteriorated. Only that of first-class passengers remains. The New York society flock, in some place up north, in his fertile imagination. For your native New Yorker is the most parsonical individual in the world. He is worse than the peasant in the isolated districts of France. They at least know that there is a Paris some 300 miles away, and he never gives the matter any thought.

Aviator Franco Georgia Bank Ordered Arrested To Fight Return For Defying King Fugitive Plans

Hendaye, France, June 19.—(AP)—Advices reaching here from across the border in Spain say that Commander Ramon Franco, leader of the aerial flight from Palos, Spain, to Buenos Aires, has been sentenced to two months' military arrest. While he was in Brussels giving lectures on the flight, he was informed that King Alfonso desired the Spaniard aviator who flew from Spain to Manila to share in the money collected by public subscription as a reward for his feat. When Franco heard of this he sent a telegram of disapproval to the Marquis de Viana, the Marquis of the royal household in Madrid. The Marquis referred the message to the government, which ordered Franco to return home and serve two months' military arrest for the offense. Franco is said to have refused to comply. He is now in Paris, and it is asserted he intends to remain there until the arrest order is rescinded. Captain Ruiz de Alda, Franco's companion on the flight to South America, is said to be acting as his maker. He hurried back to Madrid from Brussels and is endeavoring to have the government rescind the punishment imposed on Franco, who only a short time ago was hailed as a conquering hero in Spain.

BRUNSWICK CROPS AIDED BY RAINS
Brunswick, Ga., June 19.—(Special)—Midweek rains added thousands of dollars to the value of the tomato crop in the Brunswick district. Owing to continued drought the crop was not sizing up and the quality would have been badly impaired in a few days more.

WATERMELON SEASON IS NEAR IN THOMAS
Thomasville, Ga., June 19.—(Special)—Thomas county in the next several days will start shipping watermelons to the large markets of the north and east. The melon acreage is unusually large around Brunswick and Pavo, and the growers are looking for a fine season between now and July 4.

Bible School in Thomas.
Thomasville, Ga., June 19.—(Special)—A committee of local churches has completed arrangements for a Bible vacation Bible school to be held here during the month of July. The faculty will be selected soon, the committee announced. Similar schools have been held here for several years and have proved successful.

that politics is made. The surmise was—and for this there was nothing but surmise—that Coolidge wished to see Brookhart unseated. As evidence to support this assumption it was cited that the two senators from Coolidge's home state of Massachusetts, Butler and Gillette, voted against Brookhart. That they, as perfectly regular republican senators, could have done otherwise, was suggested by the fact that many perfectly regular republican senators did vote for Brookhart—among them the regular republican leader, Curtis of Kansas, and the two senators from Pennsylvania, Pepper and David Reed. The two Massachusetts republican senators, Butler and Gillette, voted against Brookhart. That they were interpreted in the light of what was assumed to be the white house atmosphere. stronger wave of watchfulness by the public, and of interpretations of the public in terms of whether Coolidge's prestige is holding its own or, as the political phrase goes, "is slipping." The really vital test, however, the indisputable barometer which no one can mistake and no one will undertake to dispute, will be the general election in November. These congressional elections that occur just in the middle of a president's term are always important. If they show a trend adverse to the president in power and to his party, that trend is interpreted as meaning, first, that the president personally will have difficulty in getting his party's renomination, and second, that the whole party, including its presidential candidate, is in danger at the succeeding presidential election, which is the present case comes in 1928.

At present the republicans control all three branches of the government. They have Coolidge in the white house. In the senate they have a nominal majority of 16 (but an actual majority, taking into account the insurgent republicans, of close to nothing). The house is controlled by the republicans by a majority of 69. It is possible for the republicans to lose either the senate or the house, or both. It is possible for the republicans to lose them, possible for the democrats to get majorities, or it is possible for the republicans to suffer such a diminution of their majorities as to constitute the sign of a beginning trend.

If the republicans should lose either the house or the senate everybody will be at once back to the precedents. In 1918, in the middle of Wilson's second term, the democrats lost the lower house. The sign worked and the republicans carried everything at the ensuing presidential election two years later. In 1910 Taft was in the middle of his term as Mr. Coolidge is now in the middle of his. In that year the democrats won the lower house away from the republicans. That time also the sign worked, and in 1912 the democrats won the presidency and both houses of congress.

To state this mid-presidential-term election as it always necessarily is, regardless of which party is "in" and which "out," it is obvious that democratic success in carrying either the house or the senate would have important results. These results would not be confined to merely their significance.

They sometimes remind you of those native in the interior of Africa, of whom the Explorer Stanley speaks in his book Zanzibar. They had lived in immense forests for generations and did not even know the light of day, so dense was the growth. When Stanley told them that beyond their forests lay the world, they were so awestruck they shook their heads. They would not believe him and moved their arms above their heads as if to say: "No, the world is like this. It's all bush."

The New Yorker thinks the sun rises and sets for, by and directly above, Manhattan and there he is wrong, too. Travel will convince him that there are other spots on earth, equally beautiful, equally gay and almost as rich.

LEE MAY OPPOSE EDWARDS IN RACE FOR CONGRESSMAN
Statesboro, Ga., June 19.—(Special)—R. Lee Moore, former congressman, the district announced today he probably would enter the race against Congressman Charles G. Edwards, of Savannah. Four years ago Mr. Moore defeated Congressman Overstreet for the office. At the end of his term, he was a candidate for reelection, but was defeated by Mr. Edwards.

QUEEN OF BULLOCK CHOSEN FOR FETE
Statesboro, Ga., June 19.—(Special)—Miss Dorothy Anderson, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Anderson, of this city, has been chosen to represent Bulloch county as queen in the Savannah water carnival, July 5-6. A prize of $100 in cash has been offered to the queen whose county has the greatest number of cars in the parade to be given on the day of the carnival.

J. R. SMITH CALLS MEETING THURSDAY
J. R. Smith, president of the Atlanta Real Estate board, announced Saturday that the membership will hold a luncheon meeting Thursday, June 24, at 12:30 o'clock at the Hotel Ansley, main cafe.

An interesting program has been arranged and announcements will be made of importance to real estate interests. The principal speaker at the luncheon will be W. A. Hansell, chief of construction of the city. He will outline and explain in detail the installing and developing of the new waterworks system for the city and what it will mean to the citizens and the future growth of Atlanta.

Mr. Hansell will go into details, outlining in every way steps the waterworks committee has taken to secure the proper maps to be used in carrying out this program. This series of maps, when finished, will fill a need that has existed for many years and will offer to the real estate agent a source of service and information that can be gained in no other way.

The speaker, through his many years as chief of construction, has had intimate contact with the vast developments brought about and with the source of information and the future plans contemplated for the city, especially equipped to discuss this subject.

President Smith further stated that special letters and invitations have been prepared for the 200 or more members of the board, stating the importance of attending this luncheon, and every member is urged to hear this in mind and make their reservations. All members are asked to be on time as the luncheon will last for one hour only, starting promptly at 12:30 o'clock.

Cameo Theater.
"The Blackbird," which will have its return showing at the Cameo on Friday and Saturday of this week, presents the dean of drama and the master of makeup, Lon Chaney, in one of his masterful characterizations, for which he has become noted the world over.

In "The Blackbird" Chaney portrays the role of a daring ruthless criminal who sought refuge in the guise of a benevolent old man, beloved of the people, and who could not escape the darts of Danny Cupid and entered into adventures which made excellent screen entertainment, intensifying the action of the picture and charging it with dramatic suspense.

The Cameo brings back on Monday and Tuesday Robert Frazer, Blanche Sweet and Dorothy Sebastian in "Why Women Love," the story of two women and one man; with one woman loving without reckoning the cost, drawing into the whirlpool of hectic life the other two, threatening their happiness, with one woman rising to the heights and offering to sacrifice happiness, until the big, smashing climax which makes the picture one of the outstanding dramatic offerings of the screen.

On Wednesday and Thursday the Cameo offers Conrad Nagel and Claire Windsor in "Dance Madness," a delightful comedy drama of jazz-age youth, of young people gone wild, disregarding conventions and examples in the mad urge of the dance; of a couple who married to the fast tunes of a jazz fox-trot, joined in mad escapades, but learned in the nick of time that safety lies not in speed, but happiness in love.

ELLIOTT-FISHER OFFICE AWARDED PRIZE FOR SALES
Surpassing in sales 27 other offices of the company during the month of May, the Atlanta branch of Elliott-Fisher company has been awarded a handsome trophy, which will remain in its permanent possession. It was announced here Thursday. The Elliott-Fisher company is one of the largest manufacturers of accounting and writing machines in the United States.

Phillip D. Waggoner, president of the company, presented the trophy to the Atlanta office, which has shown a sales increase of 25 per cent over last year in the first five months of 1928. Officials of the company stated that present indications are for even better results during the remainder of this year.

Capt. W. M. Middlebrooks In Memory of a Friend.
I'm sad today; a friend has gone; They call his going death; But I insist he's living on. Despite suspended breath; For, well I know, he's in my heart, And many hearts besides. Who'll ever see his matchless charm; To guide us on life's tides. And glad we are to have the light, Of this staunch pioneer, Who blazed the path that lead to Right. While he was with us here, Be comforted; he's only left. And stand as firm as he, In gathering sheaves for this life's cup. With fixed fidelity. I'd say to those still more bereft, Because he's gone away, Be comforted; he's only left. This mortal crust of clay To enter that transcendent life. Where, through the Spirit's power, He'll ever come to calm your strife, When there's a cruel hour. —V. O. RANKIN. Atlanta, June 17, 1928.

SUNDAY HEALTH TALKS

BY WM. BRADY, M. D.

A DOCTORS' STRIKE.

Someone sent me a clipping from a Sunday paper, sob stuff, telling of a harrowing case in which all the doctors in a certain village refused to attend a case of child-birth and the village police had to venture in and aid in the emergency. The reason why the doctors refused to serve was that the man in the case had already exhausted his credit with every doctor in the place. The correspondent who sent me the clipping wrote that when he read the story the tears came into his eyes, and he asked me to present the pathetic case to the public and endeavor to shame those doctors, or cetera. The correspondent's letter closes with this eloquent remark: "If this is a Christian age and this case is a sample of Christianity, I am glad to be a non-believer."

I can't see what Christianity has to do with the matter, though there is something in the story which reminds me of the priest and the Levite who passed by on the other side; they probably thought that there would be a Samaritan along presently.

In the first place, there is a curious popular notion that a physician, that is, a real doctor, a regular one, the kind everybody relies upon in a serious crisis, the kind of doctor, the only kind of doctor we take along to look after us when we go off to war; there's a popular notion that such a doctor is compelled to render professional services whenever anybody demands his services. This notion is wrong. A physician is under no compulsion to answer any call, although he acknowledges a certain moral or ethical obligation to do what he can in an emergency.

But this case was not such an emergency. I congratulate the doctors of that village for their courage in drawing a reasonable limit and refusing to be pushed over the line by the cheap sentiment of the priests and Levites of the village.

How is it that the priests and Levites there never thought of digging down into their jeans for a contribution toward a doctor's fee? Had they taken such an unheard-of action there would have been nothing to grow sentimental about, no sob stuff for the quackery and nostrum medium to play up. Had the unfortunate family required lead or wood, a barrel of groceries or a supply of clothing, no doubt the village squire, if not some quasi-private charitable organizations, would have arranged for the outfit of the need. But the old game is to hang the heaviest of the charity burdens on the doctors, and for once the doctors have beaten the shrewd villagers at that old game.

Why did the fine Christian people of that village fail to provide in advance for such emergencies? They

Richard Dix In "Say It Again" Is Howard Film

Dix Is Seen With New Leading Woman, Alyce Mills.

"Say It Again," which comes to the greater Howard theater tomorrow, is the third romantic farce in a row for Richard Dix, under the directorship of Joseph L. Mankiewicz. And it is funnier and faster than either of the other two successes, "Let's Get Married," and "Womanhand."

The picture has a long, colorful sequence of whole-hearted, two-fisted scrapping worked out in one of those side-splitting comedy situations which have caused such laughter and excitement in so many of Dix's features. Moreover, the fighting involves nearly 100 people, all punching at once. The situation is funny because Dix, as the central figure in an intrigue around a throne, is not responsible for his predicament, being kept in ignorance of what all the shooting is for.

The comedy becomes a riot when Chester Crutkin, last laughed at in "A Social Celebrity," appears as the prince for whom Dix has been mistaken.

As a background for the story we see the quaint streets, houses and citadels of an imaginary small European kingdom, with the pomp and spectacle of its royal court.

Running through the picture is a thread of romance with real thrills, glamour and heart-tug in it. The center of this is beautiful, blond Alyce Mills, Dix's new leading woman, "Princess Elena." She is slender and tall—as all princesses should be—weighing just 122 pounds and being 5 feet 7 inches in height.

She will be remembered as Conway Tearle's leading woman in "Morals for Men," William Powell's in "School for Wives," and Lou Tellegen's in "With This Ring." Little more than a year ago, Miss Mills played a vampire role in Dix's Paramount picture, "Too Many Kisses."

Marie Herron, soprano, who will appear in Frank Cambria's "The Chinese Plate," this week's stage feature, graduated from the more or less prosaic work of an office secretary to become a prima donna in opera and oratorio. It was Nathaniel Timmon, general music director of the Public Theater corporation, and the man who is responsible for the musical settings of the stage presentations at the Howard, who first discovered her as a prima donna possibility. She sang at Mr. Finton's Sunday morning operatic concert at the Chicago theater, was for two years the leading soprano of the Balaban & Katz organization in Chicago, and appeared in productions of "Martha" and "La Traviata," and has a lengthy repertoire as oratorio and concert singer. She is immensely popular in Chicago where she has been prominently identified with such organizations as the Apollo club, under the direction of Harrison Wild, and the Hayden Club, a local society, under direction of Hyden Owens.

The overture for the week by the Howard Symphony orchestra under the direction of Joseph Littau, will be "Selections from Tannhauser," by Richard Wagner.

Other numbers on the strong program will include "Pierrot's Serenade," an organ solo, International News reel, and comedy.

Alamo No. 2.

It is probable that no musical comedy in the annals of the American stage took so firm a hold on the theater-going public as "The Prince of Pilsen," delightfully written by Frank Pixley and Gustav Luder. The constant inquiry of Hans Wagner, its central character, "Was you offer in Zinsinnat?"—became a byword throughout the country, and it was so firmly fixed in the mind of the public that it still serves to preserve the memory of "the comedy with the funny old German who fell in the fountain."

"The Prince of Pilsen"—fountain and all—has now been made into a lavishly produced motion picture, with Anita Stewart and George Sidney in the featured roles, and a supporting cast which includes Myrtle Stebbins, Allan Forrest, Rose Tapley and other film favorites. It will be shown at the Alamo No. 2 theater for three days beginning Monday.

The picture is a distinct novelty in that it combines an elaborate background of the pomp and ceremony of European court life.

On extreme left, scene showing Percy Marmont and Gilda Gray in "Aloma of the South Seas" at the Howard. Upper left, Henry Walthall and Marguerite de La Motte in "The Unknown Soldier" at the Metropolitan. Next, scene from "Desert Gold" at the Rialto, with Shirley Mason and Neil Hamilton. Right, top, Edmund Lowe in "Soulmates" at the West End theater, Monday and Tuesday. Bottom row, left, Jack Conway in "Brown of Harvard" at Loew's Grand. Next, Jackie Coogan in "Old Clothes" starring Anita Stewart at the Alamo No. 2. Just above, Claire Windsor and Conrad Nagel at the Cameo in "Dance Madness."

WAR FILM FEATURES METROPOLITAN SCREEN

Zane Grey Film, "Desert Gold," Is Rialto Feature

Big Cast Is Headed by Shirley Mason and Robert Frazer.

"The Unknown Soldier" packs a mighty heart-throb. It is war drama in all its beauty and grandeur, without the customary bluntness in spectacles of that magnitude.

"The Unknown Soldier" is without doubt one of the most human and convincing picture plays that has come to the screen. The plot interest is overwhelming, the drama is truly stupendous and the characterizations tremendously sincere. The picture was greeted with enthusiasm.

"The Unknown Soldier," played by Charles Emmett Mack, is a characteristically American doughboy, devil-may-care, foollardy, but with a deep-rooted spiritual sense glorified by war.

Marguerite de La Motte, his war bride, attains great dramatic heights in her impelling characterization. Another, intensely human characterization is that of Ethel Wales, who personifies "America's War Mothers" in the Hoffman opus.

Henry B. Walthall is splendid in the role of a steel baron. Syd Crossley, George Cooper and Jess Devoraka, following into of doughboys, provide many laughs. Claire MacDowell appears to excellent advantage.

"Let Us Forget"—Ernest Leide offers as his overture "1917," which consists of three famous world war songs, "Over There," "Oh, Frenchy," and "Keep the Home Fires Burning."

The musical score for the feature "The Unknown Soldier" is by the late publisher, "Whispering Trees," by Hall, being used as the principal theme. "The Spirit of '17" is the prologue in which Edwin Caldwell, tenor, appears as the American soldier in the trenches and Mary Ruttrick, soprano, as the Red Cross nurse, singing "The Rose of No Man's Land." Perry Bremner and Mert Kennedy are the trumpeters.

"The Menace of the Alps" one of the most unusual short reel subjects; the Metropolitan News and the usual musical novelties complete the program.

'BROWN OF HARVARD' IS GRAND OFFERING

The classic of all campus comedies "Brown of Harvard" with its stirring story of college life at its best will be the feature picture attraction at Loew's Grand theater this week. For many years this romance was a favorite on the stage and the screen version surpasses in many respects the original stage production. In the cast are such stars as William Haines, Jack Pickford, Mary Brian, Francis X. Bushman, Jr., and Mary Alden. The picture is one of the greatest ever directed by Jack Conway.

Life on the campus of one of America's greatest institutions of learning has been immortalized by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in their production of "Brown of Harvard."

"Brown of Harvard" is by far the best story of college life that has yet reached the screen.

The story tells of Tom Brown, a wealthy young egoist, who goes to Harvard to take part in athletics and increase his reputation as a Don Juan. He makes himself the idol of a group of boys, especially of Donaldis, his roommate. The story takes him through two years of college, and an affair with the daughter of Professor Abbott. The freshman crew race is excellently done, and the football game between Yale and Harvard, many of the scenes having been photographed last fall at the actual game, is by far the finest thing of its kind that has ever been seen in pictures.

William Haines notably advances his popularity as Brown. He is the typical American youth, with an excellent appearance, likable personality, and extraordinary acting ability. This picture will go far toward making him one of the most popular men on the screen.

Tudor Theater.

Coming to the Tudor for a return engagement of three days is "Behind the Front," which will be shown on Thursday, Friday and Saturday. This great comedy of the world war has been pronounced excellent.

Cambria Production, "The Chinese Plate," Features Howard Stage

Next week's program at the Howard theater will be embellished with two highly attractive stage presentations produced by Frank Cambria, who is responsible for "Great Moments From Grand Opera" and "A Garden Festival," recent attractions at the Howard theater. The new Cambria productions are "The Chinese Plate" and "Pierrot's Serenade," neither of which depends upon numbers in personnel for its attractiveness as entertainment.

Both numbers are distinctive by virtue of their staging and lighting. "The Chinese Plate" presents Ruth Alpert, dancer; Mario Horron, soprano, and Edward Davies, baritone. The setting is unique and distinctively oriental as are also the costumes worn by the principals. "Pierrot's Serenade" is a one-man act in which Julius Fisher and his cellophone, an instrument of Mr. Fisher's own invention, are featured. The setting is said to be delightfully fantastic, showing roof tops in a quaint village.

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday the Tudor offers Victor MacLagen, Robert Frazer and Lillian Rich in "The Isle of Rebirth," a drama of the north woods, and of an island ruled by a giant of a man who considered himself wronged and who sought revenge through torture to those who came to his island; and a party of travelers who were shipwrecked off the coast and marooned there.

For action, "The Tale of Retribution" has seldom been equaled, and the fights, of which there are several, are thrilling in the extreme and very realistic.

'Chocolate Soldier'

Opens Light Opera At Atlanta Theater

Virtually every member of the big cast of 75 persons will take part in the opening of Atlanta's own comic opera at the Atlanta theater on Monday evening. The premiere offering for the season's night weeks of high class musical comedy and light opera will be "The Chocolate Soldier."

The Strauss opera has proven a continual favorite since its tuneful lyrics and blended chorals created a sensation a few seasons ago.

It has never been produced with a finer balanced cast than that which will open here Monday. Louis A. Templeman will sing the title role. Louise Hunter, star of last year, will have the leading soprano part. Lou Powers, who has met Atlanta audiences through "Sally," will have no difficulty in sustaining his former popularity with the first acting part given this famed comedian in "The Chocolate Soldier."

Arthur Burckley, leading tenor, is expected to sing his way into the hearts of the Atlanta public. The McLeod brothers, William and Leslie, will also sing tenor. They both have fine voices and are finished actors.

Anna Yago and Mary Laiz Patterson will be given an opportunity for some splendid work in the feminine roles of the opening opera.

Seats for "The Chocolate Soldier" will be on sale all this week. No war tax. No reservation made over the telephone. Wednesday matinee will be popular priced, no seat in the house being more than $1. Tickets for "Her Regiment," the show for the following week, will go on sale Thursday.

Alamo No. 1.

"Fighting in France," United States official war picture made by the U. S. signal corps, A. E. F., is here Monday and Tuesday. Men and women have read and heard of battles. Now they can see with their own eyes the war's terrible actualities. This picture is without question the most remarkable ever filmed. It includes action photograph from actual operations in the front lines of dramatic intensity unequalled. More than eleven brave cameramen of the U. S. signal corps gave their lives in securing this undying, vivid pictorial record of American heroism. The camera goes alongside the doughboys over the top through No Man's Land. The hail of shrapnel cuts down men, often men in plain view, occasionally stilling the hand that grinds the camera. Fighting men, bursting shells, blazing balloons, crashing aeroplanes, tanks, machine guns, destroyers, big guns belching destruction, the gas terror, dressing stations, bayonet charges, war's stupendous drama. Every man, woman and child should see this great film. Also a good selected comedy, "Easy Going," that will make you pop your sides open laughing.

THIRD LANNING SHOW OPENS AT FORSYTH

"Linger Longer, Letty," Is This Week's Vehicle.

With the addition of Fred Raymond, Jr., of the old Lyric Players and one of Atlanta's favorite theatrical stars, Don Lanning's Forsyth Players will probably reach the pinnacle of popularity this week in "Linger Longer, Letty," a musical comedy attraction of the first rank, according to the management at the Forsyth.

It is pointed out that seldom indeed is a stock company fortunate enough to possess two such versatile artists as Mr. Lanning and Mr. Raymond, both of whom are clever comedians, good singers and excellent performers no matter what type of role they are called upon to enact.

The present vehicle for the company is another musical play that has proved its popularity by a long Broadway run and succeeding tours on the road. It is a sparkling bit of humor with memorable tunes, and the settings will be unusually attractive. The condensed version as produced by the Forsyth Players will allow interpolation of plenty of the novelties such as dances and songs by the Harmony Four that have been so well received during the past two weeks. Good parts have been provided for all the principals.

The "army" atmosphere will be in thorough keeping with the fact that several thousand veterans of the world war will be in Atlanta this week as guests of the city and the humor of the situations should have an especial appeal.

"Linger Longer, Letty," is by Anne Nichols, the author of the famous "Abie's Irish Rose," which has broken all long distance records in the theatrical world. "Letty" was first presented to Broadway at the Fulton theater by Oliver Morosco with Charlotte Greenwood in the title role aided by Walter Catlett. It was an instant hit and enjoyed a long run in the metropolis and an equally successful road tour.

Mr. Lanning has played in it in every city in which he has appeared and it has proven one of his best laugh producers. He will be seen in the part made famous by Mr. Catlett while Miss Ruth Tester will take the part of Letty. The combination of these two will make for one long laugh the entire time they are on the stage.

In addition to the tunefulness of the play, which allows nearly every principal in the company to score in at least one song number, there will be a number of novelties this week. Among them will be some blues songs sung by Mr. Lanning. This versatile comedian was for a time on Keith's circuit with an act that featured blues songs and comedy chatter and

CONCERT, AIR SHOW AT LAKEWOOD TODAY

Disabled Vets Plan Spectacular Fireworks at Amusement Park Monday.

A final public balloon ascension and three-parachute leap by Walter Jewell, U. S. army aviator and a he will show audiences at the Forsyth how the business is put over. Beautiful settings will add much to the presentation this week and the chorus will be seen in some attractive ensemble song and dance numbers that, it is expected, will prove a perfect background for the delightful story.

concert by the band and Miss Jessie Rose Culvert, soprano of the Atlanta Light Opera company, will be special features at Lakewood amusement park this Sunday afternoon it was announced Saturday by Oscar Mills, secretary manager of the park and the Southeastern Fair association.

Jewell's spectacular leap last Sunday thrilled a vast throng of more than 10,000 spectators and an even larger crowd is expected at the park for the final exhibition this Sunday. Accommodations for parking 3,000 automobiles without charge and for seating 8,000 of the onlookers in the grandstand are being made.

The dance casino will be open free to spectators all this week, beginning with the disabled veterans dance Monday night, following a gorgeous fireworks display presented in front of the grandstand at the park by the local entertainment committee of the D. A. V. for the delegates to the national convention. The entire afternoon and evening Monday will be devoted to entertainment of the veterans, the Southeastern Fair association having opened all rides, shows and other amusements in the park free to the veterans. Specialties, including a Charleston contest between a dozen of the picked stage beauties of Atlanta, will be presented by the D. A. V. committee during the dance Monday night.

The Lakewood waltz tournament will be held in the casino during the remaining nights of the week with two preliminary contests each night, one from 8 to 8:30 and one from 9:30 to 10. Admission to the dancing is free during those hours, admission tickets being provided to all applicants at the park.

Palace Theater.

Jackie Coogan starts the week at the Palace theater in Imman park Monday and Tuesday in "Old Clothes." In this delightful comedy the little star displays to the fullest extent his versatile talent and the picture is considered a leader among the productions in which he has starred.

Wednesday, "Durand of the Bad Lands," a western starring Buck Jones is here for one day only. This well known western actor has of recent months been turning out pictures of the highest merit. One of the big players will reach its height tomorrow evening at which time he will make his debut with this company.

Mr. Raymond is very well remembered by his work with the Forsyth players and later the Lyric players, Atlanta stock companies which played here a couple of seasons ago. At that time he was the leading man in the stock company and his popularity is attested to by the many calls of congratulations which have followed the announcement of his return.

Mr. Raymond also has quite a bit of experience in stock directorial activities, having assumed the position of director of the Lyric players after the departure of Edward Vail, who had held the helm for several months. His success in this particular phase of the work equaled that which rewarded his efforts as an actor.

He will assume quite a unique position with the Don Lanning company, being both actively engaged before the footlights, and also having a hand in directing the company.

Mr. Raymond's addition to this company brings to it a wealth of prestige which will undoubtedly increase its popularity and also boost the box office receipts. He is a factor which will contribute greatly to making the company an all-summer success.

The offering this week in which he will make his return premiere is "Linger Longer, Letty," with the handsome and talented Don Lanning playing the lead.

COMEDY FEATURES LOEW'S VAUDEVILLE

Sparkling comedy of the better kind will prevail on the new vaudeville program which opens at Loew's Grand theater Monday. The headline attraction will be the ludicrous act of Chain and Bronson, two of the ablest fun-makers on the stage today. Dell Chain and Earl Bronson create their own comedy material and have been heading the bills on some of the leading amusement circuits of the country for years. Their skit this season is entitled "Oh I Did Not" and it is a riot of laughter from start to finish. During the action of the comedy the comedians introduce several funny song hits as well as some eccentric dancing.

In their appearance in other theaters on the Loew circuit Chain and Bronson have been praised by critics for the high merit of their work and for the numerous new ideas they have used in producing their big comedy hit.

On the bill also will be the comedy masterpiece of vaudeville, "Hello Mama," presented by Nat C. Haines & Company. In the Haines attraction are such notable artists as Sidie Duff, Bernae Goe, Madelon Le Varre, Ben Wells and Freddie Flynn.

Another popular attraction on the new bill will be Paul Jacobson, "Chicago's Golf Wizard," in one of the real novelty hits of the year. This is a genuine surprise act with the real punch.

Leo Flanders and Geneva Butler, "The Pianist Composer and Prima Donna," will play a pleasing program of song hits. Miss Butler possesses a voice of rare range and sweetness, while Mr. Flanders is a composer and pianist who has won a wide reputation for the excellence of his work.

The scarf is delightfully militant, worn tightly about the neck and flung over the shoulders. Attached to it is the shawl, fitting smoothly to emphasize the gentle curves of the shoulders and then swinging gracefully after the fashion of the Cossack cloak that inspired it.

Miss Harris Weds Mr. Perkins At Home Ceremony Thursday

Of interest to a wide circle of friends was the marriage of Miss Vera Lenora Harris and John Temple Perkins, which was solemnized Thursday evening at 7:15 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. Elmer Slider, 240 West Tenth street. The ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. Will H. Houghton, of the Tabernacle Baptist church, took place in the drawing room before an improvised altar of ferns and palms. Tall vases holding white roses and cathedral candelabra burning white tapers added to the effectiveness of the scene.

Just before the bridal party entered J. Elmer Slider sang "I Love You Truly," accompanied by Miss Eunice Wheeler. The bridal party entered to the strains of the wedding march from "Lohengrin." During the ceremony, "To a Wild Rose" was played very softly. Miss Beatrice Nash, the maid of honor and only attendant, wore pink georgette with a picture hat to match, and carried an armful of pink rosebuds. The bride entered alone, being met at the altar by the groom and W. C. Williams, who acted as best man. Her bridal robe was fashioned of white georgette over duchess satin, with a finish of white ribbon. Her hat was a smart model of silk neapolitan straw adorned with a single white rose, and the bride's bouquet was of white roses, showered with valley lilies.

Immediately following the ceremony an informal reception was held. In the center of the dining table was a three-tier wedding cake in a mound of ferns and pink and white roses. The punch bowl was presided over by Miss Esther Stanley. Mrs. Slider received the guests wearing a gown of white crepe de chine and a corsage bouquet of pink roses and valley lilies. Little Annie Mae Slider, who assisted her mother, wore a dainty frock of pink georgette with a cascade of blue ribbon falling from her shoulder. During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Perkins left for a motor trip to Florida. The bride's going-away suit was a smart model of black and white. After June 30 they will be at home with the groom's mother on Brookline street.

Miss Bagwell Weds Mr. Doolittle At Home Ceremony

Marked by beauty and simplicity was the marriage of Miss Nettie Bagwell and George Weston Doolittle which was solemnized in the presence of relatives and a few close friends Wednesday afternoon, June 16, at the home of the bride's brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. S. I. Bagwell on Virginia avenue. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. M. Spinks, using the ring ceremony. The wedding march from "Lohengrin" was played by Mrs. George H. Sims. Exquisite simplicity was expressed in the lovely decorations of palms, ferns and cut flowers.

Little La Rue Bagwell, niece of the bride, was the dainty flower girl, and wore a lovely dress of pink georgette. She carried a basket filled with rose petals which she scattered in the path of the bride and groom. Little Miss Sara Craig kept the bride's book.

The lovely bride wore a becoming costume of flesh-colored georgette crepe with hose and slippers in matching shades, and a picture hat of Neapolitan straw completed the ensemble. She carried a shower bouquet of pink roses and valley lilies.

Mrs. Bagwell was gowned in blue crepe and she wore a shoulder bouquet of Ophelia roses.

Mrs. George R. Embury, sister of the bride, was gowned in orchid georgette crepe and she wore a shoulder bouquet of Ophelia roses.

A wedding cake, exquisitely frosted and embossed in pink roses, adorned the center of the lace-covered table, and four candlesticks held white tapers.

After the ceremony a reception was held. Punch was served by Miss Kathryn Irvin and Miss Emily Elder. Immediately after the reception Mr. and Mrs. Doolittle left for a motor trip through North Carolina. After the first of July they will be at home in Sandersville, Ga.

Miss Terry Is Honored By Mrs. L. W. Terry.

Meckel, Misses Mae and Essie Baskin, Mrs. T. L. Terry, Mrs. T. H. New and Miss Marjorie New, Mrs. S. H. Griffin, Mrs. H. L. Terry, Mrs. F. C. Brewster, Mrs. James Harper, Mrs. C. L. Terry, Mrs. C. E. Jackson and Mrs. Hoke Russell, of Lawrenceville; Mrs. M. P. Terry, Mrs. J. C. Cowar, Mrs. W. J. Flowers, Mrs. Ola Buckner, Mrs. Marvin Wheeler, Mrs. E. C. Latham, Mrs. J. C. Deener, Mrs. T. C. Teague and Miss Vera Teague.

Mrs. W. R. Terry and Miss Fannie Smith assisted in entertaining.

Miss Vaughn Weds Marcus J. Clark.

The marriage of Miss Nell Vaughn and Marcus James Clark, of Harrison and Gay, was solemnized Tuesday afternoon, June 15, at 4 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents. The Rev. John Wesley Clark, brother of the groom, performed the ceremony which was witnessed by the immediate relatives and friends. The bride was lovely in a dress of tan and gray crepe with hat and accessories to match. Mrs. R. L. McDonald, of Sharpesburg, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore a lovely gown of tan georgette over rose. The wedding march from "Lohengrin" was played by Miss Dottie Echols, a cousin of the groom. Immediately after the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Clark left for a trip to Chattanooga, Tenn., and en route home they will stop in Atlanta. After June 22 they will make their home at Gay.

Miss Dodson Weds Joseph L. Murphy.

The marriage of Miss Mary Frances Dodson, of Hapeville, and Joseph L. Murphy, of East Point, was solemnized June 12 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Camp, in Riverdale. The ceremony was performed by Rev. M. M. Maxwell, in the presence of a few close relatives and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Murphy will make their home in East Point.

The Store of Dependability

Sterling Silver Is Solid Silver

WE ADVISE the purchase of Sterling Silver because it is practically everlasting. There is less alloy in Sterling Silver than in a Silver dollar. It lacks but seventy-five one-thousandths of being PURE Silver.

When Silver of Sterling quality is fashioned by master craftsmen into the designs on exhibition here its beauty becomes as permanent as the metal itself and even a single piece of modest size is an especially appropriate wedding present.

Hamilton-Williams Wedding Solemnized at St. Luke's Church

Marked by beauty and simplicity as the marriage of Miss Lucille Hamilton and Brevard Williams, which was solemnized at St. Luke's Episcopal church, Saturday, June 19, at 9 o'clock, by N. H. R. Moor officiating. The church was beautifully decorated with many candelabra holding lighted tapers. To the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march, the bride and groom entered down the center aisle and were met at the altar by Mrs. H. A. Atkinson, only sister of the bride, as matron of honor, and Ernest Williams, brother of the groom, who acted as best man.

The bride was never more beautiful than in her wedding gown of soft white tulle, made with high neck and long sleeves. Her becoming white felt hat was trimmed with white velvet and her bouquet was of bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Mellichamp Honors Tech High P. T. A.

Mrs. J. C. Mellichamp, president of Tech High P. T. A., entertained most delightfully for her officers and the nominating committee, at her home on Piedmont avenue.

The officers for 1926 are: Mrs. Vernon Shearer, first vice president; Leo Sudduth, second vice president; Mrs. Norman L. Pool, third vice president; Mrs. B. M. Smith, fourth vice president; Mrs. W. H. Chambers, fifth vice president; J. F. Barron, recording secretary; Mrs. R. N. Fickett, Jr., corresponding secretary; Mrs. David L. Wise, treasurer.

On the nominating committee are: Mrs. George R. McNamara, chairman; Mrs. J. M. Shearer, W. T. Hanson, George F. Haney.

W. C. Cheney, principal of Tech high, and Mrs. Cheney were honor guests, also the husbands and wives of the officers and nominating committee.

Mrs. Mellichamp has been very successful as chairman of citizenship in the city schools for the past three and a half years. Her last act of good citizenship being the securing of a flag for the Booker T. Washington high school. This flag was given by the Secretaries club of Atlanta and presented to the school by Mrs. Mellichamp with her wonderful talk on the flag. Previously 37 flags had been given by the Junior Order of United American Mechanics to Mrs. Mellichamp for the schools of Atlanta, 15 of them having been presented by her to the negro schools.

Mrs. Mellichamp has felt very keenly her duty as head of citizenship and has been deeply interested in all schools, and is therefore especially gratified to handle the different phases of high school work.

Miss Dorothy Kenyon To Speak At Women Voters' Conference

An interesting event which is attracting wide attention throughout the southern states is the regional conference of the third region, and first citizenship school which will be held in Asheville, N. C., from June 28 to July 3, inclusive, sponsored by the National League of Women Voters.

Arrangements are being made by Mrs. Mary O. Cowper, of Durham, N. C., regional director of the south, well known in Atlanta and to members throughout Georgia because of her frequent visits with regard to development of league work in Florida, Georgia, Alabama, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Louisiana, Mississippi and Virginia.

Country government, living costs, legal status of women, international relations and the administration of public welfare will be the chief topics under discussion. Five prominent officers in league organizations and two college professors will be the speakers. An outstanding speaker of the conference will be Miss Dorothy Kenyon, of New York city, legislative chairman of the New York league and a capable young woman lawyer. The legal status of women, industrial problems, governmental issues, economics and legalistic questions are a few of the many topics which command the earnest and constant attention of Miss Kenyon.

She is an active member of the New York State League of Women Voters.

After graduating from Smith college, she took her doctor's degree in law at the New York University law school. Before she settled to the business of a practicing lawyer she had a part in many tasks relating to public affairs. As she puts it, she "licked stamps and marched up the avenue" in suffrage days.

For a year during the world war she was a member of Colonel House's and Walter Lippman's committee, collecting economic data for the peace conference. With the labor policies board in Washington she dealt with industrial relations and made a study of labor conditions in France and Italy. Another bit of war work was collaboration on a brief presented by

C. C. Dues Wanted.

All chapters of Children of the Confederacy are requested to pay state dues at once, as the treasurer's books close June 25.

The chapters are also asked to send in names at once of delegates to the Children of the Confederacy conference in Dublin, July 1, 2 and 3, to Mrs. Helen Baum, Dublin, Ga.

The Slomson government to the peace conference.

Miss Kenyon's interest in industrial problems has led to a study of unemployment for the federal department of labor; three years' service as secretary of the board of referees of the Cleveland ladies' garment industry; to a study of strikes and the injunctions, and to chairmanship of the committee in the Consumers' league, which stands guard over the enforcement of our labor laws. Work with the Teacher guild and ownership of a dress shop in New York city give evidence of Miss Kenyon's widespread interests.

Among those attending the conference are Mrs. Dan C. Lyle, president of the Georgia League of Women Voters; Mrs. L. G. Alges, secretary of the Georgia league; Mrs. R. L. Turman, president of the Atlanta league; Mrs. Guy L. Sink, executive secretary of the Atlanta league; Mrs. J. P. Edlup, first vice president Atlanta league; Mrs. M. S. Moser, Mrs. George Holder and Mrs. J. H. Morgan, of the Third Ward league, and Mrs. G. K. Ayer.

The Atlanta league will hold the monthly educational meeting at the chamber of commerce Friday afternoon, June 25, at 3:30 o'clock. The program will be announced through the papers later in the week.

Mrs. Croy To Attend Woman's Benefit Meets.

Mrs. Pearl H. Croy, of Birmingham, Ala., deputy supreme commander, also state commander of the Georgia Women's Benefit association, will be the guest of the different reviews in Atlanta, commencing Tuesday morning, June 22 at the meeting of deputy assistants. Tuesday afternoon a meeting will be held at Georgia Review No. 11, with Mrs. Sarah Gues, commander.

Tuesday night, Jennifer Review No. 7 will meet at W. B. A. hall in the McKenzie building with Mrs. Ella Iyer commander. Wednesday afternoon a meeting of East Atlanta Review No. 18 will be held in the Lutheran church, in Inman Park. Mrs. Marie Krebber, commander Thursday afternoon, Atlanta Review No. 1 will meet with Mrs. Emma Moor, commander, at the home of Mrs. Fred Scher, on Washington street. Friday afternoon, open house will be held for members and friends to meet Mrs. Croy, in W. B. A. hall, in McKenzie building on James street. Friday night a meeting of Sunshine Review No. 17, with Mrs. Mary Jones, commander.

Atlanta Chapter To Entertain D. A. V. Auxiliary

The ladies' auxiliary of the D. A. V. will be the guests of the Atlanta chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, on Monday, June 21.

Automobiles will call for the guests at the Ansley hotel at 3 o'clock for a drive through the beautiful residential sections of Atlanta, after which tea will be served at the Craigie house. The ladies in charge at the Ansley hotel will be Mrs. C. B. Walker, Mrs. John Sage, Mrs. Frank Woodruff and Mrs. Lucius McConnell.

Those who have offered their cars for the guests of honor are Mrs. W. E. Austin, Mrs. L. W. Rogers, Mrs. E. Clifton Orr, Mrs. Phillip Groves, Mrs. Charles Rice, Mrs. Whitford Russell, Mrs. James Jettin, Mrs. John M. Slaton, Mrs. Robert Hugh Caldwell, Mrs. A. W. Hodnett, Mrs. Thomas Morgan, Mrs. E. E. Petet, Mrs. John Rice, Mrs. Alfred Newell, Mrs. N. C. Hardon, Mrs. Walter Hill, Mrs. W. F. Dunbar, Mrs. M. H. Garner, Mrs. H. W. Hill, Mrs. J. Magill, Mrs. Rembert Marshall, Mrs. Graham Johnson, Mrs. G. C. Jones, Mrs. Charles Freeman, Mrs. Sally Eugenia Brown, Mrs. D. DeLah, Mrs. Sam D. Jones, Mrs. Davis Woodward, Mrs. W. E. Beckham, Mrs. William A. Wright.

The ladies of the chapter are requested to have their automobiles at the Ansley hotel at 2:45 o'clock Monday afternoon. After the tea the visiting ladies will be taken back to their hotels.

This will be an important week, with the W. B. A.'s as a "double your membership campaign" is being launched. Mrs. Croy is a woman of wonderful personality, well adapted to the position she holds. Under her supervision Georgia has made wonderful progress. All out-of-town members will be welcomed. Campaign headquarters, 305 McKenzie building, phone Walnut 0110.

Miss Franklin, of Tennille, Weds Mr. Roitsch in Texas

McAllen, Texas, June 19.—Charming decorations provided lovely setting for the wedding of Miss Julia Franklin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Mitchell Franklin, of Tennille, Ga., and Mr. Robert Roitsch, of McAllen, which took place in the parlor of the Casa de Palmas Wednesday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock. Under an improvised altar, flanked by ferns and masses of Shasta daisies, the ceremony was read by Rev. William H. Foster, minister of the First Presbyterian church.

The bride, a vision of blond loveliness in her wedding robes of white, was given in marriage by L. Paul Mathews. Immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Roitsch departed for a motor trip to Corpus Christi and Tennille, Ga., the home of the bride's parents. On their return trip they will visit the groom's family at LaGrange, Texas, returning after a few weeks to make their home in McAllen.

The bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Franklin, and granddaughter of Mrs. Loula Kendall Rogers. She attended Wesleyan college, specializing in art and music. Later continuing her studies in art at the Gregg studio in Atlanta. She is prominent in the social life of Georgia, and has spent the past several months with friends in Texas.

Mrs. Roitsch is descended from patriots, illustrious in colonial, revolutionary and Confederate history, taking her lineage from the Franklins, McKinnys, Lanes, Kendalls and Roitschs. Her mother is state regent of the Georgia Daughters of the American Revolution, and holds the distinction and honor of being the only woman in Georgia who has held the highest state office in both of the two oldest patriotic organizations—the Daughters of the American Revolution, and the United Daughters of the Confederacy. She also is an active member of the Georgia Society of Colonial Dames. On the paternal side, "the bride's father, Herbert Mitchell Franklin, served for a number of years in the Georgia legislature, as did his father and grandfather. He is serving his seventh term as mayor of Tennille, is president of the Farmers and Merchants bank, has extensive business interests, and is active in all state affairs.

The groom is a graduate of Texas A. & M. school. He is a native Texan, though his ancestors years ago came from Alsace-Lorraine. His former home was at LaGrange, Texas. He served with distinction during the world war, and was government entomologist in Mexico for six years.

Miss Dorothy Linder, Of Hartwell, Georgia, Weds Mr. Brooks

Altoona, Penn., June 12.—Tulah Evans Brooks, city editor of The Altoona Tribune, and Miss Dorothy Linder, of Hartwell, Ga., were married at 10 o'clock Saturday morning at Washington, D. C. The ceremony was performed at the New York Avenue Presbyterian church by the Rev. Joseph R. Sisco, D. D., pastor. Attendees were Congressman William D. Upshaw, of Atlanta, Ga., and Mrs. Fred P. Linder, of Hartwell, Ga., mother of the bride.

The bride wore a gown of orchid chiffon and cream lace, orchid hat, and ivory colored slippers and hose. Mr. and Mrs. Brooks will be at home next week at 2104 West Chestnut avenue, Altoona.

The bride is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Linder, of Hartwell, Ga. Her father is founder and owner of the Hart County Telephone company and a leader in church and civic affairs in Hartwell. She spent the winter at Daytona Beach and Jacksonville, Fla., guest of an uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Craft, a brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew H. Cummins, of Jacksonville. Mrs. Brooks is a graduate of Brenau college, and took post-graduate work at the University of Georgia, and the Georgia State Normal school at Athens, Ga.

Mrs. Roberts Named Chairman Of Municipal Market Group

Mrs. Harold M. Roberts, chairman of the municipal market for the Atlanta Woman's club, whose efficient service and capability have resulted in successful achievement in the daily program of the market. Photograph by Stephenson studio.

Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, since beginning her administration as president of the Atlanta Woman's club, with the successful efforts of the chairman of the municipal market, Mrs. Harold M. Roberts, has undertaken a regulation of the food prices of fresh country produce on sale at the market.

Mrs. Smith, with her officers, Mrs. John R. Hornady, Mrs. DeLoe L. Hill, Mrs. E. V. Carter, Mrs. J. A. Carlisle, Mrs. D. F. Stevenson, Mrs. Eva S. Corrigan, Mrs. W. D. Williamson, Mrs. Joel Hunter, and the market committee, of which Mrs. Harold M. Roberts is chairman, paid a visit to the municipal market last week looking toward this object, and the president and chairman propose to visit the market weekly and daily.

The market master, Mr. Ewing, and the inspector of the market assured Mrs. Smith that all meats sold at the market will be absolutely fresh, above criticism, and the best that can be bought. Mrs. Smith will see that regular inspections are made so that no complaint can arise as to the freshness of food offered for sale, cleanliness of booths and general sanitation.

Regular meetings of the market committee and the farmers will be held, as announced by Mrs. Smith and her chairman, Mrs. Harold M. Roberts, since both are working toward a common object: The welfare of the farmer and subsequent benefit to housewives of Atlanta.

The municipal market was established three years ago during the regime of Mrs. Alonzo Richardson as president of the Atlanta Woman's club. It was through the untiring efforts of Mrs. Irving Thomas, Mrs. Norman Sharp and other members of the Atlanta Woman's club that this handsome building was erected in which farmers of Atlanta and vicinity might have the opportunity of reaching the public and of displaying their wares to the best advantage. Hitherto farmers were compelled either to drive their wagons from door to door in the

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

VOL. LIX., No. 7.

ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, JUNE 20, 1926.

Here Comes the Bride!

Light Opera Premiere Set for Monday Evening

Monday evening marks the premiere of Atlanta's second season of light opera, which musical venture was successfully launched last summer, and for eight consecutive weeks cultured Atlanta will enjoy the well-arranged program which has been prepared by the company. The season will open at 8:30 o'clock Monday evening at the Atlanta theater with the presentation of "The Chocolate Soldier."

A delightful form of social diversion is offered to members of Atlanta society, not yet departed for summer vacations at the various resorts, in the afternoon concert which will be given today at the Brookhaven Country club from 4:30 to 6 o'clock, to be followed later by a concert dinner on the attractive roof garden of the Capital City town club from 7 to 9:30 o'clock. These occasions will assemble many congenial groups of the club members, their friends and visitors.

Fathers' Day.
Always quick to react to any movement sponsoring loyalty and reverence, Atlanta will observe "Fathers' Day" today as a companion day to "Mothers' Day," so beautifully celebrated a short time ago. Sentiment rises to its zenith on these days, and the city's churches will be crowded to capacity today with Atlanta sons and daughters, seeking to display the love and respect which prompts the beautiful observance of the day.

Distinguished visitors in the city who are receiving much social attention and a cordial welcome are Captain Howell Woodward, U. S. N., and Mrs. Woodward, of Newport, R. I., who arrived Thursday to visit their mother, Mrs. Park Woodward, and their sister, Mrs. Julia Chambers, at their home on West Fourteenth street.

Miss Bryan's Guests.
A group of lovely young girls of the sub-deb contingent who are visiting in the city and being extensively entertained include Miss Mary Vereen, of Moultrie; Miss Eugenia Coleman, of Macon, and Miss Cynthia L'Engle, of Jacksonville, Fla., who are the guests of Miss Marion Bryan at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sheppard Bryan.

Miss Palmer Atkinson, of Chicago, is the guest of Miss Mary Meador Goldsmith and is being warmly welcomed to her former home by the members of the younger set.

Miss Mary Phillips Orme has as her guest at the home of her mother, Mrs. Frank Orme, on Fairview road, her cousin, Miss Nancy Phillips, of Columbia, S. C.

Miss Rubie Carter Adams, of Jacksonville, Fla., arrived Saturday to visit Miss Nancy Frederick at her home on Peachtree circle. A number of lovely informal parties will be given during the coming week by members of the school set.

Miami Visitor.
Mrs. B. M. Boykin, who has resided in Miami, Fla., for the past two years, is receiving a cordial welcome from her many friends in the city. She is the guest of her son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Boykin, and later will visit Mrs. Clarence Coppedge.

Mrs. Norman Woodside has as her guests at her home on Sherwood road in Morningside her sister, Mrs. E. M. Morris, of South Bend, Ind., and her mother, Mrs. B. W. Keen, of Cincinnati, Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. James Bennett Conyers and little daughter, Madge Fulk Conyers, of Fort Myers, Fla., are receiving a cordial welcome from their friends in the city as the guests of their relatives.

Miss Jacquelin Moore Honors Visitors.
Miss Jacquelin Moore was hostess at a swimming party and buffet supper at the Atlanta Woman's club at 6:30 o'clock Saturday as a compliment to Miss Marion Bryan and her guests, Miss Mary Vereen, of Moultrie, Miss Eugenia Coleman, of Macon, and Miss Cynthia L'Engle, of Jacksonville, Fla.

This was an informal affair and only a few intimate friends were present. Assisting in entertaining were Mr. and Mrs. Wilmer Moore, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Orme, and Mr. and Mrs. Sheppard Bryan.

Dinner-Dance At Driving Club Is Delightful Event

A large number of members and visitors gathered at the Piedmont Driving club Saturday evening at the regular dinner-dance. The terrace of the club, where the dancing and dinner took place, presented a beautiful scene with its soft lighting of Japanese lanterns, and attractive flower boxes.

Among those being entertained were Miss Frances Taylor, who is the guest of Mrs. Don Pardee. Mrs. Pardee invited in her party for Miss Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Inman Richardson, Miss Jennie Robinson, Esmond Brady, John Stator, Jr., William Sibley and Mr. Champ Holmes.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark Howell, Sr., entertained a party of friends as a compliment to Captain Howell Woodward, U. S. N., and Mrs. Woodward, who arrived this past week to visit their mother, Mrs. Park Woodward, and their sister, Mrs. Julia Chambers, at their home on West Fourteenth street.

Dining together were Mr. and Mrs. Beverly DuBose, and Mr. and Mrs. Julian Chambers.

John Grant, Jr., had as his guests Mr. and Mrs. Grady Black, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Adams, Miss Josephine Connors of Birmingham, Ala., Mrs. Homer Owick, of New York, Harry Bewick, Comer Howell and Norris Broyles.

Mrs. Bedell Honored At Party Series.
Mrs. William Bedell and little daughter, Marion Dunson and Jane Adair, are guests of Mrs. Walker Dunson for several weeks.

Mrs. Bedell who formerly lived in Atlanta was before her marriage Miss Marion Dunson and is being cordially welcomed by her many friends.

Those who have entertained for her are Mrs. John L. Tye, Jr., Mrs. Frank Bright and Mrs. George M. Phillips. Mrs. W. B. Williamson, Sr., and Mrs. W. W. Anderson have invited a group of friends for bridge and tea at the woman's club on Friday. Other parties have been planned, the dates to be announced later.

Mrs. Julius Talmadge To Visit Atlanta.
Mrs. Julius Talmadge, of Athens, Ga., vice president general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, will be in the city Monday to attend the D. A. V. convention. She has been appointed by Mrs. Alfred Brown, president general, an official representative of the national society to bring greetings from that society at the opening session of the Disabled Veterans convention. She will be delightfully entertained as the guest of relatives while in the city.

Buckeye Woman's Club Will Meet Tuesday.
The Buckeye Woman's club will meet Tuesday afternoon, June 22, at 3 o'clock at the home of Mrs. W. A. Neill, 225 North Moreland avenue.

At this season of the year, there are many social affairs of the club. The new officers elected a month ago will be installed Tuesday by Mrs. D. O. Smith, historian of the club.

Dinner-Dance Friday Evening At A. A. Club

The first dinner-dance inaugurating the opening of the pleasureable series to be given during the summer at the Atlanta Athletic club, is announced for Friday evening, June 25.

The first 300 reservations made for this brilliant social event will be made in the main dining room of the palatial club on Carnegie Way, while those made later will be served in the ladies' dining room.

Dancing will be enjoyed on the roof garden, one of the attractive features of the club, and dinner will be served at 8 o'clock.

Miss McCoy To Wed Mr. Mangham At Druid Hills Baptist.
The marriage of Miss Lillie McCoy and David Boyd Mangham will take place on June 23 at 5 o'clock at the Druid Hills Baptist church. The ceremony will be performed by Dr. F. C. McConnell, pastor. The bride will be given in marriage by her father, Mr. Charles Jefferson McCoy.

The ushers will be Douglas Mangham, Sam Mangham, Dr. Percy Lambright, and Eugene C. Clarke, Jr. Miss Emily Boyd, of Griffin, Ga., beautiful cousin of the groom, will be the only bridesmaid. Little Opal Morris, cousin of the bride, will be the flower girl. Miss McCoy is the second daughter of Charles Jefferson McCoy, a graduate of Tech high school and attended Tech in the class of 1920.

In 1922 Mr. Mangham became interested in the manufacture of high grade candies and is well known and popular with hosts of friends. John Woodward Mangham, Jr., will be his brother's best man.

Mr. Mangham and his bride will leave immediately after the ceremony for a two-weeks' trip to the mountains. On their return they will reside with Mr. Mangham's parents at 645 W. Peachtree.

Miss Long Weds Mercer Taylor.
The marriage of Miss Catherine Long, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. W. E. Long, to Mercer Taylor, of Atlanta, was solemnized Sunday afternoon, June 13, at the home of the bride's parents near Easton.

The father of the bride officiated, using the ring ceremony. Only the immediate families of the bride and groom were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Taylor left immediately after the ceremony on their wedding trip. The bride wore a tan traveling dress with harmonizing accessories.

The bride attended Madison High school, where she was one of the first honor graduates in 1924. Mr. Taylor holds a responsible position with a firm in Atlanta where they will make their future home.

Reserve Officers To Give Dance At Ft. McPherson

Of prominent social interest is the announcement of the dance which will be given Wednesday evening from 9 to 11 o'clock by the reserve officers at Fort McPherson. The dance will be a brilliant event taking place at the Service club near the main gate and will assemble several hundred members of Atlanta society and of the army social set.

The reserve officers are recent graduates from colleges all over the south and are taking a course of military training at Fort McPherson, extending from June 15 to 25. At the same time these officers received their college degrees, they also receive their commissions as second lieutenants in the reserve army of the United States.

Carswell-McCurdy Wedding To Take Place in Lizella.
The interest of a wide circle of friends centers in the announcement of the plans for the marriage of Miss Ruby Lucile Carswell to Robert Hughes McCurdy, which will be solemnized Saturday evening, June 26, at 6 o'clock at the Lizella Methodist church, the Rev. Marvin Pharr, officiating.

Preceding the ceremony, Miss Frances L. Tucker will sing "I Love You Truly," and "The Sweetest Story Ever Told," accompanied by Miss Margaret Hall, who will also play the wedding music.

The bride-elect will be given in marriage by her father, Matthew Edward Carswell, of Lizella. The attendants will be Mrs. O. von Wertz, sister of the bride, matron of honor; Miss Greta Bradford, of Atlanta, maid of honor; Miss Clarice Carswell, niece of the bride; Mrs. L. W. Abel, of Macon, and Miss Thelma McCurdy, sister of the groom and Miss Lucile Williams, of Stone Mountain, will be bridesmaids.

The lovely little ribbon bearers will be Misses Katherine Carswell and Mazie Davis, nieces of the bride. The dainty little flower girls will be Misses Peggie Tucker and Marjorie Griffin, nieces of the bride.

Little Earl Mosley, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Mosley, of Lizella, will be the ring bearer. Mr. McCurdy will have as his best man, his brother, J. B. McCurdy, of Miami.

The groomsmen, also acting as ushers, include C. G. Davis, Dr. E. L. McCurdy, Douglas McCurdy, all of Stone Mountain, and W. F. Nash, of Atlanta.

The bride's book will be kept by Mrs. C. G. Tucker, sister of the bride. The bridesmaids will be Mrs. L. W. Abel, of Macon, and Miss Thelma McCurdy, sister of the groom and Miss Lucile Williams, of Stone Mountain.

Mr. McCurdy is the son of the late W. S. McCurdy, of Stone Mountain, and is connected with the White Auto Sales company, of Atlanta.

Plans have been completed for the bride and mah jong to be held June 21st at 3 o'clock p. m. at the Jewish Women's club, corner Washington and Ch. streets. The public is most cordially invited. Guests are requested to bring cards and games.

Visitors Honored At Tea-Dance At Biltmore

The tea-dance Saturday afternoon at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel was a lovely event taking place on the beautiful eastern terrace of the hotel overlooking the Italian garden. Dancing and tea were enjoyed from 5 until 7 o'clock.

Mrs. George Muse had as her guests Mrs. John Street, of Kentucky, Mrs. George Street, Mrs. George Beine, Mrs. Christian Clarke, and Mrs. George Howard.

Ted Morrison was host to a party, his guests including Misses Virginia Courts, Mary Brown Spalding, Constance Spalding, Tom Partridge, and Alfred Anderson.

In a party were Misses Patricia Sanders, Ellen Wolff, Leonard White, William McLeod, Leslie McLeod and Tom Delbridge.

Miss Vera Summers Honored at Parties.
Many parties are being planned for Miss Vera Summers, a lovely bride-elect of June whose engagement was recently announced to Paul A. Schwartz, of Jacksonville, Fla.

Thursday afternoon, she was entertained by her sister, Miss Irene Summers with a miscellaneous shower. The spacious rooms were thrown together and artistically decorated with spring flowers. The color scheme of pink and white was cleverly carried out. About thirty guests were invited.

Saturday afternoon, Miss Esma Courney honored the bride-elect with a lovely luncheon at the Henry Grady. Only a few close friends were invited. Many other parties are being planned for this popular bride-elect among which Miss Ruth Atkinson and Misses Goldie and Mildred Hardy will entertain.

Miss Tarpley Is Given Dinner.
One of the main pre-nuptial affairs given for Miss Ruby Tarpley, a bride-elect of this month, was the dinner given by her cousin, Miss Elton Payne, Tuesday evening. The occasion was also in celebration of the birthday of Dean Allen, a cousin of the bride-to-be.

Covers were laid for Misses Elsie Stephens, Esther Welbourne, Ruby Tarpley and Elton Payne, Latnar Harrison, O. B. Smith, J. A. Stephens and Dean Allen. Later in the evening, an Allen was host at a theater party given for the guests.

Jewish Woman's Club To Sponsor Party.
Plans have been completed for the bride and mah jong to be held June 21st at 3 o'clock p. m. at the Jewish Women's club, corner Washington and Ch. streets. The public is most cordially invited. Guests are requested to bring cards and games.

Layng-Chiles Engagement Is of Wide Social Interest

Bearing great social import throughout the south and east is the announcement made today by Mrs. James Dawson Layng, Jr., of 136 East Sixty-seventh street and Westchester county, New York, of the engagement of her daughter, Vermona Spencer, to John Overton Chiles, son of Mrs. V. G. Chiles, of Atlanta.

Miss Layng is a member of a distinguished New York family, the daughter of Mrs. Layng and the late James Dawson Layng, Jr. She is the granddaughter of Mrs. James D. Layng and the late Mr. Layng, of Mount Kisco, New York, and of the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Spencer, beloved and well-known citizens of Atlanta, prominently identified with the financial development of the south.

She is a graduate of Miss Walker's school, of Simsbury, Conn., and a debutante of last winter, having made her debut at the fashionable Colony club in New York. The bride-elect has often visited in Atlanta as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Weyman.

and has been a popular and admired belle in the city's younger social circle. She is the sister of Mrs. Walter Clements Stanton, who until her marriage, which was a brilliant affair of last Thursday, taking place in New York, was Miss Louisa Layng, who has often visited here.

Mr. Chiles is a descendant of the McLains and Greenes of Alabama and the Chiles and Plessants, aristocratic Virginia families. He received his education at Georgia Tech, being a graduate of that institution and a popular member of the S. A. E. fraternity. He also holds membership in the Nine O'Clocks and the Capital City club, being prominently identified with the social and business life of the city.

The groom-elect is the brother of Mrs. Donald Kilpatrick and Mrs. John L. Appleby, of Atlanta. He is associated in business with the realty firm of Weyman & Connors.

The wedding will be a brilliant event of social interest, taking place in the early fall in New York.

Miss Beeson Weds Samuel Wright In Milledgeville.
A beautiful wedding was that of Miss Catherine Beeson to Samuel Wright, of Staunton, Va., which took place at the home of the bride's parents, Dr. and Mrs. J. L. Beeson, on Wednesday afternoon at 6:30 o'clock.

The wedding ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. H. D. Warlock, of College park; Constance Day and Allie Louise Travis, of Covington; Robert Lawrence and Catherine Parks, Anne Kidd and Eugenia Howard, of Miami.

The maid of honor was Miss Dorothy Selman, of Atlanta. The bride was given in a lovely creation of salmon-colored crepe, with hat and accessories to match. She carried an arm bouquet of pink roses showered with valley lilies. The ring ceremony was performed by Dr. H. D. Warlock, assisted by Dr. Henry McLaughlin, of Staunton, Va.

The bride and groom left for their home in Staunton, Va., soon after the ceremony. The home was beautifully decorated with ferns and cut flowers. Pink and white hydrangeas were used in artistic display.

There were no attendants. Mrs. Dorcy played the wedding music, assisted by Miss Lucile Rosa Bacon, on the violin.

The bride was lovely in a boise rose georgette, fashionably made. With this she wore a picture hat to match, and her flowers were a corsage of pink roses and valley lilies.

Immediately following the ceremony the bride and groom left for a dining journey to the mountains of Tennessee, and upon their return will at home in Hapeville.

Miss Annie Lois Brooks Weds Mr. Lansing in Decatur

Of great interest to a large number of friends and relatives was the wedding of Miss Annie Lois Brooks to John Edward Lansing, of Newark, New Jersey, which took place at five-thirty, Saturday, June 19, at the home of the bride on College avenue, in Decatur.

The home was beautifully decorated throughout with lovely flowers in the pastel colors.

The ceremony was performed by Dr. J. R. King, before an improvised altar of palms and ferns, interspersed with pedestals of white lilies.

Nuptial Music. The nuptial music was rendered by Mrs. Elizabeth T. Gregory, who played several numbers before the entrance of the bride party, and played "To a Wild Rose" softly during the ceremony.

The only attendants were the little flower girl, Mary Brooks Folger, niece of the bride, who wore green lace-trimmed georgette, and carried a basket of pink sweet peas, and Alvin Gray Folger, nephew of the bride, who was ring bearer. He wore a white satin suit.

The bride entered with her father, Alvin Luther Brooks, who gave her in marriage. She wore blond georgette, lace-trimmed and a pink No. 1 corsage of pink roses and valley lilies.

Following the ceremony an informal reception was held. Mrs. A. L. Brooks, mother of the bride, wore a blue georgette, and a corsage of sweet peas.

Misses Ethel Cassin and Almeda Hutchison served punch.

Others assisting were Mrs. James M. Wooten, Mrs. J. S. Folger, Mrs. Fred M. Bell.

Following their bridal trip Mr. and Mrs. Lansing will make their home in Newark, New Jersey.

was presented by Mrs. T. C. Dickson, chairman.

The devotionals was led by Marion M. Jackson, who introduced the speaker of the evening, Professor Floyd Fields, of the Georgia School of Technology. He made a splendid talk urging both parent and teacher to prepare the moral and religious training of the child at a very early age.

Obedience, honesty and reverence, he stated, should be instilled into the child before the school age. The foundation of a strong character which would be able to withstand the temptations of the outside world, he further stated, should be laid in the home by the proper home environments and the proper religious training.

Two violin selections were rendered by Miss Spencer McGaughey, accompanied on the piano by Miss Ruth Paris.

The attendance banner was won by the primary department. At the close of the meeting a social hour was enjoyed. Mrs. H. C. Groves and committee served punch.

Miss Ruth Paris, who was the principal speaker at the regular program meeting of the Hapeville Woman's club held Thursday afternoon at the Hapeville auditorium was Mrs. Norman Sharp.

Mrs. Sharp's subject was "The Junior Department of Woman's Club Work."

After invocation, which was offered by Mrs. J. L. Fulghum, Mrs. Fred Johnson, president, announced the addition of the junior department to the Hapeville club and presented Mrs. Thomas Lewis, who has consented to serve as chairman.

Mrs. Lewis introduced the speaker of the afternoon and asked for all possible information in regard to this branch of club work.

Mrs. Sharp gave a brief outline of the program usually followed in the department, stressing the importance of the junior department.

The idea expressed in Mrs. Sharp's address was that the temptations which the business world offers to the modern woman is a menace to the home-maker will, in a short time, be more honored than the woman who has made a career for herself.

It is expected that the junior department will be a pronounced addition to the club and the social life of the young people of the town. Mrs. Lewis is a past president of the Hapeville club and has taken a lead in all church and civic activity of the community. She is especially successful in work with young girls and thereby adapted to the junior department of club work.

Musical Program. The newly-appointed music committee, which consists of Mesdames W. J. Gower, chairman; S. E. Treadwell, D. B. Evans, G. W. Hendrix and J. Raymond Catby, arranged a delightful program, which was as follows: Violin duets, "Love Ship" and "Somebody," by Misses Louisa Carter and Dorothy Reddick, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. W. J. Gower; piano solo, Liszt's "Liebestraum," by Miss Jessie Jo Selman, of Atlanta; reading, "Rosa," by Mrs. Julian Arnold; reading, "Johann's Complaint" and "The Fit," by little Miss Lena Beth Brown.

Mrs. J. Raymond Catby, social chairman, served punch during the social hour assisted by Mrs. J. L. Fulghum, D. W. Brown and W. J. Gower.

Picnic Plans. Mrs. Marvin King, chairman of the picnic committee, announced that the barbecue-picnic with which the Women's club is assisting the city council which is in charge of the county, ty forces who have recently been at work in this section and to enable the new inhabitants to get better acquainted, will be Saturday, June 26, at 2 o'clock, in the woods between Sims street and Stillwood drive, near Central avenue, Hapeville. All citizens are invited to attend and bring a picnic basket or contribute to the cost of the barbecue.

Mrs. Charles Center, state fourth vice president; Mrs. Bayard Willingham, fifth district president; Mrs. Jackson, state treasurer, and Mrs. Price, another district chairman, were present and spoke briefly.

A beautiful silver basket was presented to the retiring president, Mrs. Charles Center, of the College Park association. Mrs. Charles Trowbridge, the new president, presented it with a touching tribute to her untiring work in the last three years of service.

Mrs. Nancy Elizabeth Pann, of Millford, Ga., announces the marriage of her daughter, Minnie, to George Harris Coggins, of Lexington, N. C., the marriage having taken place Tuesday, June 15, at the home of Rev. H. M. Melton, in Arlington, in the presence of a sister of the bride and a few friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Coggins left immediately after the ceremony for a motor trip to Florida.

They will be at home on their return in Lexington, N. C.

Class Holds Annual Reunion. The annual reunion of the eighth grade class of 1905-1906 of Walker Street school was held at the home of J. Pierce Starr on Wednesday afternoon. Forty-two were present to enjoy the barbecue which had been prepared by the host. Interesting letters were read from members of the class who were out of the city and found it impossible to attend. An enjoyable feature of the afternoon was the impromptu debate and the competitive games.

panied on the piano by Miss Ruth Paris McGaughey. The attendance banner was won by the primary department. At the close of the meeting a social hour was enjoyed. Mrs. H. C. Groves and committee served punch.

Miss Ruth Paris, who was the principal speaker at the regular program meeting of the Hapeville Woman's club held Thursday afternoon at the Hapeville auditorium was Mrs. Norman Sharp.

Mrs. Sharp's subject was "The Junior Department of Woman's Club Work."

After invocation, which was offered by Mrs. J. L. Fulghum, Mrs. Fred Johnson, president, announced the addition of the junior department to the Hapeville club and presented Mrs. Thomas Lewis, who has consented to serve as chairman.

Mrs. Lewis introduced the speaker of the afternoon and asked for all possible information in regard to this branch of club work.

Mrs. Sharp gave a brief outline of the program usually followed in the department, stressing the importance of the junior department.

The idea expressed in Mrs. Sharp's address was that the temptations which the business world offers to the modern woman is a menace to the home-maker will, in a short time, be more honored than the woman who has made a career for herself.

It is expected that the junior department will be a pronounced addition to the club and the social life of the young people of the town. Mrs. Lewis is a past president of the Hapeville club and has taken a lead in all church and civic activity of the community. She is especially successful in work with young girls and thereby adapted to the junior department of club work.

Musical Program. The newly-appointed music committee, which consists of Mesdames W. J. Gower, chairman; S. E. Treadwell, D. B. Evans, G. W. Hendrix and J. Raymond Catby, arranged a delightful program, which was as follows: Violin duets, "Love Ship" and "Somebody," by Misses Louisa Carter and Dorothy Reddick, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. W. J. Gower; piano solo, Liszt's "Liebestraum," by Miss Jessie Jo Selman, of Atlanta; reading, "Rosa," by Mrs. Julian Arnold; reading, "Johann's Complaint" and "The Fit," by little Miss Lena Beth Brown.

Mrs. J. Raymond Catby, social chairman, served punch during the social hour assisted by Mrs. J. L. Fulghum, D. W. Brown and W. J. Gower.

Picnic Plans. Mrs. Marvin King, chairman of the picnic committee, announced that the barbecue-picnic with which the Women's club is assisting the city council which is in charge of the county, ty forces who have recently been at work in this section and to enable the new inhabitants to get better acquainted, will be Saturday, June 26, at 2 o'clock, in the woods between Sims street and Stillwood drive, near Central avenue, Hapeville. All citizens are invited to attend and bring a picnic basket or contribute to the cost of the barbecue.

Mrs. Charles Center, state fourth vice president; Mrs. Bayard Willingham, fifth district president; Mrs. Jackson, state treasurer, and Mrs. Price, another district chairman, were present and spoke briefly.

A beautiful silver basket was presented to the retiring president, Mrs. Charles Center, of the College Park association. Mrs. Charles Trowbridge, the new president, presented it with a touching tribute to her untiring work in the last three years of service.

Mrs. Nancy Elizabeth Pann, of Millford, Ga., announces the marriage of her daughter, Minnie, to George Harris Coggins, of Lexington, N. C., the marriage having taken place Tuesday, June 15, at the home of Rev. H. M. Melton, in Arlington, in the presence of a sister of the bride and a few friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Coggins left immediately after the ceremony for a motor trip to Florida.

Miss Ruth Paris Weds Mr. Upshaw At Church Ceremony

A wedding of much interest to their many friends was that of Miss Ruth Paris and Charles Alfred Upshaw, which took place Tuesday evening at Capitol Avenue Baptist church, the pastor, Dr. W. H. Major officiating. The impressive ceremony was performed before an altar of palms banked with fern, Easter lilies and peonies, and the altar was flanked on either side by tall cathedral tapers burning in silver candelabra.

Miss Helen Schaid, at the piano, rendered the nuptial music, playing several beautiful selections. Mr. Fred Barnes sang "At Dawning" and "I Love You Truly." The bridal party entered while the wedding march from "Lohengrin" was being played.

Attendants. The ushers entered in pairs taking their places at the altar. They were Joel B. Paris, Jr., R. R. Paris, William S. Paris and H. B. Paris, brothers of the bride.

Mrs. James E. Goodwin, from Hastings, Fla., sister of the bride, was matron of honor, wearing in a becoming model of green georgette trimmed with hand-made roses and carried an arm bouquet of pink roses and pastel-shaded sweet peas.

Miss Deryl Manning was the bride's maid of honor. She wore a becoming gown of green georgette over yellow satin and carried a bouquet of deep pink roses and sweet peas arranged in cascade effect.

Little Martha and Marjorie Paris, sister and niece of the bride, wore flower girls. They wore dainty frocks of pink chiffon ruffled in narrow valances and carried small French baskets filled with rosebuds. Paris Goodwin, young nephew of the bride, was ring bearer and carried the ring in a lily showered with ribbons.

Lovely Bride. The bride entered with her father, Joel Benjamin Paris, who gave her in marriage, and was met at the altar by the groom and Professor W. A. Strozier, who acted as best man. She formed a picture of radiant girlish loveliness in her wedding gown of white satin and chantly lace embroidered in seed pearls and rhinestones. Her veil of misty tulle was fastened to her hair with a coronet of orange blossoms and lilies. She carried a bouquet of brides roses, showered with sprays of valley lilies, and narrow white satin ribbons.

Immediately following the ceremony the junior department of the church, which is superintended by Miss Tommie Lou Payne, entertained at an informal reception.

Payne was assisted in entertaining by Miss Arzania Carter, Miss Irene Wray, Mrs. Fred Barnes and others of this department.

Mr. and Mrs. Upshaw left during the evening for a short wedding journey.

Miss Seale Weds Eugene M. Love. Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Seale announce the marriage of their daughter, Thelma Irene, to Eugene McNair Love on June 3 at Mullins, S. C.

Miss Lurline Pullen Weds J. C. Major.

Of interest to their many friends was the marriage of Miss Lurline Pullen and J. C. Major, of Atlanta, which was solemnized at the Centenary Methodist church in Chattahoochee, Tenn., on Saturday evening, June 12, at 9 o'clock. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. W. Martin in the presence of a few close friends and relatives. Miss Gladys Pullen, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She was gown in pink georgette combined with lace in the pastel shades, with which she wore a pink hat and a shoulder corsage of pink sweet peas and valley lilies. Mrs. Z. C. Duckett, matron of honor, was gown in blue georgette over pink satin, with which she wore a shoulder corsage of lavender sweet peas and valley lilies. Mary Robinson acted as bridesmaid and was lovely in pink crepe de chine combined with pink georgette with a shoulder corsage of pink and white sweet peas and pink rosebuds. The bride was lovely in her wedding dress of orchid georgette combined with pink and white crepe de chine, with hat and scarf to match. She wore white kid slippers trimmed in pastel shades with orchid lilies. Her flowers were pink rosebuds and valley lilies. The groom was attended by his cousin, E. R. Mustoe, of Chattahoochee, as best man. Lealie Durloo, of Tennessee, was bridesmaid. Mr. and Mrs. Major left for Sign Mountain inn to spend two weeks after which they will be at home to their many friends in Atlanta.

State Regent Appointed On U. S. Advisory Council

Mrs. Herbert Mitchell Franklin, state regent, has been requested to serve on the Women's National Council, an auxiliary of the United States Flag association, of which the president of the United States, Hon. Calvin Coolidge, is honorary president.

The Women's National Council will consist of the heads of the principal women's patriotic societies, clubs and other organizations, and of other leading women in different parts of the country. The function of this council is to be of an advisory nature, and it is thought the state regent, Mrs. Franklin, will accept service.

The United States Flag association hopes to stimulate interest in this big patriotic movement through the

Mrs. Arthur Tufts Will Give Party For Writers' Club

Mrs. Arthur Tufts will entertain the members of the Atlanta Writers' club at a garden party at her beautiful home at Emory university on next Thursday evening, June 24. An interesting program of entertainment has been arranged. A playlet will be given, manuscripts read, and various other features of entertainment.

This is one of the most important meetings of the year as it brings to close the Writers' club activities for the 1925-26 season, and matters of vital importance which have been pending during the last several months will be decided. Committees will meet in Mrs. Tufts' home to select officers for the coming year. The remainder of the evening will be given over to a social.

Chapter Reports

COMMODORE RICHARD DALE.

Flag day was most appropriately observed by Commodore Richard Dale chapter, of Albany, the meeting occurring at the clubhouse, which was decorated with flags and red, white and blue flowers.

The ex-regent's badge was presented to Mrs. James Chapman by Mrs. Sam Bennett, with token of appreciation and love from the chapter for her services during the past two years. A flag day address was made by Rev. John Moore Walker. As this was the last meeting until fall, the regent appointed chairman for all standing committees.

DOROTHY WALTON.

The Dorothy Walton chapter, of Dawson, recently held its annual meeting with election of officers, resulting in the following: Regent, Mrs. H. A. Wilkinson; vice regent, Mrs. J. D. Tweedy; recording secretary, Mrs. G. G. Riley; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Roy Crouch; treasurer, Mrs. B. M. Roberts; registrar, Mrs. Ed. Stevens; historian, Mrs. M. H. Harper; chaplain, Mrs. M. L. Lawson; and genealogist, Mrs. C. M. Couric.

The chapter is in splendid financial condition and has contributed to many historic and patriotic causes. Two prizes were presented in the schools of Dawson. One new member was reported at the meeting. The newly elected secretary, Mrs. G. G. Riley, has been appointed state chairman of the Woodrow Wilson day committee. The flag day meeting was featured by the presence of the state regent, Mrs. Herbert M. Franklin, who was an honored guest. A large reception was given, when members of the Stone Castle chapter, D. A. R., and patriotic and civic organizations were special guests. Mrs. Franklin made a wonderful address at the flag day meeting.

JOHN BALL.

The John Ball chapter, of Irwinton, celebrated flag day with a very interesting program appropriate to the occasion, with Mrs. J. W. Hooks, regent, presiding. Various committee reports were given, and the constitution and by-laws of the chapter were adopted. A number of visitors were present at the meeting.

LAGRANGE.

Newly elected officers for LaGrange chapter include, regent, Mrs. J. L. Hamilton; first vice regent, Mrs. W. R. McCall; recording secretary, Mrs. T. G. Colhill; corresponding secretary, Mrs. R. H. Park; historian, Mrs. Mattie Ammons; and auditor, Mrs. Ely Calaway.

BRUNSWICK.

Flag day and Magna Charta day were fittingly observed by Brunswick chapter when an interesting paper was presented on Magna Charta by Mrs. D. W. Winn. A delightful reading of "The Flag" was also given. This was the last meeting until October, and the regent appointed a year book committee, which will compile a new book, containing programs for use in the meetings. Burdick Park, who won the D. A. R. history medal, read his prize essay.

TOCCOA.

New officers were recently elected in the Toccoa chapter, resulting in regent, Mrs. Ada Walker Davis; vice regent, Mrs. E. B. Cranford; recording secretary, Mrs. A. R. Paris; corresponding secretary, Mrs. M. V. Chaffin; treasurer, Mrs. G. L. Owen; historian, Mrs. M. J. White; registrar, Mrs. J. S. Mitchell; chaplain, Mrs. Susie Cranford. A number of new members have been added to the roll, and the retiring regent gave a fine report of the year's work.

Miss Ida Berchenko Is Honor Guest.

A bridge-awher was given by Mrs. Kuniansky at her home on Pullman street, in honor of Miss Ida Berchenko, a bride-elect of August, last week. The first prize was won by Mrs. J. Berchenko, second by Mrs. Morris Cohen and third by Miss Anna Lesnoff. Commendation was won by Mrs. J. Kuniansky.

Among those present were Miss Ida Berchenko, Miss Rae Miles, Miss Berchenko, Miss Jennie Berchenko, Miss Anna Lesnoff, Mrs. J. P. Plesch, Mrs. J. Kuniansky, Mrs. L. A. Plesch, Mrs. Gene Diamond, Mrs. L. Plesch, Mrs. J. Berchenko, Mrs. Charles Brucker, Mrs. Morris Cohen, and Mrs. Louis Kuniansky.

Dramatic Parable To Be Presented.

"An Old Fashioned Mother," a dramatic parable of a mother's love, will be given in the Hapeville auditorium, Friday evening, June 25, at 8 o'clock. The play will be presented by Grank Park Epworth league and is sponsored by Hapeville Epworth league. It has been given a number of times around Atlanta, and a large audience is expected. Admission will be 25 cents.

Cherokee Rose Lodge Entertains Husbands.

Cherokee Rose Lodge No. 600, I. O. O. F., complimented husbands on the evening of June 10 at the Red Men's Wigwam, tendering them a banquet and musical.

The long tables were beautifully decorated in the colors of the auxiliary and with Cherokee roses and carnations.

A large crowd attended and after the dinner and musical program were disposed of dancing was enjoyed. The Athens orchestra, directed by Mrs. W. L. Wood, rendered delightful music.

A vocal solo, by Mrs. Hugh Hanson, was a distinct hit. Ralph Richardson gave both saxophone and vocal solos, which were greatly enjoyed. Ralph Wyne, violinist, also gave a selection, which was heartily enjoyed.

An honored guest was Third Vice Grand President Mary Milton, of Denison, Texas, who made a brief address.

Ruth goes Shopping

While riding down town yesterday morning on the top deck of a motor coach, enjoying the breeze, who should come and sit by me but a man I know who is the possessor of several automobiles, but who invariably rides on a street car or coach to his business every morning.

We had a delightfully cool ride, a pleasant chat and felt refreshed and quite ready for the day's work. By the time we arrived in town he had told me the reasons for not using his car any more to go to business. "In the first place," he said, "the parking spaces are few and far between and it is so difficult to find one that it is hardly worth the trouble. I drive in from my country place each day, park my car somewhere outside the business section, lock it and forget it until I am ready to return home in the afternoon, and whenever I wish to go anywhere during the day I take a street car or a motor coach, which ever is most convenient." We both agreed that this was the best way to solve the perplexing problem that confronts us today for Atlanta is a real metropolitan city and growing all the time and naturally is becoming more and more congested.

Thursday afternoon of the past week three model homes at Avondale Estates were opened to the public for a Domestic Science and Better Homes Exposition sponsored by the Atlanta Georgian and Sunday American. The attractive homes are located at 9 Avondale Plaza, 3 Berkeley Road, and 5 Avondale Road and are complete in every way, being furnished beautifully throughout from entrance hall to the kitchen.

A pure food display under the direction of the Southern Grocery Stores, Inc., operators of the famous chain of Rogers' 300 stores, is of great interest to housewives. The pantries and kitchen cabinets are stocked with innumerable varieties of food products—everything you can think of that is good to eat is there all ready to utilize in the concocting of delicious menus.

Each of the kitchens are electrically equipped, all cooking being done on electric ranges, electric appliances of all kinds, including electric refrigeration which facilitate the efficiency of the household. At each of the three homes special menus are served each afternoon from 2 to 6 o'clock, being prepared by culinary experts from food products from the Rogers Stores.

Visitors to 3 Berkeley Road will enjoy delicious cakes and pastries made from Lily White Flour, Gold Label Coffee, sandwiches, pickles and potato chips.

The menu at 9 Avondale Plaza will include fruit salad, Rogers' Peler's—you will find an assortment to harmonize with any costume—they are of exceptional value—beautiful and wear as beautifully as they look. Select those that match your apparel—you will be enthused with their beauty and durability.

The other day I was in Ludden & Bates with a friend who purchased a Brunswick Panatrope and had the pleasure of hearing it demonstrated. It is a marvelous musical instrument, and the first purely electrical reproducing instrument and totally different in sound production—it is perfect and is in a class by itself—I never heard anything more wonderful in clarity of tone and resonance and both my friend and I were most enthusiastic over its musical excellence.

When you hear it, you will know that I have not told the half of its beauty, for it is indeed an astounding invention created by the foremost laboratories in the science of acoustics. Have Ludden & Bates at 80 North Prior street demonstrate the Panatrope to you—you will enjoy it and so will your loved ones and friends—it will be a thing of beauty and joy in the home. You will take pleasure and pride in its ownership.

Don't worry any more and ask yourself the question: "Where can I park my car?" There is no more no-parking signs than ever and it is so difficult to find a place that going downtown in an automobile when it is necessary to do so for any length of time is far from a pleasure. Park your car where it is convenient for you to get it when you want it outside of the business district and continue your trip by street car or motor coach. A great many people I know are doing this every day and find it is such a convenience.

Whether you are going downtown for business, to shop, or for pleasure, the most pleasant way by far is to go by car or coach—there is no annoyance of any kind when you ride on either. You are free from all responsibilities and can enjoy perfect relaxation—your ride will be a pleasure to you. The cars and coaches are a convenient and comfortable mode of transportation and the Georgia Railway & Power company is ever striving to give their patrons good service. Their ideal is better service: avail yourself of it.

From Paris, I hear that the latest fad is to have one's handbag made from the materials of one's suit or tailored dress. Why not, since one must possess at least a few handbags as of these days, it seems? Of course, there will always be the bags of leather and of fancy material, as well; but for a fad, hail to the dress-bag. Some such bags have already arrived from Paris, all ready to carry. These may not exactly match the dress of wrap; but they are of fabric and often in pleasing stripes.

At the Chandler Boot Shop on Whitehall street are beautiful shoes as smart as though the price were trebled—there is no limit to the style and quality and the price is astounding—$6.00. Intriguing touches of trimming make the Chandler shoes different, individual and many of them are enhanced by reptile skin.

The trend of fashion today is, for shoes to match the costume, and how much more effective is the ensemble tato Chips and Stone's Southern Cake.

When you see the well-stocked pantries, cabinets and refrigerators of these Avondale homes and be served with delicacies made from products that the Southern Grocery Stores, Inc., are displaying you will realize all the more that when you purchase food products from any one of the Rogers Stores you know in advance exactly what you are getting—the same uniform goodness in every variety—the same assurance of satisfaction—no matter when or which of the 300 Rogers' stores you buy.

The woman who buys her household foodstuffs and supplies at Rogers' is a wise housekeeper. She realizes that food comes first in her family's welfare and happiness and that good, solid, substantial food is absolutely essential, so naturally she desires quality in food products—nothing is so good and from experience she also knows that Rogers' products are quality goods at reasonable prices—that is the reason of the growth of the Rogers Stores—everybody everywhere wants Rogers' goods—they are pure—wholesome—and dependable always.

Lovely—colorful—intriguing; Cossack hawls that will set the heart a-thrill; a wrap in tune with the season! These shawls are new and distinctive in their style and beauty and will be of paramount interest to all femininity, and a beautiful assortment of them has just arrived at the M. Rich & Bros. company for your selection to wear with the lovely frocks of summertime, creating a smart ensemble that is true chic.

This is the first time in Atlanta the Cossack shawl has been displayed and it is shown exclusively at Rich's and typifies the most advanced mode of Parisian and American designers. These shawls are of exquisite quality of silk in all shades with heavy hand-knitted fringe and have a throw tie that is very effective.

Miss Callahan Weds Eugene Henderson At Church Ceremony

The marriage of Miss Annie Belle Callahan, of East Point, and Eugene Henderson, of Atlanta, was an interesting event of Friday evening, taking place in the Church Street Methodist church, East Point, at 8:30 o'clock. The decorations of palm and fern were simple and artistic.

Miss Mae Beidenbaugh played the wedding music and the bride and groom entered to the strains of the wedding march from Lohengrin. "To a Wild Rose" was played softly during the ceremony.

Attendants. Miss Ella Callahan, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and wore a peach-colored gown of georgette crepe, self-trimmed and of French model with hat and other accessories to match.

The bride entered with her father, W. Tom Callahan, by whom she was given in marriage, and was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, James Smith, where the Rev. E. W. Jones, pastor of the church, performed the ceremony in the presence of relatives and close friends.

Beautiful Bride. The bride was a vision of girlish loveliness in her bridal gown of white satin, fashioned along straight lines, with soft folds extending from shoulders to hem line. She wore a large picture hat of white crepe and trimmed in white roses. Her corsage was bride's roses and valley lilies. Her only ornament was a beautiful brooch set with diamonds and emerald with pearls, which was presented by her father to her mother when they plight of their troth.

Prominent Families. The bride is the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Tom Callahan, and is on her maternal side the granddaughter of the late Rev. W. A. Dodge, who was a Methodist minister of note and held many prominent charges during his ministerial years. He was one of the founders of the Indian Springs holiness camp ground and was the president of the camp ground association from the time it was founded and organized until his death.

On her paternal side she is the granddaughter of the late William B. Callahan, pioneer citizen of East Point, and was one of the foremost in the printing business for many years. The groom holds a responsible position with the Southern Map company. Until recently he was in Miami, Fla., and was prominently connected with The Miami Herald.

Bennett-Smith Wedding Announced. Clarkston, Ga., June 19.—The marriage of Miss Iteba Bennett to Robert Orville Smith took place recently. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. A. Hall, pastor of the Clarkston Methodist church, at his home in Stone Mountain.

The couple had as their attendants Miss Doris Bennett, sister of the bride, and Pierce McDonald. The bride was lovely in a French blue georgette over satin, fashioned with popular side panels beautifully shirred, and with this she wore a French picture hat and accessories to match.

Mrs. Smith is the attractive and eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Bennett, formerly of Alabama, but for the past four years has resided in Clarkston, and by her charming personality has made many friends here.

The groom is the son of Mr. A. O. Smith. He is a popular young business man and is now holding a responsible position with the Ajax Rubber company.

Miss Bagwell Is Honored at Party. Miss Julia Bagwell, a bride-elect of this month, was entertained at a theater party at the Howard theater by Miss Mae Harris on Saturday, June 12. The guest list included Miss Julia Bagwell, Mrs. Julian Harris, Mrs. P. L. Meadows, Miss Effie Hart, Miss Clyde Holterford, Miss Mattie Sue Cheek, Miss Mary Elizabeth Gilfoyle and Miss Augusta Pickard.

I. A. C. Entertains Employees at Outing.

The International Agricultural Corporation of Atlanta entertained its employees Tuesday afternoon and evening, June 15, with an outing at Raymond Lake inn. The trip to the inn was made in cars, the party arriving early in the afternoon. Bathing, boating and bridge claimed the attention of the picnickers before dinner, which proved to be a real old-fashioned fried-chicken affair. Dancing on the wide veranda of the inn occupied the evening. Music for the dance was furnished by Hugh Perry's Harmony Kings from Newnan.

Those attending the picnic were: Misses Emily Henderson, Nellie Mae Jones, Clara Jones, Grace Thornton, Adell Boy, Christine Lacy, Gladys Lance, Mildred Maye, Gladys Crapps, Dorothy Wheeler, Ida Clarke, Vera York, Annie Crain, Mildred Wells, Mesdames W. A. Fain, B. C. Johnson, L. L. Bamford and Hurt West; Lewis Stork, H. R. Bayler, E. R. McCarty, George W. Whaley, C. J. Hall, Ed H. Downing, S. Darden, M. L. Holcombe, P. D. Dillrose, L. L. Bamford, Lee A. Chapman, C. A. Butt, J. A. Jeter, J. C. Huie, C. W. Best, A. J. Young, Len Crane, H. B. Coody, Billie Burke, Fred McDonald, G. T. Mitchell, Jimmie Jackson, B. C. Johnson, Clyde Lee, Joe Crumley, Jr., N. J. Williams, A. H. Benton, J. L. Moore, Billie Moore, Cecil G. Thompson, Burnice Hollis, F. H. Ferris, A. M. Harms, Charlie Atkins, B. I. Garrett, W. E. Banks and Dr. C. W. Hagood.

Mrs. Bazemore Suggests Study Group Helps.

Mrs. T. C. Bazemore, who has recently been appointed to succeed Mrs. J. C. Malone as city chairman of pre-school circles, suggests reading during the summer months as a valuable help to Mothers' Study clubs.

Many good books pertaining to child training may be had at the city libraries. Good literature on all pre-school problems may be secured for a small cost from the following addresses: National Office, 1201 Sixteenth street, Washington, D. C.; American Child Health Association, 270 Seventh avenue, New York; American Social Hygiene Association, 270 Seventh avenue, New York; U. S. Department of Labor, Children's Bureau, Washington, D. C. One of the very best sources of information on this subject is the Child Welfare Magazine, which carries several articles on pre-school work in each issue.

Morningside Woman's Club Has Meeting.

The monthly meeting of the Morningside Business Woman's club was held last Tuesday evening at 415 Morningside drive. In the absence of the president, Mrs. M. H. Hamby, the vice president, Miss May Belle Peich, presided. Plans were discussed for raising money for the purpose of making a donation to the building fund of the new Morningside Presbyterian church. The club was divided into two teams, with Mrs. Frank Rogers and Miss May Belle Peichard as captains. Mrs. W. N. Glenn, Miss Eunice Peters and Miss Maud Ashmore were appointed to serve on the nominating committee. All club members are especially invited to a picnic to be held on Saturday afternoon, June 26, at Mooner's lake. Cars will leave 415 Morningside drive at 2, 3 and 5 p. m. Carlton W. Biens, assistant solicitor general, gave an interesting address on "Service." Miss Mary Jerome entertained the club with two solos.

Miss Limbo Weds Ernest E. Fuller.

The marriage of Miss Evelyn Limbo and Ernest E. Fuller was solemnized Saturday evening, June 12, at 6:30 o'clock at the home of Rev. W. H. Faust. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Limbo, formerly of Tennessee, now of Atlanta. She is a charming and admired young woman, possessed of a lovely personality.

Mr. Fuller is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Fuller, formerly of Gainesville, now of Atlanta, and is a valued employee of the Southern Bell Telephone company. He is a young man of sterling traits.

Dr. J. G. Earnest Offers Cup To Juniors at Camp Highland

Dr. J. G. Earnest, who has figured prominently in Camp Highland's success, has again presented the J. W. C. A. camp with a gift that is highly valuable—not only for its intrinsic worth, but because of the sentiment behind it. Dr. Earnest has offered the champion cup to the William E. Arnaud cup presented yearly at Highland by William E. Arnaud. The Earnest cup will be presented, at the end of the summer, to the best all-round camper under 16 years of age. The Arnaud cup goes to the best all-round camper over 16. The Arnaud cup has been presented yearly for the past four years.

The Earnest cup made its appearance at Camp Highland on the Sunday of June 6 when Dr. Earnest, accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. Stacy Earnest Hill, Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Boykin, W. W. Moninger, and the All Saints' church choir, visited Camp Highland. Mr. Moninger conducted services, the choir rendered a beautiful musical program, and Dr.

Pre-School Circle Well-Child Clinic.

The pre-school circle of College Park will conduct a well-child clinic on Monday, June 21, at 4 o'clock in the Methodist church basement.

Doctors and nurse will be in charge and all mothers of children under six years of age are asked to bring them for a thorough examination and keep their children well and strong.

Mrs. Erwin Honors Witches' Club.

Mrs. J. A. Erwin, first vice president, was hostess to the members of the Witches' club Tuesday afternoon at Rich's tearoom. The witches will take part during the coming week in the entertainment of the disabled veterans of the world war. Mrs. Marguerite Murphy, president of the club, called attention to the necessity for a full attendance of the witches on the regular serving day in July at the Georgia Children's Receiving Home, Ormwood court.

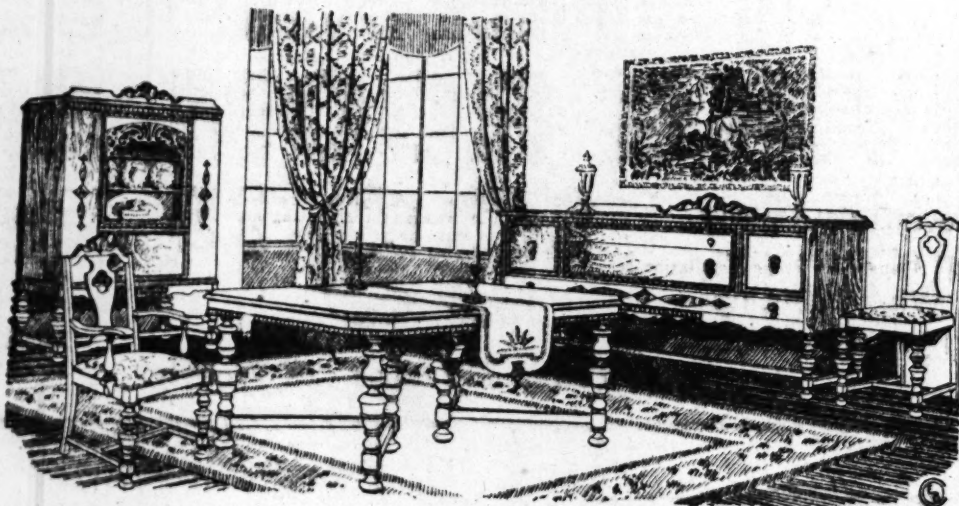

It was voted to send a letter of congratulation and a pledge of support to Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, newly elected president of the Atlanta Woman's club.

The business session was followed by a social hour. Those present were: Mrs. E. H. Barrett, Mrs. Rufus Barnett, Mrs. Everett Brown, Mrs. Hamilton Douglas, Jr., Mrs. A. W. Evans, Mrs. W. A. Crossland, Mrs. E. E. Hugueley, Mrs. Ollie Lackey, Mrs. John Nelson, Mrs. Marguerite Murphy, Mrs. Ollie Foundstone, Mrs. Y. K. Wray, Mrs. S. E. Ward, Mrs. James A. Watson, Jr., Mrs. James A. Erwin.

ELEVEN STORES - TWO FACTORIES Forsyth and Hunter - Atlanta - Walnut 7811

VISITORS AT THE WHITE HOUSE—The members of the Georgia delegation which called on President Coolidge at the white house to invite him to the 62d anniversary of the battle of Kennesaw mountain, which took place June 26, 1865, and was one of the turning points of the civil war. A reunion of the blue and the grey will take place at Marietta, Ga., on that date. Left to right, in front, are: Senator Harris, John L. Clem, E. R. Hunt, the mayor of Marietta; in the back row are: Theodore Miller, J. A. Massey, J. B. Giles and Fred Morris.

BRAINS OF CITY'S MUSIC—Howard Candler, Atlanta civic leader, who is president of the Municipal Opera association, which every year presents an elaborate program of musical comedy.

OH, WHAT "A BRIDE!"—This charming young lady is none other than Louise Hunter, dainty prima donna of the Municipal Opera association, as she will appear in the season opener, "The Chocolate Soldier," tomorrow night at the Atlanta theater. (Francis E. Price)

MARRIED—CAN YOU BEAT IT?—Roy Hinton Matthews, 19, and his bride, 72, who have returned to Newport News from their honeymoon. The blushing bride has been wedded three times. "Love at first sight," they say. (International)

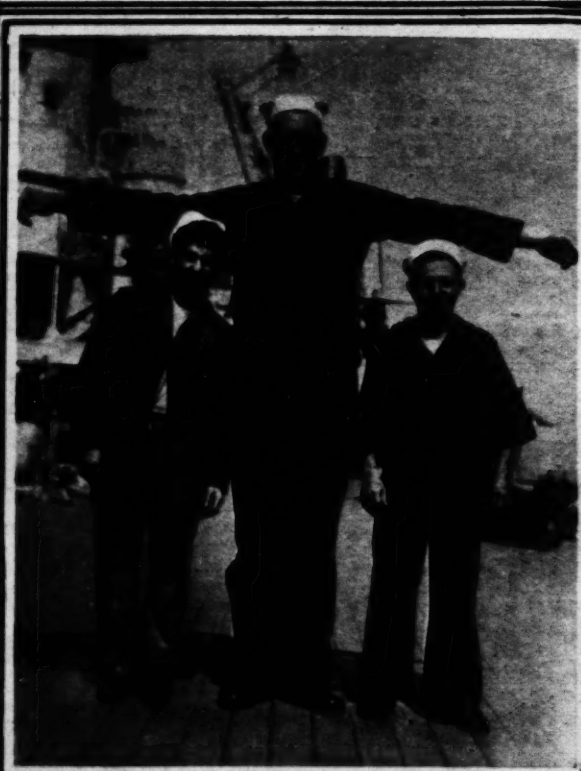

BACK TO CHARM CITY—Miss Vera Myers, star of "Sally" and other attractions which have delighted Atlanta audiences, who will take leading parts in the summer season of musical comedy which opens tomorrow night. She is a brilliant dancer, having done solo work with Anna Pavlova, and is also a singer of note.

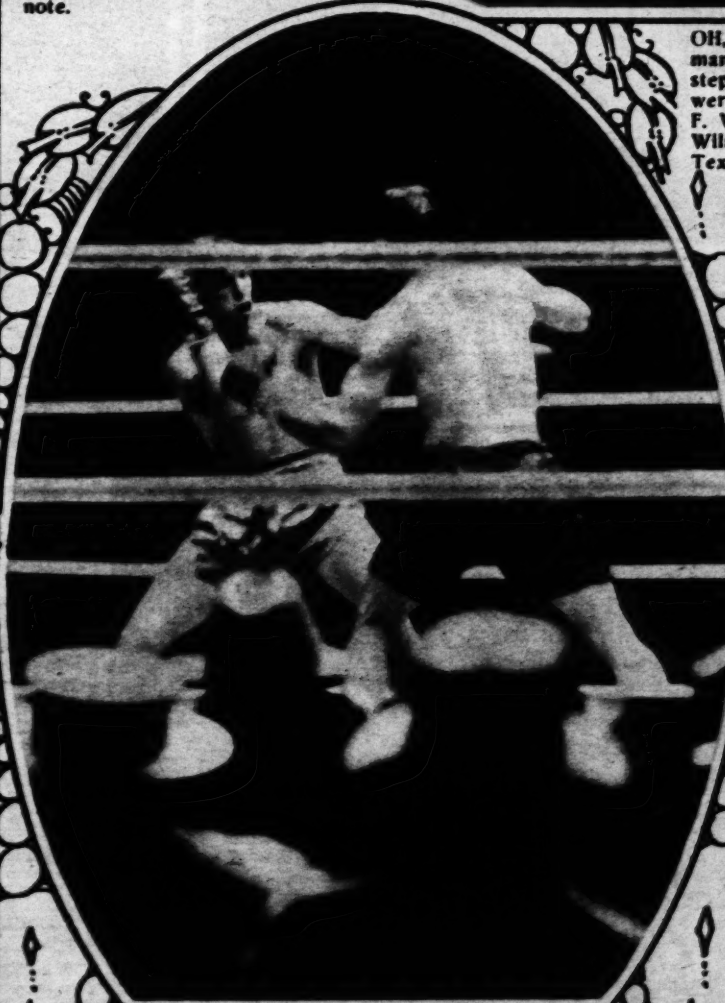

OH, BOY, HOW THEY CAN STRUT!—These nine fair damsels represent as many American cities, where contests were held to select the best Charleston steppers for John Murray Anderson's "Charleston," a Pabst production. They were snapped in New York. Left to right: Marjorie Zent, of Buffalo; Heanne F. Warren, of Detroit; Peggy Dunlap, of Memphis; Isabelle Zehner, of Chicago; Wilma Novak, of New York; Trinx Jackson, of Atlanta; Tola Blust, of Dallas, Texas; Grace Butterli, of Kansas City, and Annette Roy, of Boston. (International)

FASHION NOTE IN SUMMER FURS—These cute little Chows are all of a single litter. They belong to a Syracuse, N. Y., woman. At two months of age they are valued at more than $1,000. (Herbert)

KING OF BRITISH GOLF—He's Jess Sweetser, and he hails from the good old U. S. A. He is here shown receiving the cup representing the British amateur golf title, which he won at Muirfield. (International)

OFF TO BIG FAIR—Members of Atlanta's "Gate City Guard," official representatives of the state of Georgia at Philadelphia's Sesqui-centennial Exposition, as they entrained at Brookwood station. Left to right: Lieutenant and Mrs. F. E. Hankinson, Miss Apperson, Captain L. B. Harrell, Miss Jo Bett Apperson, Lieutenant Marion Williamson, Captain and Mrs. W. B. Elliott, Lieutenant and Mrs. C. B. Bottom, Captain Jack O'Leary, Captain and Mrs. B. T. Hulet, Ben Hulet, Jr., Captain and Mrs. J. A. Lambrought.

"THE RESURRECTION"—There have been many artists who have expressed on canvas their conception of THE RESURRECTION, but none have mastered the subject like Fra Angelico. This picture was painted for the Monastery of San Marco at Florence, Italy. It is another of the 52 art masterpieces selected as the world's greatest. See story in today's Constitution Magazine.

DECATUR PRIZE-WINNER—Miss Raemond Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Wilson, of 154 Clermont avenue, Decatur. She won the medal and cash prize of $100 offered by Mrs. Thomas L. Cooper for highest scholastic record for the three-year high school course. She also received the "A club" pin from the P.-T. A.

THE TENNESSEE LOOP—Remarkable view of Moccasin Bend snapped from the heights of Lookout Mountain above the city of Chattanooga.

HOUDINI OF HORSE WORLD—Is "Joe," trick horse belonging to a Richmond, Cal., fireman. To prove that no knot will hold him, "Dick" unties one for the camera. (International)

YES, ANOTHER PRIZE AMERICAN BEAUTY—Pretty soon they'll publish the photo of a girl who doesn't claim to be America's fairest. This "holder" of the national title is Miss Hazel Forbes, of Astoria, N. Y., who will compete in the international pageant in Paris. What the eagle and the flag have to do with it, nobody knows. (Herbert)

AL'S GIRL WEDS COP—The former Miss Emily Smith, daughter of Governor Al Smith, of New York, who now is Mrs. Major John A. Warner, is shown with her husband, head of New York's state constabulary. They are said to have received wedding gifts valued at $350,000. (International)

MRS. WILSON MAKES PUBLIC APPEARANCE—The wife of America's World war president (at right), is shown with the wife of United States Senator Swanson, of Virginia, at the unveiling of the John Ericson memorial in Washington. She has appeared in public only rarely since Wilson's death. (Herbert)

ROYALTY FLIVVERS WITH EDISON—Sweden's crown prince, on a visit to America, visited Thomas A. Edison and was treated to a jaunt in the electrical wizard's four-year-old Ford. The prince insisted that he enjoyed the ride. (Herbert)

DIVING CHAMP SHOWS HOW SHE DOES IT—Miss Aileen Riggan, youthful Olympic titleholder, in a series of fancy diving performances. From top to bottom, they are the back jackknife, forward one and a half, swan and front jackknife. (International)

LIFE STORY READS LIKE AN OFFICE MOTTO—"Keep Smiling," "I'm Busy," "Do It Now," and their usual inane companions seem to have been taken seriously by at least one girl. She's Henrietta Eddelsheim, of Brooklyn. Deprived of the use of her hands she has gone through high school and is studying designing in college, doing her work with a pencil. (Herbert)

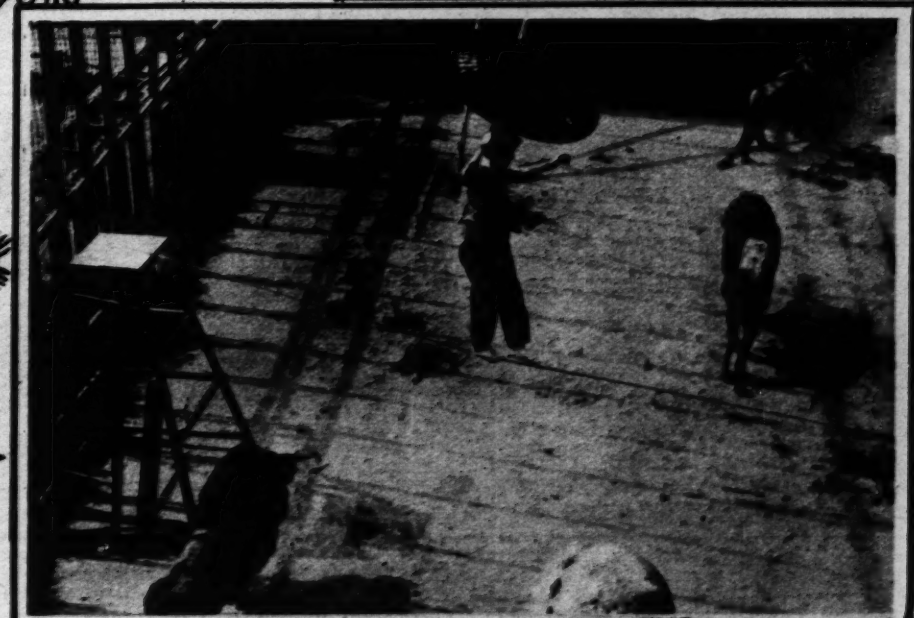

HELEN GOES UNDER KNIFE—Miss Helen Wills, crack tennis star, who was rushed to a Paris hospital to undergo an operation. Illness has caused her to cancel several matches abroad. (International)

AFRAID OF HIS WIFE—The Angora government of the powerful Mustapha Kemal Pasha has refused Halide Edib Hanoum, divorced wife of Kemal Pasha, a passport to America to make a lecture tour. Fear of open criticism of the pasha and his regime is said to be the cause of this action. (International)

"THE PRISONER'S SONG"—This little girl showed the cameraman how she could make her dog "sing" by holding him by the front legs and giving him "the pitch." (International)

WATCH YOUR STEP—Was never spoken in warning more appropriately than to Tui Lorraine, motion picture circus performer, while she was doing this tight-rope stunt over the den of man-eating lions. (International)

SHAKING DICE WITH DEATH—Arthur Menken, of New York, Harvard law student, wagered $1,000 he could jump from a speeding plane in a parachute, but the plane crashed and became the mass of wreckage shown here before he could leap. The pilot was unharmed. Menken plans to try another jump. (International)

HE TOLD THE WORLD by telegraph that the war between the states was practically at an end. Maynard Huyck, 87, of Illinois, was a telegraph operator assigned to General Weitzel and he ticked out the message from Richmond that union troops were in the city and the war nearly over. (International)

"ATLANTA'S SWEETHEART" GOES SHOPPING

Come with Louise Hunter, dainty prima donna of the Atlanta Light Opera association, on a tour of places of interest in the city's downtown business section, where everything the heart of the shopper desires may be found.

LOVELINESS OF MUSIC AND MOTION—Pictured in front of the Biltmore Hotel are Miss Louise Hunter, star of the Municipal Opera Association of Atlanta, and her new Franklin sport roadster. The car is a specially designed and fully equipped model which was purchased by Miss Hunter upon her arrival in Atlanta from S. B. Dodge, salesmanager of the Franklin Motor Car Company.

"RICH'S QUEEN QUALITY SHOE DEPARTMENT have the most adorable slippers I have seen anywhere—even on Fifth avenue."—Louise Hunter.

"ATLANTA'S SWEETHEART" INSPECTS SERVEL—Extolling the wonders of electric refrigeration, Miss Louise Hunter recently inspected the display of Servel Electric Refrigerators at the salesrooms of the Georgia Railway & Power Company, 75 Marietta street. Miss Hunter was singularly surprised at the small first cost and the economical operation of this "new-day" method of refrigeration.

"ATLANTA'S SWEETHEART" SMILES HER APPROVAL—The charming young opera star smiles her pleasure when two of the season's most popular Bradley Bathing Suits are modeled for her by two pretty bathing girls.

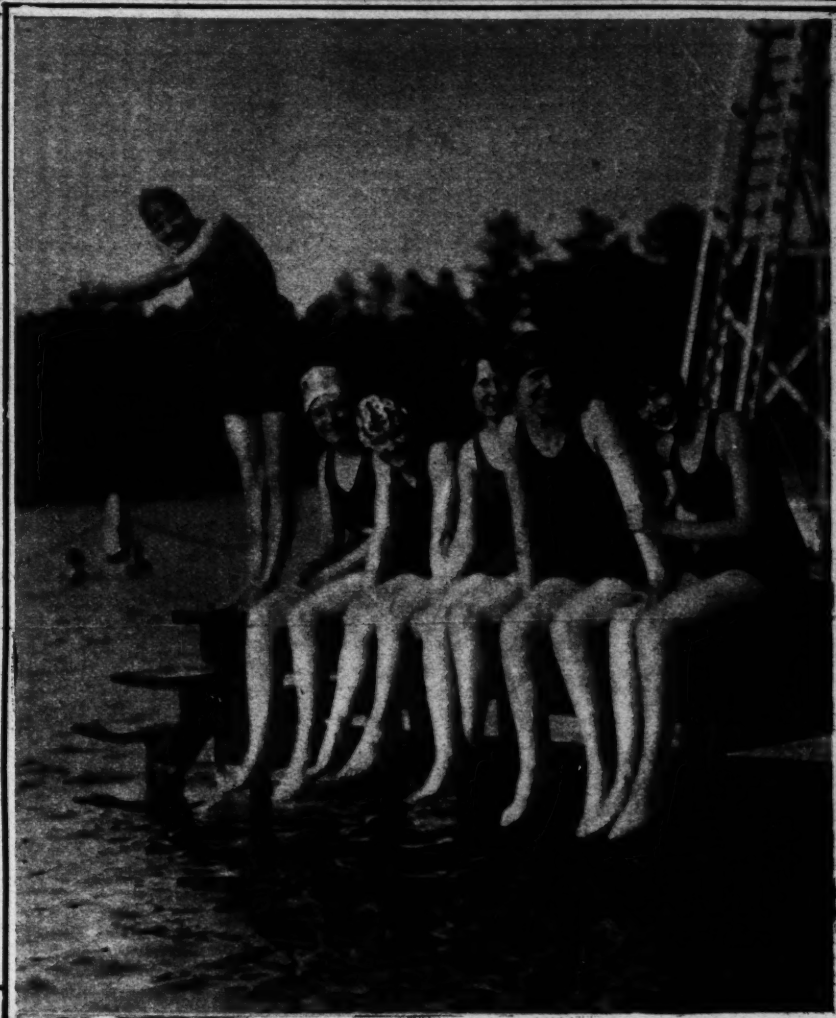

MISS LOUISE HUNTER costumed as the bride in the "Chocolate Soldier." The costume Miss Hunter is wearing in this photograph is an M. Rich & Bros. creation. Miss Hunter made a tour of the Rich store and exclaimed over the exclusive apparel she found there.

MISS LOUISE HUNTER VISITS BENNETT'S JEWELRY STORE, 6 West Alabama street, and greets Mr. Claude S. Bennett. In this photograph she is shown wearing a $3,000 Platinum Bracelet, set with 100 exquisite blue white diamonds.

A BEAUTY ADMIRES BEAUTY—Miss Louise Hunter in a section of the French room at the Solon of The Stephen Philipposian, Inc. After a complete tour of this exclusive Atlanta store, Miss Hunter said that she had seen no finer or more beautiful display of period furniture and individual pieces in all her tours of America.

AUTO SPONSORS ON OUTING
Wives and sweethearts of members of the Atlanta Automobile association are shown enjoying a bridge game in the cool of the clubhouse at the recent annual outing and barbecue of the organization at Brookhaven Country club. (J. T. Holloway)

SIX-CYLINDER CHAMP—He's C. W. Temple, winner of the golf trophy at the automobile association barbecue and outing. (J. T. Holloway)

STREAM LINES—Are not an exclusive feature of the autos these water nymphs swear allegiance to. They took advantage of the Atlanta Automobile association barbecue to take a cooling dip. Left to right, Misses Frances Alexander, Marion Barr, Alyne Murphy, Louise Duncan, Billy McCrory and Peggy White. (J. T. Holloway)

ANOTHER BALLOON INNOVATION—Not in the matter of auto tires but a novel aerial contest at the barbecue of the Atlanta Automobile association. (J. T. Holloway)

TRY THIS ON YOUR PIANO—R. N. Reed wields the sauce mop at the automobile association 'cue, while Mrs. H. McCoy Van Devender calls on R. E. Cullinane to say whether "it's thoroughly cooked." (J. T. Holloway)

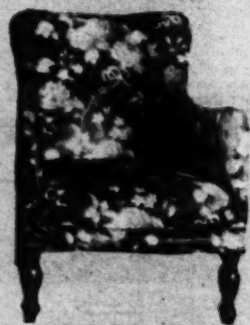

HORSE PASSE, BUT SHOES STILL USEFUL—Iron footgear of "old Dapple" were the only hint of horse-and-buggy days at the automobile association outing. E. M. DeVore won the horseshoe-pitching contest. (J. T. Holloway)

the cool, bracing surf—and battered and wet with spray, you climb out on the welcoming sand
—have a Camel!*

Camels contain the very choicest tobaccos grown in all the world. Camels are blended by the world's most expert blenders. Nothing is too good for Camels. In the making of this one brand we concentrate the tobacco knowledge and skill of the largest organization of tobacco experts in the world. No other cigarette made is like Camels. They are the overwhelming choice of experienced smokers.

WHEN the surf is running in from the sea before a balmy, spray-laden breeze. And you plunge in to shoulder aside the foam-topped rollers. When you climb out, glowing with exhilaration and join the friendly crowds on the beach—have a Camel!

For after healthful exercise, no other cigarette in the world satisfies the taste like Camels. Camel mildness and mellow fragrance is the awaited award of millions of experienced smokers. Camels are rolled of the choicest tobaccos nature grows. That's why they never tire the taste. Camels are the expert blend that did away with cigaretty after-taste. Camels are the taste revelation, the smooth and mellow mild wonder of smoking.

So this sparkling day as you start for the cool, restful beach. When with measured strokes you have tried your strength against the breakers, and turned back to shore tingling with happiness and health—know then the most fragrant mellowness ever made into a cigarette. Have the utmost in smoking contentment and pleasure.

Have a Camel!

Our highest wish, if you do not yet know and enjoy Camel quality, is that you may try them. We invite you to compare Camels with any other cigarette made at any price.

A MAN Must Hold HIS WIFE

by E. Phillips
Oppenheim

William Shales Was a Small Man with a Negligible Physique, But He Could Fight for His Own When the Time Came

POLICE CONSTABLE CHOPPING pushed open the door of the bar parlor at the Melhampton Arms and insinuated about a third of his capacious person through the aperture. He raised his hand to the peak of his cap in a ponderous salute.

"Good morning, Mrs. Dowdswell. Good morning, all," he said.

The greeting was properly returned by Granfer Crocombe, Mr. Scroggins, the butcher; Mr. Harry Foulds, the veterinary surgeon; Mr. Tom Baker, the ironmonger, and Mrs. Dowdswell, the widowed landlady herself. The latter, who was wiping some glasses, beamed hospitably upon her august visitor.

"You'll step in, Mr. Chopping," she invited.

The police constable shook his head.

"I just looked in to bring you a bit of news, Mrs. Dowdswell," he announced. "Ned the Gypsy is back. He's up on No Man's Patch at the present moment, making them baskets of his'n."

There was a little murmur of interest. It was information, this, which had its dramatic background.

"Farmer Craske see him coming along through Woolworthy Town," the constable continued. "He's got his caravan back, fire burning inside, clean curtains, and all ship-shape. Muster Craske said he seemed a bit thinner, but otherwise no different."

"Three months' jail aren't enough to hurt a man of Ned's build," Mr. Scroggins declared. "They do say that he's as hard as nails and tough as a bit of whipcord."

"I'll take a seat and have a glass of whisky, Mr. Chopping?" Mrs. Dowdswell begged. "We'll not press you to stay, knowing how busy you might be. I've a drop of your favorite Irish here."

The constable shook his head. "Not this morning, Mrs. Dowdswell," he replied, a little reprovingly. "I'm on duty at the present moment—in fact, I only just looked in to be sure that you weren't behindhand with the news. Good morning, all."

The constable withdrew, closing the door behind him. Mr. Scroggins grinned. "I bet he's none too pleased to hear of Ned being around and about," he declared. "He's a big man for peace, is Chopping. He'd be like a bit of putty in Ned's hands. Neither he nor that young Hawkins could stand up to a proper fighting man for half a round."

"I wonder why such weedy youths as Edward Hawkins go into the force at all," Harry Foulds observed. "Why, there's no self-respecting wrongdoer would ever suffer the like to lay hands on him."

"It looks as though they might have to tackle Ned, anyway," Tom Baker remarked, "and if they do, God help 'em!"

The man's voice, when he spoke, had in it a curious note of sadness. "I ought never to have married a fine woman like you, Bella," he said.

"We'd better all of us apply to be made special constables," Granfer Crocombe chuckled.

"Some of us'd have a poor time," the butcher grunted. "However, as for me, I don't move from now on without my steel."

"A lot of use that would be to you if Ned the Gypsy came into your shop quarrelsome-like!" Harry Foulds jeered. "If he wanted a sirloin of beef, he'd have it."

"I wonder," Mrs. Dowdswell reflected, "whether William Shales knows yet."

"I see him coming out of the post-office two hours ago, looking main serious," Tom Baker remarked. "That may have been something to do with the affair."

"If he's a wise man, he'll send Bella away," Mrs. Dowdswell declared. "I've heard more tales about Ned the Gypsy than I've been able to take heed on, but he's a man I'd be mortal afeared of if I were a weakly man with a wife like Bella."

"This three months in jail may have sobered him a bit," Harry Foulds remarked.

"All the same," Tom Baker pronounced, "I'm rather concerned for that poor fellow William Shales. I'm wondering whether there's anything we could do to help him."

There was a somewhat awkward pause. The door had been opened hesitatingly, and a small man, in a dark gray suit of clothes, wearing a bowler hat a size too large for him, made a dubious entrance. He had weak blue eyes, a straggling fair mustache, and his physique was negligible. His one redeeming feature was his chin, which was square and dogged.

"Good morning, all," he said, making for a vacant seat. "A glass of bitter, please, Mrs. Dowdswell."

"With me," Tom Baker interposed hurriedly. "What's this we're hearing about Ned the Gypsy being back again, William?"

"He's up on No Man's Patch," the tailor replied. "I heard on him early this morning."

"Pity they ever let a troublesome fellow like that out of jail," Mr. Harry Foulds remarked, tapping his boot with his riding whip.

"An expense to the country, that sort are," the butcher agreed. "I'll bet old Chopping 'll be glad to see the back of him."

"And so shall I," William Shales agreed, "and so," he added deliberately, "will my wife."

"It's a fair shame," Mrs. Dowdswell declared, as she passed his tankard to her newly arrived customer, "that a respectable body should be so plagued."

The tailor accepted his beer, drank a portion of it and cleared his throat. "There be gossip here and gossip there," he said, "and it wouldn't be like them that loves a bit of mischief if they didn't now and then suggest that my Bella had some time encouraged the fellow. But this is God's truth, and a very suitable place to say it in, with you gentlemen here to listen. She did no more than smile pleasantly at him in Okehampton market the day she bought a broom, and since then he never left her alone."

"There's no one has ever said different, I'm sure," Mrs. Dowdswell murmured soothingly.

"I do admit," the tailor continued, as he looked into the bottom of his tankard, "that he did handle me cruel in the yard of the Blue Lion that afternoon, but I was never made for a fighting man, though I sought to do my best, as any man should, to stand up by the side of his wedded wife. One kiss he did have of her, and against that she struggled, though there are those who love mischief who would say that she didn't. And for that, and what he did to me, he's been in prison this three months. He was let out from Exeter jail last week. Were any of you in court when he was sentenced, gentlemen?"

They shook their heads.

"It was all in the paper," Mrs. Dowdswell observed. "The shameful vagabond, I call him!"

"He turned and he laughed and he kissed his hand at Bella," William Shales said solemnly. "I'll see you when I'm free, dear beauty," he called out, and Bella went that pale I thought she'd have fainted in my arms. She be mortal afraid of the man, is my wife."

"I don't wonder," Mr. Tom Baker declared heartily. "See here, William, Chopping's got his eye on this little affair, as we well know, but if you'd feel more comfortable to have some of us, your fellow townfolk, come up, as it were, for an hour each—"

William Shales held out his hand. "Thank 'e kindly, Mr. Baker," he interrupted—"thank 'e all, gentlemen. It's up to me and the law to protect my wife, and I reckon we'll do it. I'm obliged for your kindly feeling, and I'd ask this much of you. If you find any gossip as would say that my wife Bella did owt to encourage this man—that she so much as held out her little finger to beckon him hither from Exeter jail—why, I'd be obliged if you'd give 'em the lie. That's what I'd ask for friendship's sake, and no more."

"And welcome, William," Tom Baker promised heartily. "It's clear to everybody that the man's infatuation was never encouraged by Mrs. Shales."

The tailor rose to his feet, having refused several offers of further refreshment.

"Good morning to 'e gentlemen," he said. "Good morning all."

William Shales climbed the steep hill of the town and turned to the left, where he proceeded along a pleasant side street until he presently reached his modest abode. He pushed open the gate, on which a small brass plate indicated his name and calling, opened the door of the homely, creeper-covered cottage, looked into the front room, where bales of cloth, a counter and several stools were disposed of in somewhat untidy fashion and finally, after a moment's hesitation, entered the back room, where a table was laid for the midday meal. A tall, fresh complexioned woman, with masses of rich brown hair and bright blue eyes, turned hastily around at his coming. In her eyes there was a strange expression—it might have been of fear.

"William! How you startled me!" she exclaimed. "Don't move about—like that!"

"You've naught to be frightened of," he answered quietly.

She set down the dish which she had been carrying, and faced him—a splendid woman of the country, with a clear Devon complexion, and limbs which seemed to defy the concealment of her flimsy summer dress. The two looked at one another for a moment in silence. There was something in their gaze which scarcely lent itself to analysis. The man's voice, when he spoke, had in it a curious note of sadness.

"I never ought to have married a fine woman like you, Bella," he said.

"Don't talk such nonsense," she answered sharply. "I'm satisfied. Let that be enough for you."

"But are you satisfied?" he demanded.

Her eyes flashed. She seemed for a moment to lose her temper. Was it anger or fear, he wondered?

"Sit down while the dinner's hot," she ordered. "You're my man and I've wanted no other. Let that be enough for you."

No word passed between them concerning the gypsy who had arrived at No Man's Patch.

That afternoon the Rev. Stanley Haselton was disturbed in his post-luncheon meditations by the announcement that a woman of the town desired an audience. He made his dignified way to the study, where Mrs. Shales awaited him. She rose to her feet at his entrance. The room was a beautiful one, furnished with taste, lined with cases of books, and with great vases of flowers distributed wherever space could be found. French windows stood open just far enough to admit the pleasant sounds of the languorous summer afternoon. The appearance of the woman—as though she herself had gained something in dignity and elegance from her unaccustomed surroundings—amazed the man whom she had come to visit.

"It is William Shales' wife, is it not?" he inquired. "Pray sit down."

"I'm that nervous I'd rather stand up, sir, and thank you," the woman replied. "I've been a poor attendant at church, sir, but William's one of your sidemen and I've come to ask for help."

"Certainly, Mrs. Shales," the vicar acquiesced, sinking into his easy chair and balancing the tips of his fingers against each other. "Now sit down and make yourself comfortable, there's a good woman. What can I do for you?"

She took no notice of his renewed invitation. She stood in the subdued circle of light which filtered its way through the window, and Mr. Haselton, who had some glimmerings of artistic perception, marveled at the splendid grace of this tortured woman.

"Sir," she began, "I need help, if ever a woman did, for there is a call for sin ringing in my ears and pounding in my heart every moment of the night. Will you go to him for me, sir—go to him this afternoon?"

The recollection of the woman's story came dimly into the vicar's mind. He was still, however, puzzled.

"Are you speaking of the man who insulted you, Mrs. Shales?" he asked—"this man who I hear has come back to the neighborhood?"

"I am speaking of Ned the Gypsy," she assented. "He's calling to me up from the hill there, and although I'm a good woman, sir, or always thought I was, the will of me's gone to pulp, and there's something inside of me that was only born that day at Okehampton, something of sin and terror and wonder. I'm a lost woman, sir, unless you'll go to him and get him to go away."

Mr. Haselton sat in his chair and reflected. He was a narrow man only by circumstance, and because such a frame of mind enabled him to perform his duties in better fashion. This was one of his rare moments of greatness.

"Bella Shales," he said, "you are one of those unhappy women at whose door sin has knocked. I will help you, but there is a Greater on Whom you must call. Pray with me here, and afterwards I will go to see Ned the Gypsy. But first, down on your knees by my side and ask for such help as I cannot give you."

The woman sank on to the hearth rug with a little sob. The vicar held her hand. Never before, in the course of his snug services in his respectably filled church, had his voice carried so near to Heaven. When they had risen the woman was calmer. He took her to the front door himself.

"In five minutes," he promised, "I shall start to see that man."

Ned the Gypsy sat on the steps of his caravan, plaiting a wicker basket. He was a man who might have been of any age between thirty and forty, the type of the true gypsy, with a dash of the Semitic. His cheekbones were a little high, his skin was tanned a deep shade of brown, his dark eyes possessed all the fire of youth, the lines of his mouth curved curiously upwards. He wore brown corduroy clothes and a red handkerchief knotted around his throat. Every now and then he glanced across towards where he had set a snare in the undergrowth close at hand.

Police Constable Chopping was his first visitor. He came plodding along the road, perspiring from his exertions, and apparently glad enough to reach his destination.

"Good afternoon," he said.

Ned the Gypsy looked up. He had been perfectly aware for some time of his visitor's proximity.

"Good afternoon," he answered.

"I be come to have a word with you, Ned," the constable continued. "It's a word which, if you're a wise man, you'll take as a word of warning."

The gypsy had recommenced his task. He made no comment.

"There's a feeling down yonder,"

Chopping continued, jerking with his thumb towards Melhampton, "that you'd better have chosen another pitch. Your camping here may be accidental-like—or it may not—but I want to tell you, Ned, that you do yourself no good by it, if you've any idea of stealing William Shales' wife away from him."

The gypsy's fingers stopped in their deft manipulation of a strip of willow. He looked up, and though not a muscle of his face moved, it seemed as though he were laughing inside.

"I stole a kiss once," he said, "no more. This time I shall not steal. What comes to a man he is free to accept. What is given to a man is his if he can hold it."

The constable felt that there was an excellent reply to this somewhere, but for the moment it eluded him.

"William Shales bean't a fighting man, and that you know," he declared. "The law, however, will protect him."

The gypsy laid down the basket upon which he was working and rose to his feet. A little ostentatiously he stretched out his long, lithe arms, displaying for a moment the muscles of his lean chest. Then he turned and mounted the steps which led into his caravan, disappeared and closed the door. Police Constable Chopping went round to the open window.

"Understand, Ned," he concluded, in the sternest voice he could command; "if thee makes the slightest attempt to molest William Shales or his wife you'll find yourself in jail again. You hear that?"

The gypsy turned his head and smiled. "I know the law," he said. "I shall not break it."

Police Constable Chopping moved away and set his face towards Melhampton. He had gone barely fifty yards before the sound for which the gypsy had been waiting—the squeal of a trapped rabbit—broke the stillness of the summer afternoon.

"What sound was that I heard?" the constable asked, glancing around suspiciously.

The gypsy looked up from his task. "Who knows?" he answered.

Next came Mr. Haselton. He rode his pony up the hill and had the advantage of arriving in good condition. The gypsy watched him approach without moving from his seat, although again he presented the appearance of one indulging in inward laughter.

"Good afternoon," said Mr. Haselton.

"Good afternoon," the gypsy replied.

Mr. Haselton delivered a frontal attack. "I have come to protest against your presence in this neighborhood," he began.

"It is common land," was the indifferent declaration.

"Whether your temporary resting place be common land or not is a small matter," the clergyman continued. "The law may decide that. I am here to warn you as to the sin and danger of interfering between a man and his wife. Bella Shales was lawfully wedded to her husband in the church of which I am a priest, and when you come here to tempt her to break her marriage vows you are doing a sinful thing."

The gypsy looked up lazily. "You speak a language which I do not understand," he droned. "I am on my rounds through the country. I make baskets and sell them. As to women, it is they who trouble me, not I them."

"That is not true," the vicar remonstrated. "What about that affair for which you have just been to prison, when you took a kiss from William Shales' wife and beat him cruelly?"

This time the gypsy laughed openly. "Is that sin?" he asked. "Then I am a sinner. The woman who is for me is mine."

"Ned," the clergyman said earnestly, "this woman loves her husband and would be happy with no one else. If you should tempt her away you would destroy her body and soul. Women are weak, every the best. Choose a woman of your own manner of life for your companion."

"What would you have me do?" the gypsy demanded.

"Put your horse in the shafts and turn your caravan away," the clergyman replied. "You may not believe it, Ned the Gyp, but there is a God who takes account of evil deeds, a God whom you will feel near you when you die. You may seek round then for the memory of one good action. Now is your chance. Let me help you harness your mare. Take the road across Dunworthy moor to the villages beyond."

"Tomorrow, perhaps, or the next day," the other yawned. "I make no promises, so I break none. I make no vows, so I am never perjured. And as to your God," he went on, "what you ask is that I should bribe him."

From the distance, where he had set a further snare, came he squeal of another trapped rabbit. The gypsy smiled.

"You had better go," he enjoined. "You cannot speak into my life, because your threats do not terrify me nor do I seek your good will. As for the woman, that is as it may be."

The gypsy plunged into the wood. The clergyman presently turned away and descended the hill.

First of all, the haze of sunlight left the air, then the sun itself went down, a ball of fire, behind the line of the western moor, blue through the summer day, black now against the crystalline sky. One by one the stars showed themselves overhead, a pale moon gained color, a little more blue smoke curled upwards from Melhampton, the birds in the wood ceased to sing. The gypsy, who had skinned his rabbit, cooked it and ate. Then he lit his pipe and sat on the steps of his caravan. His eyes wandered round the landscape lazily, and he began to sing to himself almost under his breath a disconnected, almost tuneless medley of words, with every now and then a low, haunting refrain. Pedestrians were few, but an automobile or two flashed by. Then there was silence. The man's chin sank on to his breast. The owls came out and hooted. Darkness obliterated the landscape. The gypsy opened the door of his caravan, and disappeared.

With the first pearly streaks of dawn the lonely caravaner was up and about. He washed in the stream and brought water for his tea, examined the snares for his rabbits, and set fresh ones. Afterwards he carried out a great bundle of osier twigs and sat making baskets. Sometimes he answered the greetings of the country folk who passed, sometimes he maintained a grim silence. The headkeeper from the hall paid him a visit of suspicion. The gypsy laughed in his face.

"You should catch your rabbits and keep them in cages," he advised, "else how can I help it if they come and visit me? All wild things come to wild people—the birds, if I call, or the deer. If the rabbits come, if they jump into my pot and I am hungry, then there must be rabbit stew."

"The rabbits don't jump into your pot with their skins off," the keeper grunted.

The gypsy laughed. "You are a clever man," he answered, "a very clever man. Let the poor gypsy alone. He will not trouble your game, and the rabbits are no man's property."

The keeper trudged off, and Ned the Gypsy ate his midday meal in peace. . . . Then, towards four o'clock, after he had closed the bank and donned his tennis flannels, Mr. Tidd came bicycling up the hill. He leaned his machine against the gray stone wall opposite and crossed the patch of greensward towards the cara-

Ed Wynn's Question Box

—BY—
ED WYNN

Dear Mr. Wynn—I am a boy 12 years old and am in the ninth grade in school. In my English lesson for next week I must write an essay in which I have to use three words meaning the direct opposite to the following three words: "Misery," "Sorrow" and "Woe." I know the opposite to "misery" is "happiness" and I know the opposite of "sorrow" is "joy" but the other word sticks me. Will you please tell me the opposite of "woe"? Yours truly—DICK SHONERY.

Answer:—I am surprised a boy your age doesn't know that. The opposite to "woe" is "giddap."

Dear Mr. Wynn:—You are so smart and claim you know so much, here's one for you. Answer this: Did you ever see a dog without eyes, without ears, without hair, without nose, without a mouth and without feet? Yours truly—VETTER N. ARIAN.

Answer:—Yes I saw a dog like that—a "Hot Dog."

Dear Mr. Wynn:—My wife and I had an argument last night about the army. My wife says, in order for a man to be buried with "military honors" he must be a captain, while I say he must be a general. Which of us is right? Yours truly—LEW TENANT.

Answer:—You are both wrong. In order for a man, in the army, to be buried with full military honors, he must be dead.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—Would you be kind enough to tell me the best way to remove paint? Yours truly—I. STAINESY.

Answer:—Sit on it.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—There is a certain man who passes our house every day and I notice no matter how hard it rains he never carries an umbrella. How do you account for that? Truly yours—I. C. HIMM.

Answer:—That is very easily accounted for. He most likely eats a lot of salt mackerel and that keeps him dry.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—What is meant by the expression "He came down with flying colors"? Yours truly—U. R. SOHSMART.

Answer:—That expression is used when a painter falls off a high building with a pot of paint in his hand.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I am a man 49 years of age. I have traveled all over the world and have just returned to settle down in America. I have a big problem to solve first. I have spent nearly all my money, but still have enough, if properly invested, to keep me for the rest of my life. I think I have a bright idea. I intend opening a school for "stuttering." What do you think of my idea? Truly yours—IGO BACKEN FORTH.

Answer:—Your idea is all right, but who wants to go to school to learn to stutter?

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I have often heard an actor on the stage tell a joke and then hear someone in the audience call the joke a chestnut. What is the resemblance of a joke to a chestnut? Sincerely—I. M. A. GIGGLER.

Answer:—You can't tell till it is cracked.

Dear Mr. Wynn:—After a wedding ceremony the minister generally says: "I now pronounce you 'one.'" My mother always says that she and papa are "ten." How does she make that out? Truly yours—SUE PERFLUOUS.

Answer:—Your mother probably figures that she is "one" and your father is "nothing."

Dear Mr. Wynn:—I asked my father what a bigamist is, and he said a bigamist is a man who makes the same mistake twice. What does he mean. Sincerely yours—ISSIE WRIGHT.

For Players of Whist

BIDDING should not be affected by the new honor count when the game is regular auction. Winning the rubber is still of the first importance although the bonus for the rubbers should have been raised to 350 in order to preserve the equilibrium.

In progressive auction and duplicate auction, however, the count for honors overshadows the importance of game. When one side scores three odd at spades and the opponents have simple honors, the latter win on the de.

There is a tendency in regular auction for players to overbid when holding four honors but a few severe losses will be sufficient to correct this.

Placing cards from the bidding is always fascinating and less difficult than the task of locating them by hard counting. A pretty example is illustrated in the deal which follows.

West secured ten tricks.

It was possible for the declarer to place all the high cards as soon as the king of spades was led. North could not hold both ace and king of clubs or he would have opened that suit in preference to spades, therefore north must hold the ace and queen of clubs and south the king. The double would not have been possible by north without some strength in the diamond suit, and that could only be king and one other.

With four losing cards in the black suits, game was only possible for the declarer if he secured four tricks in diamonds. This could not be done by leading the jack, as north would undoubtedly play the king and south would have the high diamond for the fourth round. Likewise had the declarer led a low diamond and played the queen he could secure only three tricks in the suit, as one of his own honors would fall when the ace was led from dummy.

The ten of diamonds at trick two was a perfect play. North passed the trick without hesitation, being anxious to have his partner secure the lead and give him a club, which south would assuredly have done.

After capturing the king of diamonds at trick three, south took two rounds of trumps in order to secure the last trump in the north hand. The declarer reasoned that south probably held four diamonds and three cards in each other suit, his bid of two diamonds having been made on so weak a suit that he was unlikely to have another suit of equal strength. South might have had four hearts except for the fact that with only three cards in the red suits north would certainly have made a bid in one of the black suits. The play of the deal really was finished with the first eight tricks after the declarer had secured the discard of one of his losing black cards.

When holding honors in sequence, lead the highest when it is desirable to have second hand cover and the lowest when not.

The next deal is more complicated but perhaps less difficult:

Crossed Wires

A Fascinating
New Serial By John T. McCutcheon

INSTALLMENT XXI

Mr. Crayton Arrives.

IN RESPONSE to his wife's urgent wire Mr. Crayton arrived in Edgemoor the following afternoon. He was in a bad humor. A big financial deal, rich in promise, had been struck by a withering slump in the market and was now in a precarious state. It was no time for him to be away from his business and he began barking the minute he got off the train.

His wife met him. She talked so fast and so feelingly that he was confused. He cut her short with an impatient gesture.

"I can't make out what you're driving at," he exclaimed. "Now calm down and tell me what's the trouble."

"Why can't you understand, it's about Virginia. The girl's lost her senses."

"Yes, yes; go on."

"In the first place, she's been positively rude to the Count."

"The Count? You don't mean to say he's been with you?"

Mrs. Crayton stiffened. "I certainly do. He's been with us since we left New York."

Mr. Crayton stopped in his tracks and glared at her.

"And you wire me to leave my business at a most critical time because Virginia has been rude to that miserable parasite!"

"William! Don't speak to me like that! Now you calm down and hear what I have to say. The Count is a perfect gentleman. I don't know what I should have done without him. He's been a perfect traveling companion, so thoughtful and considerate, and so devoted to Virginia—I don't know what's got into that child!"

"Has she turned down the Count?" asked her husband, his face lighting eagerly.

"Yes, but—" Mr. Crayton suddenly burst into laughter. Here at last was something to his liking. "I'm delighted to hear it," he announced. "Thank heaven, the girl has some of her father's sense, after all. It's worth coming all the way from home to get news like that."

Mrs. Crayton regarded him with tightly pressed lips. Then she spoke slowly and ominously. "But I haven't told you the rest," she said in acid tones. "You may not laugh quite so heartily."

"Fire away," chuckled Mr. Crayton. "It can't be so bad."

"She's fallen in love with the chauffeur!"

"The chauffeur? Who, that young fellow, what's his name?"

"Yes—Rasher. She's been visiting him in the hospital."

"The hospital! What's he doing in the hospital?"

"He was shot."

"Shot—great Scot, who shot him? The Count?"

"No! Don't be so stupid. The bandits shot him when—"

"Bandits!" Mr. Crayton was now glaring at her in wide amazement. "Say, what's been going on here? This is the first I've heard of bandits."

"I didn't want to worry you, William. We were held up two days ago. Three men stopped our car and took Virginia's necklace. Then that wretched chauffeur tried to intercede—a most stupid thing to do—and for his stupidity got a bullet through him. The Count says his foolhardiness might have cost all of us our lives."

"And the Count—what did he do in this crisis?"

Mrs. Crayton flushed uncomfortably. "What was there for him to do, with three armed bandits? What would you do? He did the only sensible thing—he offered no resistance."

"Ah, ha," exclaimed Mr. Crayton, "he was probably in collusion with the bandits."

"O, you are hopeless!" snapped his wife. "Why will you persist in being so suspicious of Count de Barsac?"

"Was the chauffeur armed?" asked Mr. Crayton, his mind now centered upon getting to the bottom of the matter.

"No, he wasn't!" retorted Mrs. Crayton. "That's what made his action so utterly stupid. If he had been armed there would have been some justice!" She stopped abruptly. She was getting on dangerous ground and rather awkwardly tried to switch the trend of the examination. "I don't think the chauffeur is badly hurt."

"Hold on, just a minute," cried her husband. "This is getting interesting. Was the Count armed?"

"O, why will you persist in being so exasperating? You're—"

"Was the Count armed?" Mr. Crayton was now certain his wife was trying to evade this question and equally certain the Count had been armed.

"I'll not discuss the matter any further—not until you are in a more reasonable frame of mind." Her words were crisp and biting. Mr. Crayton smiled.

"So the Count was armed and put up no resistance. He took it lying down," he mused, "and the chauffeur was unarmed and put up a scrap. By George, I must go and see this young chap."

Goaded to desperation, Mrs. Crayton turned angrily upon him.

"It would serve you right if she marries the chauffeur. I suppose that would please you enormously."

He laughed pleasantly. "I can think of worse things than that. However," he added stiffly, "she won't marry him, I can assure you, if that is what is worrying you. My only concern is that she doesn't fall for the Count. That was my worry."

They arrived at the hotel, Mrs. Crayton with a face like a thunder cloud and Mr. Crayton beaming with maddening amiability. He had, for the moment, quite forgotten the precarious state of his business affairs. His good humor was soon to be dispelled, however. A telegram from his associates in the big deal awaited him. "Six hundred thousand necessary at once or deal collapses with total loss. Banks unwilling to help on account nervous financial conditions following slump."

"I must return at once," he announced grimly. "There's a critical business situation to be met. And I can tell you," he added belligerently, "I'm not going to take it lying down, either. They'll know they've been in a fight before I'm through with 'em."

"But, William, before you go do please reason with Virginia. Try to bring her to her senses. Forbid her going to the hospital and tell her to be more polite to the Count."

"O, damn the Count!" he exploded, and then more reasonably, "I'll see the chauffeur, however, and tell him there's no chance if he has any crazy designs about marrying Virginia. He's poor. A little cash will probably square him."

"And Virginia—what if she persists in being obstinate? She has refused to leave here until this Rasher person is out of danger. In the meantime she'll fall more and more in love with him—or think she is. It's just a romantic fancy, of course, but the situation has its dangers. You must make these plain to her. Tell her she must leave with us at once—compel her to leave this wretched place."

"And the Count—does he go with you?" asked Mr. Crayton cynically.

"Of course that's up to him," responded his wife. "He may not wish to. We've treated him so outrageously."

"Now here," proposed her husband; "I haven't much time to bother with this matter, but if I agree to square it with this Rasher and get Virginia started home with you will you agree to can that Count—give him his walking papers—and send him off to chase some other rich man's daughter?"

"Sh—here he comes now!" The Count entered the hotel and, much surprised, greeted Mr. Crayton. "Delighted!" he said, while his mind was busily weighing the significance of Crayton's unexpected appearance. "This is a most unexpected pleasure."

"It was difficult to come at just this time," said Mr. Crayton politely. "My business affairs are in a most critical condition owing to the market collapse and—but I mustn't bother you with matters which cannot interest you."

The Count shrugged his shoulders and Mr. Crayton turned to his wife.

"We will leave by train tonight," he said. "I shall arrange to have the car sold for what we can get. It will be cheaper going home by train."

He affected not to notice the sudden look of concern on De Barsac's face. What was this—? Talking about traveling economically—and selling the car!

"Now, Count, if you wish to go on with us, we'll be glad to have you, but you may find conditions somewhat changed at home if this deal goes against me."

Virginia now appeared, her face radiant.

"Why, father, what brings you here?" she cried, and then turned quickly to her mother. "Did you send for him?"

Her mother did not answer. She was desperately humiliated by her husband's reference to money matters, his tactless reference to economy and saving expenses. Her husband's next remark was a devastating shock.

"Well, Virginia, I understand you've fallen in love with the chauffeur," he exclaimed genially. "I don't know what we can do with a chauffeur in the family, now that I may be obliged to sell the car."

Virginia flushed and her mother gasped. Had her husband completely lost his senses?

"I must go up and see the young man," he continued, apparently oblivious to the storm of emotions caused by his remark. He then turned affably to the Count.

"You see, Count, if we are to have a chauffeur in the family I might as well get acquainted with him. Come on, Virginia, let's go up and see him. I understand you know the way to the hospital."

THE WISDOM TOOTH comes like a breath of fresh air to those of us who are slowly suffocating from sexy plays. Even the most active members of the gutter-set must have had their fill by now and even they will be glad to welcome "The Wisdom Tooth." Marvelously written, perfectly acted and staged, this fantastic and wistful little comedy leaves nothing to be wished for. It has as its central figure just an office clerk, one who suddenly realizes he is nothing more than a nonentity, that he has lost every semblance of ambition he might once have had. He dreams again that he is a boy and we journey back with him to that wonderful day when the circus came to town. Those of you who scoff most at people who shed tears at the theater are precisely the ones who had best take two handkerchiefs to "The Wisdom Tooth." This play should do for the lagging young man who not even yeast could claim to do.

Atlanta is never in safer hands than when being represented in New York by Mrs. John Murphey and Katharine. It's the wisest move you ever make in letting them come up now and then to represent you. On their last trip, "Dearie" (Mrs. Murphey) did a great deal of theater-going, and to all appearances, had the time of her life. Katharine, as usual, attracted interest everywhere she went, and each of these "interests" immediately attached himself to her hoping against hope that a miracle might make him the one to whom she would say "Yes." When the charming Miss Murphey does decide to marry, there will go back into circulation more eligible stags than any one girl has annexed in many a moon. Generally when a girl is marvelous looking, she can be relied upon to be painfully boring to talk to, but "Katy" manages to be one of those few instances of a gorgeous girl being attractive as well.

I never realized I had it in me to be this pleasant about anybody. I am thoroughly worn out now that it's all over.

Under the most favorable circumstances, my bridge game has never been anything but bad. But to completely unnerve me by placing me at a table with Grace George as my partner and William A. Brady, her husband, as my opponent on the left—well, only those unfortunate enough to have played bridge with me can even faintly surmise what must have taken place. I threw off kings on aces with utter abandon, and when I wasn't trumping my partner's tricks I was renigging. But no matter how miserable the rest of the table may have been, I myself have seldom had a better time. I felt that at least I talked a good game of bridge. Miss George is now rehearsing in a play called "Arlene Adair," which will be given a week's tryout in Asbury Park this month, and then brought to Broadway in the fall. Miss George is one of the most delightful people I have ever met. I considered I had reached the height of the evening's outrages when I deliberately seated myself at Miss George's piano and proceeded to play for Mr. Brady the entire score from his latest musical comedy, "Kitty's Kisses." I have the feeling that my rendition of his song hits completely killed any idea he might have had that the music from "Kitty's Kisses" was good.

Revue's are more plentiful this time of year than flies. Already we have with us "The Great Temptations," "The Garrick Gaieties" and "The Bunk of 1926." Two other revues, "Cherry Pie" and "The Bad Habits of 1926," became so incensed over the empty houses which greeted their performances that they got even with everybody by closing. The new "Grand Street Follies" are about ready to open, and George White's new "Scandals" have opened. The opening night seats weren't but $55 each. Why didn't all of you come up and give box parties? A combination English-American revue is nightly to be seen at the Imperial, one called "The Merry World." Rehearsals are now going at full blast for the new Ziegfeld revue, "Palm Beach Girl," and will probably have Crimes by Minors Justice's Newest Problem.

Complicated and harrowing is the situation authorities throughout the nation have been called upon to face for the last year. Crimes committed by minors have reached new heights, both in numbers and brutality. Disposition of these cases presents a real problem. How justice went about this difficult task in a number of these cases is told here today.

The record of crime in this country, long and horrible as it is, contains few outrages as fiendish as those committed by our youngest murderers. One can stretch one's imagination to the limit, conjure up in one's mind the most perverted and most brutal atrocities, and still fall short of the actuality. Our younger generation is taking to murder with terrifying aptitude.

One kidnaped a little girl and then killed her before her parents had a chance to pay the ransom. Another murdered his chum, a boy he had apparently always cherished. Another slew his aged grandmother for the few dollars she had saved. Another burned to death his two sisters and a year later killed his father and mother.

Are these young killers sane? Are they inconceivably callous, unable to realize the enormity of their offenses? What unwholesome thing is it in our civilization that is making children kill? These are questions confronting society in this supposedly enlightened twentieth century.

On the afternoon of September 4, 1925, Mary Daly, six-year-old Montclair, N. J., girl, was playing near her home when a man jumped out of a taxicab, seized her in his arms and bore her away. Other children on the scene could give no description of the abductor—it had happened very suddenly.

A Real Clue.

One clue the police did have—the taxicab. This machine was known to belong to a colored man named Raymond Pierce. "Find Pierce" came the order to the police. They found Pierce—dead. His body was discovered some miles outside the town in a clump of bushes, near an abandoned quarry. The chauffeur had been shot through the back of the head. And examination showed he had been killed before the time of the kidnaping.

Pierce, then, was eliminated as the abductor. The search was resumed, with hundreds of Jerseyites taking part. The people of Montclair and vicinity were seized with that panicky fear which always grips a community after a kidnaping. David Daly, father of Mary, was no man of wealth. His family and his home were like hundreds of other families and homes in suburban New Jersey.

If his child could be kidnaped why couldn't any child of the neighborhood be seized and carried off?

On September 6 the police found an automobile hidden in the shrubbery not far from where the body of Pierce had lain. This car, it developed, belonged to Harrison Noel, 20-year-old son of Dix W. Noel, prominent New York attorney. Noel had been in a sanitarium, but had escaped and had not been sent back. His mother and father had separated and the boy was living with his mother.

The police, positive they were on the right track now, questioned young Noel for hours and hours and at last he broke down and confessed he had killed Pierce and then kidnaped the Daly girl.

But where was Mary?

The kidnaper had called the Daly home and promised to return the child safely upon receipt of $4,000. Mrs. Daly had begged him to take care of her daughter until she and her husband could arrange to pay the ransom. When she had asked what she should do, the kidnaper had hung up.

"Now, how about the girl, Noel?" said the detective. "Where is she?"

The prisoner's face, normally blank, took on an expression of cunning.

tives found the crumpled body of the child riddled with bullets.

All the Details.

In his confession Noel said he had taken a taxicab the day before he kidnaped Mary and then shot the driver through the back of the head. As Nathan Leopold and Richard Loeb, most notorious of modern boy murderers, drove the body of Bobby Franks around the streets of Chicago for hours before finally disposing of the victim, so did Noel drive with Pierce. It was as though he was challenging fate to detect him in this first act of his plot.

Finally he had dumped the body into the bushes, concealed the taxi nearby, and then gone home to dinner. The next day he drove his own car to the quarry, switched to the taxi and staged his seizure of Mary Daly. The second murder had followed soon afterward. Like Leopold and Loeb, he did not wait to demand ransom before committing the deed.

At the subsequent trial of Noel, specialists testified for the state that the boy was sane. Other specialists testified that he was hopelessly insane. The jury, however, ruled him guilty of one was that he had killed Nye because of a girl.

The story had its beginning when 16-year-old Margaret Pirie, sister of Gordon, returned home a few minutes after midnight on the morning of November 30. She had been living home alone with her brother. Her mother had recently gone to a sanitarium with tuberculosis. The girl had been away over the week-end with her aunt.

Margaret tried the door of the Pirie apartment and found it locked. She ran up another flight to the apartment of her married sister, Mrs. Bessie Ferguson, and together the two descended the fire escape, entering through a window. In the dining room were glasses moist with the whisky Gordon and his friend had drunk that afternoon.

From the dining room the girl went to Gordon's room. His bed was empty. She turned on the light and saw two bare feet protruding from under the bed.

"Gordon!"

No answer.

"Gordon—"

Then she screamed. She had touched a foot and had found it icy cold.

In a few minutes Margaret's brother-in-law came down. While the girls stood shivering in the doorway, he dragged from under the bed the cold corpse of George Nye, chum of Gordon, who often spent the night there with him. His head had been smashed in. A towel was wound around the head.

Where Was Gordon?

The logical question was, of course, where was Gordon? He and George had often gone on "dates" together. Like so many other youngsters of their age, they were good dancers, popular with the young girls of the neighborhood, and usually when they were out late George went home with Pirie.

Dawn came and Gordon did not appear. The neighborhood awakening to the new day, discussed the tragedy. Nobody could believe that Gordon Pirie had done this shocking murder. But where was he?

During the day of investigation by the district attorney and the detectives, a number of girls were questioned. They told of a late party which Gordon attended before the murder. Gordon took Violet Smith, 16-year-old miss, home and told her George Nye would spend that night with him. Nye had had an argument with her, he told her.

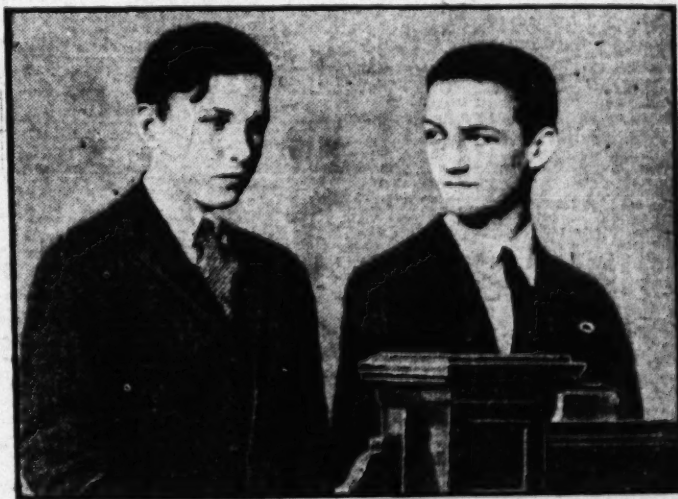

The day dragged on. At 11 o'clock that evening a short, chunky boy with fair hair and rosy cheeks walked into the Alexander avenue police station in the Bronx and said:

"I'm Gordon Pirie. I understand you've been looking for me."

His Version of It.

At first he insisted he knew nothing of the crime. Under the persistent barrage of questions, however, he ning. His lips curled into a smile. He said he would bring the police to the child providing he got $4,00 for the job. He had kidnaped Mary to get some money, he told them, and he wasn't going to give her up until somebody came across. His questioners humored him, even wrote out a check for the amount.

And then Harrison Noel led the way to Mary Daly.

By this time it was late at night. Detectives and newspaper men whispered together, wondering what this hunt would lead to. Some miles out, on the Preakness road, Noel brought the procession to a halt. He led the men off the road a ways through a heavy growth of underbrush. And before long the flashlights of the detecmurder in the first degree, but the sentence of death was later changed to life imprisonment. Noel is now in prison at Trenton.

This Noel case attracted nationwide notice, largely because of the controversy over the boy's sanity. The average newspaper reader was of the opinion that the boy certainly was not altogether sane.

Still a Mystery.

But what of Gordon Pirie, 20-year-old Bronx boy? He, too, was a murderer, but no evidence of insanity was uncovered during the investigation, and the motive for his killing of George Nye, his chum, two years younger than Pirie, is still much a mystery. Pirie himself gave many versions as to why he did it. The last

What Betty Blythe Suffered

IF YOU were a famous movie actress, And a foreign movie magnate invited you to go to Europe to play the lead in his new picture,

At a salary of $1,500 a week and all expenses;

And he raised a terrible fuss because you spent two days in Paris buying some hats and lovely unmentionables;

And another terrible fuss because you wouldn't appear in gowns which, scanty though they were, were much too large;

And he made you wear magic rings of fire which burned your fingers to the bone;

And you stood the awful pain like a Spartan lest the movie be spoiled;

And you took the bandages off your poor burned hands many times daily thereafter so that the filming of your parts could continue;

And as a result your fingers became infected and are still terribly scarred;

And your manager decamped suddenly with a horde of creditors and legal suits at his heels;

And you found yourself stranded without salary, without expenses, alone in a far-off land;

And the hotel management started sending flunkies with rudely worded notes inviting you to pay or get out;

And you had to cable and wire to friends for money to pay your hotel bill and save yourself from the bailiffs—

What would YOU say?

Well, Betty Blythe said it in the King's English. She started suit against the manager, and he started suit against her for slander and libel and a few other things including the alleged loss of thousands of dollars because of her temperament and her delay of the picture based on Sir Rider Haggard's "She."

There's been a happy ending to the trouble in the British courts, but not before the British newspapers gave Betty drama from real life columns and pages, and the European public learned how much an American motion picture star will suffer for the sake of art.

In the end Betty admitted that her movie magnate was not as bad as she had thought, and that he tried to pay his indebtedness to her like a gentleman.

And the film producer, Mr. G. B. Samuelson admitted that Betty was a brave girl to have continued acting when her fingers were making her suffer agonies.

The court smiled upon a suggestion for the settlement of the suit, admired the photographs of the American movie actress in her film costumes, and the result was that the differences were composed privately so that Miss Blythe had her injured feelings soothed and her salary and expenses paid her, and Mr. Samuelson had his damaged reputation as one of England's leading movie magnates restored.

The agreement which caused all the trouble for Betty was made in Los Angeles in December, 1924. She was to visualize Haggard's immortal witch goddess in all the lavish splendor of her queenliness. The picture was being filmed in Berlin and she was to rush there from Los Angeles by the fastest trains and steamships, arriving by January 17.

Betty left on January 1, 1925, only two days after the contract was signed. She arrived in Paris two weeks later and found to her consternation that no sleeping car accommodations had been provided to take her to Berlin. As a result she was compelled to spend two days in Paris.

Now Betty is authority for the statement that this was an ordeal in itself, for she was "all alone" and very much afraid. Besides she was very anxious to get to Berlin and start work on her picture. She had asked that money for her expenses be deposited in the Corn Exchange Bank in Paris; but she found there was no such bank there. At the end of two days during which her expenses amounted to $121 she got accommodations on the train for Berlin and arrived there on the evening of Saturday, January 17.

There, she told the court, she was met by Mr. and Mrs. Samuelson and a Mr. and Mrs. Pfizner, was housed in the Eden hotel and went that same evening to the studio where the actors were at work. On Sunday morning she met Mr. Cordova, the director of the picture, and talked over the story, the costuming and the general treatment of her role. She expected Mr.

Samuelson to call for her on Sunday afternoon, but he did not keep the engagement. Instead she went to see the cameraman who was going to photograph her in her part. She showed him some films of herself which she had brought from Hollywood.

Next morning she was ready for work, but there were no costumes. Finally she was taken to a costumer's where three dresses awaited her. She tried them on but they were too large and required other alterations so she could not act that day. On Tuesday she went again to the costumer's and then to the studio where she reported to the stage director. He was photographing other scenes and told her she need not hurry—he would call her when he was ready for her. She was called to the stage at 4 p. m., and worked until 6:30. Afterward she went to the costumer's again with Mr. and Mrs. Samuelson and stayed there until 10:30.

"It is alleged," said Mr. Samuelson's attorney, "that on Wednesday, January 21, you did not appear until about 4 p. m., and that after two hours on the stage you left it, saying that you would do no more work that day."

The bandages on my injured hand were taken off and replaced a dozen times or more each day so that they would not mar my appearance when I was being photographed. There was no opportunity for the wounds to close over in consequence and they became running sores."

Betty admitted she took a day off on February 9 for an outing with Mr. and Mrs. Pfitzner and on her return she received a note from Mr. Samuelson who pointed out that the production was very expensive and that the loss of a day cost $2,500. She said if she had known that Mr. Cordova, the director, could not spare her she would not have gone off for a holiday. She denied that ten days later she had repudiated her contract by walking on the stage and refusing to act any longer in the play.

That was the date when Mr. Samuelson said Betty had started saying mean things about him to newspaper correspondents. A week or so later she had arrived in London and been interviewed there. The newspapers quoted her as follows:

"I shall be very careful about making any engagements with Englishmen. That thief Samuelson has swindled me very badly. He left me stranded in Berlin. Samuelson has not paid me any money at all during the whole time I was working for him on the production of 'She,' but deceived me by saying that he had paid money for me into a bank in Paris when he had done nothing of the kind. Samuelson is no better than a thief and I have come to England for the purpose of taking action against him and I mean to drive him out of business."

"How could I drive him out of business?" Miss Blythe demanded of the court.

"Did you say anything about making engagements with Englishmen?" she was asked.

"No," she answered.

"Or about 'that thief Samuelson'?"

"I don't remember saying anything of the sort, so I couldn't have said it," Betty replied.

Betty, under cross-examination, said she had no knowledge of $4,500 which had been placed on deposit for her by Samuelson in a Paris bank. Then she was questioned about her stay in Paris.

"To be frank," said Betty, "I was very much afraid to be in Paris alone.

I was very anxious. I had no friends there. If accommodations had been obtained for me on the train to Berlin I would have proceeded on the journey at once. But as there were no sleeping car accommodations engaged, I would have had to sit up in a train a whole day and night. This would have meant my arrival in Berlin in no fit condition to go to work."

She was next examined concerning her insistence that her costumes be altered. She was asked what was wrong with them.

"Well, I looked funny in them," she answered. "One dress was charming, but it was sort of German and big. I had it cut right up the side and a huge piece was taken out. I had a right to interfere with the costumes because I was entrusted with a very big role. It is an unwritten law that an artist should make herself as attractive as possible in order to play her part to the highest ability of her art. Therefore, to put on dresses designed by someone else and which did not suit my role or my type was not fulfilling my part to the best of my ability.

"I admit that I said the dresses were wonderful and that the man who designed them was a genius, but that applied to them after I had altered them to suit my requirements. One dress was a black one with a lot of beads and another was a broad band about the waist with not very much above it. They looked like Folle Bergere costumes when I first tried them on and I was supposed to be a goddess.

"I have a gift at designing and arranging costumes and I worked personally making and altering those for my part for many long hours at night as well as in the interludes of the scenes in which I appeared in the daytime."

Mr. Samuelson and his attorney found themselves somewhat at sea on the subject of costumes, but were positive that Miss Blythe's principal grievance lay in the fact that they were too concealing. She had cut them low in front and removed backs entirely and had opened slits in the skirts, they said, for the purpose of better displaying her shapely limbs. Justice Horridge demanded pictures of the altered costumes at this stage of the testimony and looked them over and declared they seemed to be very becoming.

Samuelson said he was afraid that when Sir Rider Haggard saw the display of Miss Blythe's personal charms in the costumes she had designed, he would withdraw his authority to produce a film version of his famous novel. No such thing had happened, however, and Sir Rider apparently was more pleased than shocked.

Miss Blythe said that there was a great deal of disorganization and confusion about the studio during the taking of the film and that matters went from bad to worse until finally the creditors appeared on the scene and seized everything upon which they could lay their hands. Mrs. Samuelson interjected tearfully at this point that they had even confiscated the special food for her infant child. It seemed that many claims of employees and contractors as well as those of the studio owners had piled up against Samuelson, that the production had run far beyond the estimated cost of production and that as a result he was financially embarrassed.

He had quietly decamped from Berlin to avoid arrest and from the safety of England had tried to straighten out his affairs. He was doing this successfully, he said.

Miss Blythe told the court she was not so much interested in joining forces with any one as she was in getting out of her trouble. "I was penniless in a strange country," she said, "and the hotel was constantly dunning me for a bill which had mounted to a thousand marks and threatening to put me out. I borrowed a little here and there from friends just to get on from day to day and then I had to cable to America for money."

When Mr. Samuelson came to the stand he made it clear that he had deposited $4,500 to Miss Blythe's account as he had agreed, but apparently there however, so we persevered and finally got all four rings burning together. While the scene was being photographed the substance burned my fingers. Although the molten flame was burning down almost to my bones I stood the pain so that they might get the scenes.

"I continued playing on the stage for an hour and a half or two hours afterward. They had a first aid service for emergencies at the studio and I

"It is stated that you would not do any more work that day," the attorney said to her.

"It is probably true," said Betty. "I could not stand the pain. The director said to me, 'You have had a very long day and you are suffering so much that you can go.' Next day I was at the studio at 8 a. m. On succeeding days down to February 7 I went on with my work at the studio and did not have a day or even an evening off.

van. It was the tennis afternoon at the Melhampton Lawn Tennis club, and the bank manager was losing at least one set by this errand of mercy. But people were talking in Melhampton, and Mr. Tidd's sympathies had been engaged. Notwithstanding his prim appearance, his gold-rimmed spectacles and his precise ways, Mr. Tidd had a warm heart.

"Good afternoon," he greeted the gypsy.

The latter glanced up from his work, looked Mr. Tidd over from head to foot, and recommenced his task.

"I have come," the visitor explained, "to have a word with you about William Shales' wife."

"What do I know," the gypsy rejoined, "of William Shales' wife?"

"You know this much, at any rate," was the prompt reply, "that you have just spent three months in prison for insulting her and for knocking her husband about."

The gypsy raised his eyes. "William Shales is not the only small man whom I have knocked about," he said deliberately. "There will be others before I die. What are you—a doctor or a lawyer?"

"I am a banker," Mr. Tidd announced—"that is to say a bank manager."

The gypsy laid down his basket and looked at him. "Do you carry much money about with you?" he inquired.

"Not as a rule," was the unperturbed reply. "Today I have brought more than usual because I intend to offer it to you."

"A gift?" the gypsy sneered.

"No, a bribe. I will give you five pounds to move on this afternoon to some other place, to turn your back on Melhampton without passing through it."

Ned the Gypsy laughed—a queer, not unmusical, yet not very mirthful laugh. "Has William Shales sent you?" he asked.

"William Shales knows nothing of my visit," Mr. Tidd replied. "I have come because I sympathize with him, and because when I see trouble looming I like to try to avert it for the sake of those who may suffer."

"You can keep your five pounds unless I choose to take it from you," the gypsy answered insolently. "I may do that if the humor seizes me. I shall remain here so long as I choose. And as for William Shales' wife, the heart of a woman is as free as the song of a bird. He sings when he must, a woman comes when she wills. If she comes, I am here."

Mr. Tidd argued, but he spoke to deaf ears. The gypsy twisted his osier twigs with deft fingers, but he answered never a word. Only at the last, when his visitor paused for breath, he looked up from his work.

"You are tiring me," he complained, "and you stand in the light. Soon I shall take that five pounds from you."

"Then you will go to prison," Mr. Tidd answered boldly. "Perhaps it would be the best place for you."

The gypsy rose lazily to his feet. Before Mr. Tidd knew exactly what was happening he found himself raised in the air and carried to where his bicycle was resting. His captor set him down very gently.

"I have a hard fist," he said, "and one blow from me may disfigure a man for life. I do not want your five pounds, but go."

As night came on some part of his stoicism seemed to leave the gypsy. He walked up and down, muttering to himself. Once he stood out on the road and looked down at Melhampton, and there was fire in his eyes. The stars slipped into their places, yellow light filled the silver crescent of the moon, a breeze sprang up after the breathless day, and the tops of the trees in the wood creaked and whispered and made light music beneath its touch. The watcher sat on his steps and his face was aglow. Sometimes he muttered to himself, but no man save one of his own kind could have told what he said.

It was about ten o'clock when she came, bareheaded, as she might have hurried from the house. She plodded along the road with the sad, hopeless tread of the somnambulist. As she approached the caravan she paused. The gypsy rose to his feet.

"So you have come at last, my golden-headed woman," he cried. "If you had not come tonight I should have fetched you."

There on the edge of the sward she fell on her knees. "Leave me alone and go," she implored. "I came not because I willed it, but because you have put a spell around my spirit. Cords have brought me here, and not my will. As God is in heaven, I love my husband and I hate you."

The gypsy laughed as he moved a step forward. "You have never been loved by a man," he answered, leaning back to throw open the door of the caravan. "Come, beauty, we will make for Dunworthy moor before the moon is up, for if any man seeks to come between us tonight I shall kill him."

He took one more step forward, and then—a sudden leap into the air. The stillness of the night was broken by the report of a rifle fired at close quarters. The bullet whistled past the gypsy's ear. From all around them came echoes. William Shales stepped from behind the gray wall on the opposite side of the way and stood in the middle of the road. He was wearing his usual dark gray suit and the black bowler hat a little too large for him. Around his waist was a cartridge belt. Even as the two, the man and the woman, stood there petrified, they heard him refill the magazine and close it with a sharp snap. The gypsy's face seemed to have grown pale beneath its tan.

"Put down your rifle," he shouted. "If you have anything to say, come here and talk to me as man to man."

William Shales laughed. "I shall talk to you from where I be as man to man," he answered. "Last time, in the yard of the Blue Lion, you chose the manner of our talk. Tonight be my turn. It is not my fault that nature has given me weak arms and has given you the limbs of a prizefighter. Now see how much that makes you the better man tonight. There is death here awaiting for you, death at the quiver of my finger. A blow of your fist and the kick of your feet could do no more than deal out death and deal it out clumsily. See! You are proud of the window of your cursed home and its scarlet flower. Watch!"

Once more there was the crisp report of a rifle shot, followed this time by the sound of splintering glass. The gypsy cursed and swore. William Shales laughed again. He lowered his rifle for a moment.

"The God that gave me weak arms," he said, "gave me a good eye and steady hands. I was chosen to shoot at Bisley, Ned the Gypsy, though I won no prize but a trifle of money. Where would you like to die? Or how? Will you have a bullet in your heart, or crashing through your forehead, or shall I lame you for life with a shattered knee?"

"William! William!" the woman called out joyfully. "Don't let him take me away! Kill him first—kill him and kill me."

The gypsy changed his tactics. He had slipped a little way back. His eyes were looking all around like a ferret's. He knew how strong he was, how far he could spring, how his fingers could choke if he could get round to the back of the man. He glided a yard or so on one side. Then he leaped once more into the air with a curse. He clapped his hand to his cheek. There was blood there where the bullet had grazed it. He swore loudly enough, but there was a tremble in his tone. The woman had risen to her feet. He felt a strange thing in his own heart. He was afraid, and the woman was slipping away from him.

"I have come out here to kill you, Ned the Gypsy, if needs be," William Shales cried, "and kill you I shall if you try your monkey tricks. Harness your horse, turn your back on Melhampton and cross Dunworthy moor tonight. It is true that I am small and weak, true that with my fingers I stitch clothes for other men to wear, but tonight I am top dog, and there is death for you here if you defy me."

The woman laughed, almost naturally. There was joy in her mirth. Something seemed to snap between her and the cowering man.

"Hurry up with them straps," William Shales ordered, and his voice was the voice of a conqueror.

Down the hill in the moonlight, like lovers, walked man and wife. Every now and then she stopped and held him to her passionately. William Shales, with his rifle over his left shoulder, marched to martial music. He remembered the time when he had picked up a dead man's weapon and fought at Ypres. To the woman by his side he was for the first time a hero. Police Constable Chopping, hurrying up the hillside, asked a breathless question.

"There was no harm done, William?"

"I've frightened him away," was the proud reply.

The woman's arm was around her husband's neck. The police constable looked the other way and passed on.

Over Dunworthy moor, a lone object on the top of the great plateau, a tired horse dragged a heavy caravan. Ned the Gypsy, with folded arms and chin upon his chest, sat on the shafts and smoked sullenly. Not once did he look behind him. He only spoke to urge the horse on. In his ears seemed to echo still the horrid sound of those flying messages of death.

weakened and at last stated that he had fallen asleep in a chair and awakened to find George dead, his head crushed with an ax. He didn't want the police to be thinking that he did it, though. Why, George Nye was his chum!

Violet Smith was brought in. She had been told to advise Pirie that the authorities were his friends, that it would be best for him to tell all. Gradually his tongue loosened and while the girl held his hand he confessed.

They had been loafing around the apartment the previous day reading the funny papers and talking about Florida. Then George fell asleep.

"I looked at him and just took the notion to kill him," said Pirie. "I got the ax and hit him six times. He rolled off on the floor. I put my hand to his heart and my ear close to his mouth. He seemed dead."

"I washed the blood from the ax and hid it under the sink. I washed the blood from his face and neck and tied up his head. I took $5.50 from his pocket and went out."

Later in the day, two friends came to the house and had some drinks with him, he said. While they were in the dining room he went into the bedroom to view the boy he had killed. Then he went to the movies with a friend. He met Violet and two other girls and bought them hot chocolate, and when he left Violet he said:

"So long, Sunshine; see you Wednesday night."

By then it was after midnight of November 30. He went back to the house again, this time to destroy the body, only to see an ambulance at the front door. A man told him a murder had been committed. Pirie fled to the subway and rode up and down in it all night. He read the papers, telling of his crime. He went to see some shows, met friends, and at last decided to surrender.

Twenty hours after his first confession Pirie said he had killed Nye because of a slur George had cast on a girl. Whatever the motive, District Attorney McGeehee said the crime was the outgrowth of the jazz age and of youthful parties, of late hours, and bootleg booze.

So Gordon Pirie went on trial, and though the defense made every effort to establish his insanity the boy was found guilty and sentenced to serve from twenty years to life in Sing Sing.

Frank McDowell, good looking youngster, 20 years old, committed four of the strangest murders on record. In February, 1923, his home in Atlanta, Ga., was burned and his two sisters died in the flames. Exactly a year later Frank shot to death his father and mother. He was arrested after this second tragedy and readily confessed.

He told the police that when he was nine years old he had "cursed the Holy Ghost" because the buttons were off his shirt. He brooded over this for years, he said. Then he decided that he could only atone for his sin through the blood of his family. He went to his sisters' bedroom, threw gasoline on the bed, set fire to it, and locked the door.

On the anniversary of the murders he crept to his parents' room and killed them while they slept.

After they had heard this story the jury decided it was too fanciful for belief. They found him guilty but recommended mercy. This automatically prevented a death sentence and McDowell, too, went away for life.

Justice encountered one of its perplexing problems in the case of William Cavalier, who was a murderer at 14. Justice may conclude that the problem has been solved. For society, however, there is still perplexity.

Willie Cavalier's father and mother were divorced not long after his birth and he was brought up by his grandparents in Mechanicsville, Pa. He grew into an abnormally tall boy, with spreading ears, wide mouth, and shallow eyes. He was known by his grandparents' name and called them father and mother. His own mother had married again and had other children.

One Sunday evening in September, 1924, Willie lay in wait for his grandmother, Mrs. Pete Cavalier, with a rifle. She had been on a shopping trip to Pottsville. As she came through the door the boy shot her through the heart. She fell and he shot her again, seven times.

Then he took $108 from her stocking, locked the body in her room, and went to a picture show.

"I did it to get her money," he explained later to the police. "I wanted to have a good time."

Young Cavalier was convicted and Arguments For the Existence of God.

Rev. W. P. King

IT MAY be as well admitted that in making arguments for the existence of God, we are not following the Biblical method.

The Bible nowhere argues for God, it assumes God, and this is true throughout its entire contents.

There belongs to the Biblical saints and writers that sense of assurance of God that made all argument unnecessary and superfluous.

It was inevitable, however, that the reasoning faculty should be brought into exercise.

There will be given the great historic arguments for the existence of God along with other arguments which are more distinctively modern. Despite the high-sounding names we can readily understand the meaning.

I.

There is the Antological argument. The word is derived from two Greek words, which mean the reason or ground of being.

In the form which Anselm gives it, the affirmation is made that the most perfect conceivable being must be actual. According to Descartes the presence of the idea of the Infinite in the mind is evidence that the infinite Author must have originated it.

This is the argument from thought to Being.

The idea of the Perfect Being is universal.

This form of reasoning asserts that the highest and best conceptions must be real, for the reason that the reality of such a being is greater than the mere thought of such a being.

Kant is the most severe critic of the logic of this argument, and he shifts the battle line of the discussion by showing that the abstract thought cannot amount to a positive proof of God. But even though the argument falls short of being sufficient within itself to bring convincing proof, it will always retain evidential values.

Dr. George P. Fisher writes: "The soul does not willingly consent to regard so inspiring a conception as a mere thought. To consider it as unreal, with no counterpart in the realm of actual existence, is felt as a bereavement and a pain. The importance which eminent thinkers have attached to this argument has not been wholly void of foundation."

The fact is that according to the analogy of objective material realities answering to the physical senses, it is extremely doubtful whether the thought of God could have originated or persisted in the human mind aside from the objective reality of God. It is doubtless true that the strengthening assurance of God has been helped by the shifting of interest from abstract thought to concrete reasoning, but an abiding element of value in the old argument abides.

Ralph Cudworth in his "Intellectual System of Universe" writes: "If there is no God the idea of an absolutely or infinitely perfect being could never have been made or feigned, neither by politicians or poets, nor by philosophers, nor any others."

II.

There is the Cosmological argument which is based on the existence of the world. Finite things did not originate within themselves. This argument claims that God is necessary to explain the universe.

There are only two possible theories of the universe. Either it began to exist in time or it is eternal. But neither hypothesis removes the necessity of causation.

If the universe had a beginning in time there must have been a First Cause sufficient for bringing into existence the entire visible order.

If the universe is eternal, then there must be cause sufficient to account for the ever-changing and ever-evolving world, and this Cause bears the impress of mind, for it is interpreted by minds.

Dr. W. N. Clarke writes: "This is substantially the cosmological argument for the existence of God, but it has been framed to meet various suppositions. Whether we say that the universe has been created or has always existed, still with things about us as we find them, we are compelled to inquire for one cause of all, and can find it only in Mind. The things that we observe are due to a cause that is spiritual in its nature."

In the production of things that we see, there must have been a Mind adequate to devising them, and a will adequate to carrying the conception into effect. But these are qualities of a self-conscious and self-directing intelligence, such as we name a personal spirit. The vaster the sum of matter and motion, force and life, spirit and meaning, that we discover in existence; the more urgent the necessity of recognizing some adequate source, spiritual, intelligent and purposeful, from which it has proceeded. The universe as known to the scientist demands God for its cause far more urgently than did the heavens and the earth as known to the patriarchs or the psalmists.

Nothing is more certain than that science in its maturity will affirm one spiritual cause for the universe.

The cosmos or the world cannot be explained without God. Despite the critical theory of Kant in which he maintained that phenomena alone fall within the scale of human understanding and despite the changed conceptions of God, there is the abiding element of value in the Cosmological argument.

Even though the casuality of the world and the processes of world-shaping and world-building may be vastly different from the earlier conceptions, there is no less necessity for God the Creator.

The hypothesis of evolution while necessitating a change in our belief in the divine method of working in the world does not remove the necessity of that directing, creative energy, which we call God.

Even though we dignify the word evolution with a capital letter, it does not represent power, but only the way in which the Power that is in the universe works.

Dr. C. R. Brown says: "I find myself in the presence of an orderly universe. The starry heavens declare the glory of God; and the marvelous adaptations of these countless orders of life show His handiwork. How did it all come about? 'It just happened,' someone may reply. 'Matter and force were here from the first and in some unexplainable way the great world order as we find it came to be.'"

What a lame inadequate explanation. The easy shallow hypothesis breaks down under the weight of facts which it undertakes to explain.

Who planned and directed this marvelous advance from the lowest forms of sentient beings up to the very summit of existence as we know it? These human beings which make bold to look up into the face of the infinite and claim kinship with him stand apparently at the climax of the process. Who planned it and made it possible? "Nobody," you answer. "Matter and force did it all." Surely you do not expect men generally to take such an answer seriously. Until someone can bring me a more satisfactory hypothesis upon which to explain this orderly universe, the presence of life and the fact of progress, I shall continue to affirm my own belief in those historic words, 'I believe in God the Father Almighty, Maker of Heaven and Earth.'

That is they start off standing and if somebody here and there faints from exhaustion and has to be carried out on a stretcher, I'm quite sure it was entirely unintentional. They picked up a wilted soul next to me the other night and whisked him off to the rest room without any of the other standups becoming unnecessarily concerned about it.

The more you see "Sunny" the better you like it. There's so much going on in this thickly-populated show that you don't begin to get it all the first trip. I never grasped how thoroughly intriguing Mary Hay was until I'd seen the show three times. Quite naturally your first trip is well taken up with losing your head over Marilyn Miller. It's along about the next few visits before you get around to Miss Hay, Jack Donehue's comedy, Pert Kelton's imitations and Clifton Webb's dancing.

All of you had better lock up your bath tubs, because Earl Carroll will soon be in town. It is hardly likely that Mr. Carroll during his sojourn in your city will be permitted to put on "The Federal Prison Follies."

The World's Greatest Pictures

"THE RESURRECTION"

By Fra Angelico

This is the fifteenth of a series of fifty-two greatest paintings which represent the choice of the art directors throughout North America. Reproduction of this art masterpiece appears in the rotogravure section of today's Constitution.

BY EUGENE P. CONLEY.

Throughout the past several centuries there have been many artists who have expressed on canvas their conception of the resurrection, but none seems to have mastered this sacred subject like Fra Angelico, whose "Resurrection" has been judged the best. This great picture was painted around 1437, nearly 500 years ago, for the Monastery of San Marco (now called the Museum of San Marco) at Florence, Italy.

Before touching upon the life work of Fra Angelico let us refresh our memory of the circumstances of this tragic incident of Bible history that culminated in the glorified resurrection. Before Christ was crucified he made the statement that on the third day he would arise from the dead. Joseph of Arimathea, having secured permission from Pontius Pilate, the Roman governor, removed the lifeless body from the cross, placed it in a sepulchre hewn out of a large rock and then rolled a huge stone to its door. On the third day Mary Magdalene and the other Mary came to the sepulchre, and an angel of the Lord met them saying, "He is risen. He is not here."

None was better fitted to express with paint and brush the spiritual thoughts than this humble and modest father. He painted only holy subjects, refusing throughout his entire career to even think of painting non-religious subjects. So seriously did he take his work that before picking up the brush he would pray aloud that his soul might be purified, that he might better interpret the divine story. Each of his paintings gives evidence of his sincerity and his goodness. His ability to express reverence, profound respect and adoration in the countenances of his angels has never been equalled by any other artist.

Fra Angelico was born in the year 1387 in the little town of Vicchio, Italy, not far from Florence. His father named him Guido. His parentage and early life remains a mystery. Little is known of him until he was a young man. Vasari, writing of his artistic ability, records that even in his youth he was thoroughly acquainted with the practice of art.

One day young Guido and his brother happened into the convent while the great Dominican preacher, Giovanni Dominici, was exhorting the people to give more thought to their souls. The eloquence of the preacher acted as a spark which sets aflame an exemplary desire. So a few days later both brothers sought admission to the Order of Dominicans. Guido was now twenty years of age. Having served his novitiate he accepted the irrevocable vows, assumed the habit of the Dominicans, changed his name to Giovanni, and was thereafter known as Fra Giovanni da Fiesole. After his death and beautification he was called "Il Beato," the Blessed, or, still more generally, "Angelico," the angel.

From 1418 to 1435 Fra Angelico lived in the convent at Fiesole working with untiring devotion at his art. In 1436 the Order moved to Florence where new buildings had been erected. The new home was not even completed before he had started on the first of his numerous decorations, which included "The Resurrection." His decorations were principally scenes from the life of Christ, intended to further instill in the hearts greater devotion.

In the year 1447, at the age of 60, he was commissioned to decorate the chapel in Rome. The work, however, was ordered destroyed less than a century later to make room for the great staircase. In 1449 we find him again at Fiesole as prior of the Monastery of San Dominico. There is no record of when he returned to Rome, but in 1455, (his venerable champion of the poor, who disdained earthly riches, died there at the age of 68, and was buried in the Santa Maria Sopra Minerva convent.

BARRACUDA

A Blue

INSTALLMENT XXI.

GHOST of the bloody deed seemed to be here in the room, as though it would reenact itself for him if only he could touch the right spring.

That brief case! That brief case! Where was it? These inanimate things knew, if only they could speak! Absorbed, frowning, he got up from the desk. Why couldn't he get hold of the right thread? He must, somehow—yet he didn't. Purlblindly, in a deep abstraction, he went out of the front door.

There at the curb stood Uncle Mark's dingy little car, just as it had stood last Friday afternoon, a week ago today. So much time slipping by, and still empty-handed! With puckered brow he stared at the modest machine, and saw that a tire had gone flat while it stood there; a slow puncture, no doubt. A nuisance. He was half-minded to let it alone; but after all, he might want to use the car in a hurry. In an absentminded, mechanical fashion he stepped to the curb, reached in and pulled up the back seat cushion in order to get at the tools underneath—and stood gaping, turned to stone.

A big yellow envelope lay under the cushion—and a black leather brief case. With dazed incredulity Latham stretched out his hand to touch it, as though he more than half expected his fingers to pass through the mirage and feel the wooden boards. But the thing felt as solid and real as it looked. He fingered the leather. Beyond doubt—unless he had gone crazy—this was a real brief case. He glanced up and down the street, tucked envelope and brief case under his coat, and let himself back into the bank. Only after he had been inside a minute or two—holding the leather object firmly in his hands as though he feared it might suddenly vanish—did the affair begin to unfold in a perfectly rational order.

About a quarter past three he climbed the steps to his small yellow dwelling. As he set his foot on the top one, Louise was peering at him out of the front window in the reception room. Evidently she had placed a chair at the side of the window where she could glance out, without being seen by a merely casual passerby on the street. How long had she been watching there, anxious, uncertain, all in the dark; listening, too, no doubt, for a hostile sound at the bolted back door—a hiss in a cage, with good cause to be frightened. The thought constricted his heart and quickened his step; but already, at first glimpse of him, she had sprung up, running to the door to let him in.

The door closed behind him and his arms went round her. After a silent moment he said, "Prisoner!"

She gave a little laugh, snuggling closer into the prison, and said, "Yes." . . . But she was eager for news, too; that shone in her face. He held her another moment—the fairest thing on earth, he thought; but harried, abused, in danger. If he couldn't save her from all that!

"I've got the brief case, Lou; I know what happened," he said.

The Eyes of Death.

It came out so simply, almost so matter of course, that her blue eyes widened, her lips apart. "Come in here; I'll tell you," he added. They stepped into the reception room and sat down at the table—with that silly display of old magazines upon it. In few words he told her, first, how he found the brief case and the big yellow envelope.

"That envelope came in the mail Friday afternoon. You know, Lou, Uncle Mark was a great boomer. He'd set his heart on getting out a pamphlet to advertise Indian Ledge. Most of the business men subscribed to pay the cost. He was anxious to get the thing printed so it could be distributed at St. Petersburg and other resorts while the tourists were still there—bait for next season. He was writing the copy out of business hours. You know how this copy was found in his living room."

"He told me about his pamphlet," she said.

"Yes; he told everybody—running over with it. That envelope, you see, contained sketches submitted by the St. Petersburg printing concern to illustrate the pamphlet. It came in the mail Friday. It lay on his desk in the bank. Now, Lou, turn back to Friday afternoon. You and Wheedon went from the hotel over to the bank to leave this brief case for safe-keeping. The bank was closed. You rapped on the door, thinking Uncle Mark was still there, because you had left him at the curb only a few minutes before. He opened the door. You gave him the brief case. Then you asked him about Sando. He put the brief case down on the window ledge and walked to the corner of the building to point out the direction of Sando. I remember your mentioning that—his putting the brief case on the window ledge."

"Yes; I'm sure of that. I remember his laying it there when he stepped out of the bank."

"And, outside, he told you he'd just telephoned Albright's and Jimmy was sinking; he was going back there. You said he told you that outside."

"Yes. We stood at the corner of the building, talking about Sando and a sail boat. Then he said he'd heard from the Albright's and the young man was worse. . . . Then he told us about the man himself; what a fine boy he was, and what good people his parents were."

"It would be Uncle Mark's way," Latham commented; "anxious to get away; yet he had to tell you about Jimmy and his parents. Well, he went back into the bank, thinking about Jimmy Albright. He was always given to absent-mindedness. The door, in the corner, is set back two feet from the line of the front wall. A man entering from the street wouldn't naturally see an object lying on the window ledge unless he turned his head to look that way—especially an absent-minded man. Uncle Mark didn't turn his head; he didn't see the brief case lying on the window ledge. He went back to his desk to attend to some little task or other, and left for Albright's—in a hurry, you know; anxious about the sick man. This envelope from St. Petersburg was on his desk and he picked it up, meaning to study the sketches over at his house along with his copy for the pamphlet."

"But, going out of the bank, he would be looking straight at the window ledge. He couldn't help seeing an object as big as that brief case lying on it. The vault and safe were locked. To go back and unlock them would take time, and be a nuisance. Uncle Mark didn't take that brief case very seriously. He didn't take anything of that sort very seriously. He always left his house unlocked, never would bother to put a time lock on his safe, and so forth; incurably optimistic that way. He picked up the brief case and put it with his big envelope, and climbed into the car at the curb to drive to Albright's."

"Probably, on the way to Albright's, brief case and envelope lay on the seat beside him. But out there, knowing he was to be inside the house indefinitely, he just lifted up the back seat cushion and put them under it. Nobody who knew Uncle Mark could doubt that would satisfy his ideas of safe-keeping anything except a considerable amount of actual cash or negotiable securities. I'm not at all sure that, under the circumstances, he wouldn't have disposed of actual cash in the same way. It would be like him to consider anything quite safe that was tucked out of sight. You see, he must have carried that yellow envelope out of the bank with him Friday afternoon and put it under the cushion, where I found it. The brief case must have gone along with it. It must have happened just about as I've told you."

"Of course, it must have," she assented, "since you found them under the cushion."

"Yes. But he stayed at Albright's all Friday night, and Jimmy died about daylight. He stayed on after that, trying to console the family and look after necessary things. That emotional turmoil, and Jimmy's death, drove all thought of brief case and envelope out of his mind. It was after seven o'clock when he got back to town. He put up his car, washed his hands and face, and changed his collar, and came down to breakfast. He mentioned that to me at breakfast—that he'd stopped only to wash his hands and face and change his collar. He was tired with loss of sleep and emotional strain. But he had a busy day ahead—Saturday; busy in the bank all day, lunching at his desk on sandwiches and milk. He told Lem White that he was dead tired—going to shut the bank as soon as he could, and go home—and go to bed as soon as he had supper."

"But Saturday forenoon Donahue and friend found out that the brief case had been left in the bank for safe-keeping. They proposed to get it. Friday night they thought Wheedon had it, and killed him to get it. But he didn't have it. When they found it was in the bank they were perfectly ready for another murder. . . . We've all had it fixed in our minds, Lou, that Uncle Mark was killed some time in the middle of the night. You naturally associate murder with night—especially murder on Main street in the center of town. Then we found the light turned on in his bedroom, as though he had got up in the night to go to the bank and meant to return in a short time. But he wasn't killed in the middle of the night."

She made a surprised murmur: "No?"

"No. . . . His watch ought to have told us! but it was still running when I found the body Sunday morning, so we thought he'd wound it when he went to bed Saturday night. But he hadn't gone to bed Friday night. He was at Albright's all night and forgot his watch. Some time Saturday he found it had run down and wound it up again, so it was still running Sunday morning. We ought to have wound it up again to see how many hours it ran and calculated back. That would have told us what time Saturday forenoon or afternoon he wound it up. But nobody thought of it. He didn't wind it Saturday night. He was dead then. He never left the bank Saturday afternoon."

"But why?" she asked breathlessly.

"For one thing, that envelope of sketches from St. Petersburg. He was keen about his pamphlet, anxious to get it printed, worked at it evenings and Sundays. His copy lay on the table in his living room—first thing any one would see on going in there. Saturday morning, returning from Albright's, he went only to the bathroom and his bedroom to change his collar—in a hurry. But if he had gone home Saturday afternoon he would have seen the copy in the living room. That would have reminded him of the sketches under his seat cushion. He would have got them, and the brief case. He didn't go home Saturday afternoon."

"Things happened that we paid no attention to at the time. I knew of some of them, Lem White knew the rest; but we thought they were utterly trivial and irrelevant. It was meant that we should think them trivial and irrelevant—the sort of things that seem to lead to nothing, so you soon forget them. Donahue went into Lem White's office just after four o'clock Saturday afternoon. The bank stays open later than usual on Saturdays, you know. But Uncle Mark was very tired—up all the night before—wanted to shut up and go home as soon as possible; said he was going to bed as soon as he had some supper. That's why we never thought of trying to trace him Saturday afternoon. We supposed he'd shut up the bank and gone home so tired he just went to bed. He must have closed the bank about four o'clock, locking the door and pulling down the shade. Donahue saw the window shade down and went to Lem's office, as I tell you—looking quite excited for him, hot on a warm scent."

"He told Lem that he thought he saw Snyder going upstairs in the hotel—wasn't sure, but thought it was Snyder. He thought Snyder had gone up to Andrus' room—Wheedon, you know. Andrus hadn't been seen around the hotel all day. Donahue's pretended theory was that he had been keeping close in his room and Snyder had come to do some secret business with him. There's a transom over the door, but Donahue couldn't very well fetch a chair or step ladder out into the hotel hall, where anybody might see him. He wanted Lem to step over to the hotel a minute and give him a boost—a leg up—so he could peek through the transom. Of course, he had dangled the idea of $50,000 or more before Lem and me."

"Lem went over and gave Donahue a leg up; but Andrus' room was empty. Then Donahue kept him there in the hall a few minutes—with his air of being on a warm scent—talking about the case. He still thought he'd seen Snyder at the hotel. He said he was afraid the people at Little Bayou, having finished their business with Andrus, or being about to finish it, would vanish—might have vanished already. He played the part, strung Lem along, dangling the $50,000 or more. Lem agreed to shut up his office in half an hour and drive to Little Bayou, on a pretended errand from the landlord, to see whether the people had flown, or gave evidence of preparing to flee. Lem can fix the time because, before mentioning half an hour, he looked at his watch, and it was just about a quarter past four."

"In half an hour Lem did shut his office and drove to Little Bayou, where he saw no signs of flight. But he had to stay there a little while in order to carry out his pretense of an errand for the landlord. He got back to town shortly before six and met Donahue at the hotel, and reported. Donahue said he must have been mistaken about seeing Snyder at the hotel. They talked a minute or so, and Lem went home to supper. You see, Lou, it was the sort of inconsequential thing, leading to nothing, that people naturally forget. Lem never dreamed of calling it to mind, in connection with the murder, till I talked with him an hour ago. But while Donahue was holding Lem at the hotel anybody might have dropped into Lem's office without arousing the least curiosity."

"Somebody did drop in—walked through the back room into the bank parlor, and so into the bank, where Uncle Mark was busy winding up the day's affairs—doing most necessary things before he went home. This man had some bogus errand that brought him close to Uncle Mark without arousing any suspicion. Then one blow over the head. He carried the body into the vault and shut the door, and hid—either in the vault or under the counter. If Lem, coming back from the hotel, or during the half hour he remained in his office, had stepped into the bank by the back way, he would have seen the vault closed, everything quiet and empty, and supposed Uncle Mark had gone home. Half an hour later Lem shut his office. There was slight danger of interruption then, and the man inside searched the bank. Very likely he had shut himself in the vault, where there is an electric light, and was searching that all the while. It's only a small place, with little furniture. In an hour of daylight anybody could search it thoroughly. After dark he let himself out of the back window.

"Any time after dark—say eight o'clock—anybody could have strolled out Date street and stepped into Uncle Mark's dark, unlocked house—off by itself, hid in shrubbery—with only one chance in a thousand of being seen. To plant those cigarette stubs in the fireplace and turn on the light in the bedroom would take, at most, sixty seconds. Then downtown again in ample time to be at the hotel when Lem White dropped in, about a quarter to nine, for the evening's poker game. From that time on till morning Donahue has a perfect alibi."

There was an intent line in her forehead as she strove to follow his reasoning. After an instant she reminded him: "But if Donahue was with Lem White at the hotel it wouldn't have been he who stepped into the bank."

"No," he said. "It wasn't Donahue who put on a red beard and pinched you on Crab island. It wasn't Donahue who hit me over the head in the woods last night. It wasn't Donahue who killed Uncle Mark. He only helped. What I've been telling you is theory. We can't convict murderers on a theory. We've got to have evidence. We haven't any now, you see, not even against Donahue—none that would stand up in court—to say nothing of this other man whom nobody has ever seen. What I'm going to get now is the evidence."

While she looked at him in suspense he took from his coat pocket an account book, about six inches wide by eight long, bound in limp brown leather, with detachable leaves.

"There were a lot of things in that brief case—this book, a couple of check books, one just with the stubs, the other about half used up; several bank statements with the canceled checks folded inside; a whole sheaf of memoranda on small, loose sheets, and so forth. I've had no time to examine the things. Probably I couldn't make head or tail of them if I did. But I wanted to be sure that I had the right article—that this wasn't just another trick to confuse the trail. So I took out this book and carried it to the hotel, and showed it—to Sister Sarah."

That name, on his lips, asserted a claim. Her eyes shone at him as she laid her hand over his. He held her hand, and went on:

"She said it was the genuine thing. You know how much Donahue and his friend want that brief case—what they've done here and what risks they've run to get it; and by this time they must be satisfied we're all blockheads whom they can fool as much as they please. Before I found the brief case I had an appointment with Donahue for three o'clock at his room in the hotel. I went there about three o'clock, told him what I'd found, and showed him this book to prove it. . . . It worked for them once perfectly. They'll try it again."

As he paused a moment, she said quickly, "I don't understand."

"At four o'clock Lem White is going to drive out of town. Donahue and I are going to see him go. You see, Donahue and I have a difference. Yesterday I agreed to go in partnership with him, sixty, forty, on whatever we could get out of those papers. But now that I've found them, I'm conscience-stricken. It brings back Uncle Mark's murder. Certainly these papers were connected with the murder. I think I must show them to the sheriff when he gets back from Tampa this afternoon or evening—explain them to him—keep my skirts clear.

That's the last thing Donahue and his friend want; but I'm rather obstinate about it. However, I want Donahue to look over the papers with me—explain them to me.

"We know that Lem is going to have an errand out of town at four o'clock. Soon after we see him leave I'll stroll down to his office and go into the bank the back way. Then Donahue will join me. We'll sit down at the desk in the bank, the papers between us, looking them over. It worked for them once, perfectly. They think we're great blockheads. They'll try it again. While Donahue and I are looking at the papers somebody else will drop into Lem's empty office—the same man who dropped in last Saturday afternoon. He'll come around into the bank the back way. He'll have some plausible errand. He'll try it all over again. . . . And then, do you see, we'll have our proof—caught redhanded repeating the trick."

As the scene which he had projected imprinted itself upon her mind a line wrinkled her forehead, her breath came quickly, and her fingers tightened on his.

"But you!" she exclaimed. "They'll be two to one!"

He smiled and shook his head. "Not two to one; and I'll be ready. Snyder is coming here—any minute now. He'll plant himself by that window. Nobody can go into the real estate office over there without his seeing it. He'll see me go in. He'll see Donahue go in. If another man goes in Snyder will follow him one minute later. He tells me he's a very good shot. It will take a little time in there, you see. The other man will have to state his errand—make some excuse for walking in—get up close to us. By that time Snyder will be behind the door of the bank parlor, peeking in, ready. I know how to use a pistol myself, and I shall be ready."

The line was still in her forehead; the fingers that clasped his were trembling.

"You see, dear," he explained, "if we move too soon we lose everything. We must let them go ahead with their trick up to the very last turn—right up to the attack. Then a shout from Snyder and he steps out, gun in hand. This other man has a weapon. We saw its mark on my uncle's head and on Wheedon's. He'll have it in his hand then. But we must let them go right up to the last turn or we'll lose them. . . . Here's Snyder now." For there was a footfall on the porch.

He arose, stepped to the door, and opened it. "Sister Sarah's" husband came in. "I've been telling her," said Latham. "She understands it. From this window you can easily keep watch." He was already back at the living room door, Snyder following with a glance toward the window which Latham indicated. "It will not be until after four o'clock," Latham continued, and glanced at his watch. "You've got over a quarter of an hour to make yourself comfortable as possible in."

He was smiling a little and speaking lightly, but aware of Louise out of the tail of his eye. That line was still in her forehead, she was pale, her eyes clinging to him.

"I'll be very comfortable," said Snyder; "more comfortable than you will be." He also smiled slightly; and at any rate Latham apprehended him as a cool and competent man who would do his part faithfully.

"Well, it's understood," said Latham lightly. "Lem will drive away. Then I'll go in. Then Donahue. And then, we'll hope for somebody else. By the way, I saw Bassett just before I left the hotel. He's found out that Selma took the 3:45 train north this morning, with a small bag. Very likely she's simply run away." He was smiling a little and obviously about to take leave.

But he was dominated. Abruptly as a thunderclap out of a clear sky, Louise flung herself upon him and burst out in a sweet storm: "No, no! It's not going to be that way! You shall not! It's too great a risk!" She was clinging to him. "I'll not have it! They'll kill you! They're terrible men! Frank'll not be in time! You shall not do it! You must have somebody to help you!"

At the first onset—for ten seconds—Latham suffered a strictly masculine embarrassment. After all, he knew Snyder very little—not sufficiently to be at ease when a girl threw herself upon his breast in the other's face. But that swiftly passed. The soft body clinging to him flooded his heart; the sweet, stormy cries of a fluttered mother bird uplifted him. Openly and before the world, so to speak, a woman with all the advantages of youth, beauty, and grace that a woman could well have, was choosing him, giving herself to him.

Gravely, then, and smoothing her hair, he sought to reassure her: "I'll be all right, sweetheart; I'll not be off guard; Frank will come in. . . ."

But she cut it short, sweeping it all aside: "No! You shall not! I'll not have you do it that way! They're terrible men. It's too great a risk. I'm not going to love you just to see you killed! You must listen to me!"

And Snyder, who had soberly witnessed this tender explosion, put in a word. "I think she's right. It occurred to me on the way down. Let me suggest something. . . ."

Finally Louise and Latham stepped into the hall alone. She was calmer now, but her lips trembled. While he held her she whispered a last injunction: "But you'll be very careful."

"Yes," he promised. "I mean to come back to you."

On the sidewalk he glanced back. A small white hand waved to him from the edge of the glass panel of the door; then he set his face toward the hotel and Donahue, and the last throw of the die. . . . Of course there was a risk, but he meant to go back to her.

Even now Donahue fairly puzzled him. Could it really be that this cool, assured, wooden man, speaking so calmly in a low pitched voice, meant to be murdering him in a few minutes? In spite of himself there were glints of doubt in Latham's mind—such a plausible sort of man, looking as harmless as any other. But there were barracuda in the sea. . . .

At his uncle's desk in the shut bank he placed a chair so as to command a view of the open door to the parlor at the rear. Whoever stepped in must come up square in front of him. He took a last glance at his army automatic and stuck the muzzle loosely into his belt, fastening one button of his coat. A thrust of his hand would reach the weapon. The bare little bank looked just as it had a week ago—or on last Sunday morning—except that the pasteboard stationery boxes under the counter had been piled up again.

When Donahue came in at the parlor door Latham mentally went through the motions of drawing his gun. Yes, he was sure he could have dropped the man anywhere between the door and the desk before the detective could pull a weapon and fire. But there would be no firing on the enemy's side—not at this hour, with Main street twenty feet away. The brief case already lay on the desk and an empty chair stood opposite Latham; but what could he say when Donahue, with a very simple and natural action, swung his chair around so that he would be sitting at Latham's right hand, a corner of the desk between them? It was a quite natural—a fairly obvious—thing to do when two men were to bend over a heap of papers.

They did bend over the heap of papers—first the account book with flexible leather covers and detachable leaves. Some of the entries Donahue was able to expound; others would require more study, checking up with collateral evidence. His fingers moved over the pages. His low pitched, monotonous voice droned on for several minutes. They both heard a footstep in the parlor and looked up, Donahue swiftly closing the account book and spreading his hands protectively over the papers.

"Yim" Benson lumbered in, grinning at them, with a yellow envelope in his hand.

"Telegram just come to the hotel for you, Pete," he said as he stepped over the threshold. "I seen you come over to Lem White's office a few minutes ago. I thought I bring you this message. And if it's butting in you got to excuse me, as Pat said when he fell off the ladder on the man's head."

He had been moving briskly since they first saw him and was now at the desk, extending the telegram. But, seeing what lay on the desk, he exclaimed, "You don't mean to say you found those papers?" As he spoke he passed behind Donahue's chair, as though to get a better look at the papers. The next second he was at Latham's chair, somewhat behind it—and Donahue was seizing the doctor's arms in a viselike grip. For no longer than a lightning flash Latham looked into those pale, popping eyes and knew them for the eyes of death—barracuda!

Then the detonation of a pistol shattered the air. From Benson came a sound like the grunt of a sleepy pig. The pistol crashed again. Surprise at the first explosion had caused Donahue's grip to relax a little. By the time the second shot came Latham had wrenched free and was drawing his pistol.

Then Snyder ran in from the parlor, ready to shoot. Benson, behind Latham's chair, was swaying and crumpling down to the floor; and little Deputy Bassett was knocking aside the pasteboard stationery boxes under the counter—crawling out from behind them with a smoking pistol in his hand as Snyder fairly got the scene in focus. Donahue, with Latham's steady gun a foot from his breast, sat perfectly still, pale and wooden eyes fixed upon the man who had him covered. Snyder was at the desk, Bassett was on his feet, and three weapons were ready. Donahue sat still, but Latham's burning eyes noted a subtle difference—a mysterious relaxing, like throwing up his hands. Bassett was the first man to speak. He said, almost peevishly:

"Hell of a place to shoot from!"

Latham stood up, leaving Donahue to Snyder, and joined the deputy sheriff over the big, crumpled body on the floor. Its strong right hand still convulsively clutched an instrument such as they had never seen before—a sort of oversized slungshot, smooth like the head of a hammer above and round pointed beneath. Without doubt it was the instrument that had killed Mark Egan and Billy Wheedon—and they had the murderer redhanded. But it seemed they were not likely to keep him long. For an instant the story telling clown glowered up at them with hate; then his eyes dimmed. Those two shots were heard outside. People were running to batter at the locked front door. But one came first of all, knowing the way, flying through the real estate office, round the bank parlor, into the scene—white, with fear stricken eyes that seemed to see nothing and nobody except Latham. . . .

Yes, he was safe; she could feel of him and see for herself.

And very sober. For if he had not listened to her, if he had depended only on Snyder, he would now be with Uncle Mark, a round hole in his skull, because Snyder would have arrived many fatal seconds too late. That was one of the things he had to tell her when they had a chance to talk alone.

THE END.

Modern Youth Defies Justice

sentenced to die. Appeal after appeal was taken, petitions were circulated throughout the state recommending that his sentence be commuted, and at the eleventh hour justice relented and sent him away for life.

Roland McDonald, choir boy who lived on the farm of George Williams, near Amherst, Maine, was only 15 when he killed his 19-year-old school teacher, Louise Gerrish. Obviously underdeveloped, McDonald was found to be a moron with a murderous instinct. He couldn't give any reason for his crime. He had merely "decided to shoot her." He is serving life.

Another boy who seemed to have a grudge against the school authorities was Noland Stubblefield, 14, of Brookhaven, Miss., who killed his school principal, A. K. Watkins, last year. The crime was the culmination of a movement against Watkins, in which the Stubblefield family took a leading part. This case is still in the courts.

Many Behind Bars.

Lester Gertenberg, 15 spent several weeks in the death house at Sing Sing before Governor Smith commuted his sentence to life imprisonment. He killed his stepfather, Marco Guerriero, of Albany, N. Y. In his confession he said he had also killed his father some years before at the instigation of his mother, who in each case had fallen in love with a man not her husband.

The mother was held for a while but was eventually released.

Confessed to Murder.

So also are John Regan, 16, and William Kilbride, 15, who have been indicted for murder in the first degree. These Manhattan youngsters confessed to the murder of August Ebling, a groceryman, during an attempted holdup several weeks ago. Regan is accused of being the actual murderer.

In recent weeks boy murderers have been figuring in the headlines with most startling frequency. One of them, Herbert Koerber, 18-year-old leader of the cake eater gang of youthful holdup men, is now in the death house at Sing Sing. Another, Ralph Costello, 18, who confessed he killed Mrs. Catherine Clowery, an elderly widow, for $8, is awaiting trial.

Some day, perhaps, justice will find a way out of this situation. Some day perhaps civilization will find the remedy for this new and terrible disease. Until then, however, we are faced with this steady increase, this growing tendency toward murder among youngsters in their 'teens or close to them.

So far justice has been shuddering from executing these children. Though juries may demand the extreme penalty, the long arm of mercy inevitably reaches out and snatches the prisoner out of the shadow of the gallows or the chair.

Who knows but what these young lifers may emulate the example of Jesse Pomeroy, a boy murderer who will this year celebrate his fiftieth year in prison, and develop into wise and useful humans?

What Betty Blythe Suffered For Art's Sake

had been a misunderstanding as to the bank and Miss Blythe had not gotten it. He said he would not be making his claims for delays and extra costs against Miss Blythe if she had not slandered him and ruined his reputation as a film producer.

"Well," said Justice Horridge, "It ought to be possible then to compose your differences without further trial of this case. This man says he would not be claiming damages if he had not been slandered and Miss Blythe says she would not have said the things complained of if she had known the money had been paid into the bank."

And so it was that a few hours later a settlement of the whole affair was announced and Betty exchanged a handsome apology for something like $10,000 which was due her for her services.

be treated as informative regardless of previous bidding. It is foolish to double a bid of one in order to secure a score above the line, as it is too easy for either adversary to switch. After the first trick the declarer was obliged to move cautiously. He knew that south must hold two tricks in spades, the king of clubs, and the king of diamonds. A cross ruff did not look promising on account of the difficulty the declarer would have getting into his own hand and the certainty that the opponents would lead trumps in order to break up his game.

After the third trick south was marked with both the ten and the nine of spades, and the declarer feared that he might also have the six. That was a risk, however, which west could not afford. A low diamond was led from dummy at trick four in the hope that south did not hold both king and queen of that suit.

At trick five the declarer feared he would be over-ruffed, but could not afford to use an honor at that stage of the game. He could now count south for exactly four cards in each black suits in the beginning of the deal.

At trick six the declarer led the ten of diamonds trying to coax north to cover with the queen, but overtaking the trick in dummy because the next lead must come from that quarter.

After the sixth trick the declarer knew that each opponent had three trumps, South being marked with an original holding of four spades, two diamonds, and four clubs. He therefore secured all the rest of the tricks by ruffing the losing spades with the ace of trumps, then drawing the trumps and leaving the lead in dummy.

The Barricaded Gate

The Story of a Bombing Plot Which a Boy Overheard and Averted

By W. BOYCE MORGAN

As they reached the hall, one of them, a huge, burly fellow, turned."

The screen door leading into the main office of the Judson Tube company slammed, and George Wallace, temporarily engaged as office boy during the summer vacation, glanced up. A young man, in high leather boots and a dark shirt thrown over at the throat, entered, carrying on his shoulder a surveyor's transit. He set the instrument down and, producing a handkerchief, wiped a perspiring brow.

"Well, guardian of the office," he said to George, with a grin, "what's the big news? Is the conference still on?"

George grinned in reply. Paul Lane, recently graduated from college with a degree in engineering and a record as a good athlete and a better friend, was George's most intimate acquaintance in the office and—secretly—his idol.

"Yes, they are still in there," he answered, indicating the private office of Mr. Judson, owner of the company, "and from the sound I'd say that they are having a battle."

For hours that private office had closeted Mr. Judson, his associates, and representatives of the mill laborers, who were threatening a strike. The office had been anxiously awaiting news, with the hope that Mr. Judson would be able to pacify the angry men.

Paul shook his head, a serious expression on his face.

"It looks bad, George," he mused. "I've been down on the river bank all afternoon, looking over the place for our new warehouse. I heard some of those boys on the shipping gang talking in the shed, and believe me, they are all 'het up.' If the boss doesn't come through like they want him to, I guess we'll have a vacation."

"We will?" inquired George. "Why, the office will work even if the mill strikes, won't it?"

"George, there won't be any work done around this place if these boys go out on strike tomorrow. The bunch of foreigners in this town is mean. If they don't get what they want we'll have trouble, and it won't be healthy for anybody around this plant. A few may stay here to sort of look after things, but if I know Mr. Judson, he won't ask any girls or many of the men to come down here if there is any danger."

George looked at him with round eyes. "You don't mean," he said in a hushed voice, "that they would riot, and try to shoot the office force, and all that stuff?"

Paul picked up the transit and started up the stairs to the engineering department. "I'm not trying to scare you, George," he said over his shoulder, "but I went through one of these strikes several years ago in my home town. The state police finally settled the thing, but there were a dozen people killed before it was over. I'm not saying that will happen here, but—well, a strike isn't any picnic."

Paul's heavy shoes clattered up the stairs, leaving George thinking deeply. So they might get a vacation! George liked to work, but what boy in his "teens" would not sometimes long for the joys of summer time, even though he never complained about missing them? When George's father had died three years before, the family had been left in fairly comfortable circumstances, but since then George had worked every summer. College loomed only a few years ahead, and the money for it must come from the boy's own efforts. A vacation was something to be welcomed, even though the job was enjoyable.

But suddenly George changed his mind. If there were going to be excitement and maybe fighting down here, did he want to be off up the river swimming? Hardly! If anybody was going to come to work, he'd be there. Yes, sir!

The boy's musings were rudely interrupted. Suddenly the hum of voices in Mr. Judson's office was broken. There was a scuffle of feet, and the door opened. Three roughly dressed, dangerous looking men swaggered out of the room, their faces ominous and black. As they reached the hall, one of them, a huge, burly fellow with a red face and a crooked nose, turned to the little group of men standing inside the office door.

"And what's more, Judson, you bound," he shouted with a leer on his face, "your own hide ain't goin' to be any too safe for a while. You can't turn this bird down cold and get away with it. We'll see your rotten old mill burn down before we'll work in it another day, and that's final. From now on, look out!"

The office door slammed, leaving George breathless with excitement. Those words could mean only one thing. The strike was on! The conference had failed, the mill would be closed, and—well, they'd see if Paul's fears would be realized.

George glanced at the clock. It was two minutes to five. The office force would be going home in a few minutes. Mr. Judson was talking in low tones to the men around him. He left them and came up to George's desk.

"George," he said, "hold everybody here in the hall for a few minutes as they go out. I want to talk to them." "Yes, sir," answered George. Mr. Judson hurried back to his office, and a minute later the gong downstairs clanged loudly, announcing the end of the day's work.

In a few minutes the office employees began to come out of their various departments. George stopped them, and told them of Mr. Judson's wish, and asked them to wait for a few minutes.

Mr. Judson, followed by Mr. Sparks, the office manager, and Lewis, the plant superintendent, came out of the owner's office, and the whisperings of the assembled workers were hushed. Mr. Judson walked to the front of the hall and turning, faced his employees.

In a few words he explained that he had been unable to satisfy the mill workers, and that the strike would begin at once. Because of the possible danger, he was not asking any of the force to come to work. None of the women would be allowed to come, but a few men would be asked to volunteer to stay at the office and look after things. At his call for volunteers, every man in the office responded. And George was among them.

Mr. Judson smiled. "Thank you, men," he said. "Well, I won't need you all. Let's see, I like the engineering department to come out, the pay office force, and—if I want any others I'll get in touch with you. That's all."

The men turned, and the force filed from the building, sober and silent. Outside, the men from the mill were straggling from the gate, looking toward the office building. Ill feeling was apparent in their faces, but they made no disturbance.

George grasped Paul's arm as they left the office. "Say, this looks like fun!" he exclaimed. "You're lucky, too—the engineers have to come out. Well, I'm coming too."

Paul glanced down at him. "No, you'd better not. Better speak to Mr. Judson or Sparks about it, anyway."

Just then a long, low automobile swung around the drive from the street and stopped in front of the office. In the front seat sat a boy of about George's age, well dressed and good looking. Beside him sat a young girl, and George looked at her with a good deal of interest. These were Bob and Betty, Mr. Judson's children. George had seen them before, and he had envied Bob a little as he called for his father in the evenings with that big car, but the Wallaces and the Judsons lived in widely separated parts of town, and he had never met them.

Mr. Judson came from his office and started down the steps. "I'm going to ask him now!" said George, and washing away from Paul, he approached the owner of the company.

"Mr. Judson," he burst out, "you didn't say anything about me coming to work tomorrow. You'll need somebody to watch the door and run errands, won't you? And I can run

THE LETTER

GAINESVILLE, GA.

Dear Unknown Friends: Please make room for me in your jolly club. I read the letter writers' page every Monday and sure do like it. Are you glad vacation days are here again? I sure am. Of course I like to go to school but I like vacation time too. Where are you going to spend your vacation? I am planning to go to Atlanta. I am 11 years old and am in the sixth grade. I will be 12 October 13. Who is my twin? I have dark brown hair, blue eyes, medium complexion and a few freckles on my nose and dimples in my cheeks. Now you know how I look. I have a pet collie dog named Rover. He sure is good. Every one write to me and I will answer all letters received.

Hello Boys and Girls: Will you let two Alabama girls join your happy band? We enjoy your letters so much. We are sisters and have good times together. We have a collie dog for our pet. Her name is Polly. We love her very much. I, Irene, am 11 years old, and am in the fifth grade. I, Effie Leta, am 8 years old and am in the fourth grade. We like to go to school. We enjoy the funny paper so much. We like Winnie Winkle, Orphan Annie and Gasoline Alley best of all. We have one brother, Perryman, Jr., five years old. We love him very dearly. We are proud of this and feel sorry for children who are less fortunate. Write to us.

Your new friends,
IRENE MOBLEY,
EFFIE LETA MOBLEY.

COVINGTON, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: Here comes another Georgia girl knocking at the door. Will you please let me in? I am 10 years old, with brown eyes, brown hair and a dark complexion. I was promoted to the fifth grade. Our school was out April 30. I am a weekly reader of the letter writers' club and enjoy it very much. Which of the funnies do you like? I like Winnie Winkle, Uncle Walt and Little Orphan Annie. Some of you write to me and I will surely answer your letters.

Your unknown friend,
OLIVE BURNS.

Route 2.

EASTMAN, GA.

Hello Ever, One: Here I come asking for admittance among the jolly bunch of boys and girls, as I enjoy being with a merry crowd. I live in the dear old state of Georgia, one among the best states of the union. I live eight miles east of Eastman and five miles from Chauncey. I go to school at Chauncey and just like it fine. We surely have a grand time at school. Of course, you have to study real hard for it is a good school but then we have our play hours. Our boys won the silver cup this year given at the Dodge county basketball tournament. We are prepared to bring both the boys and girls' cup home with us next year from the tournament. I will be a senior next year. I live in the country and just adore country life. I don't think I would enjoy city life. We can enjoy just lots of things that are impossible for city boys and girls to indulge in. For pastime I read, go in swimming, and play the piano some time. I am just wild for a banjo-uke and intend to get me one in the near future. I am sweet 16, 5 feet, 6 inches tall and weigh 120 pounds. My birthday is August 4. I hope to receive lots of letters from you cousins.

Route 8.

BOWDON, GA.

Dear Unknown Friends: Will you let another Georgia girl join your letter writing club? My hair is light brown (bobbed), eyes brown and complexion fair. I am 11 years old and am promoted to the sixth grade next year. I have already written too much so I will close. All you boys and girls write to me and I will answer every one.

Your unknown friend,
IMA MAE STYLES.

ATLANTA, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: May I join your happy band? I am a little girl 9 years old, have blue eyes, brown hair and fair complexion. I weigh 59 pounds and go to school. I am in the fourth grade. My birthday is September 7. I go to English avenue school. I have a very good time with all the girls. Write to me. I will answer all I receive.

Your unknown friend,
MARY LUCY TOMLIN.

CHADBOURN, N. C.

Hello Kiddies: You don't have to move over because I have written before. However, I expect you have forgotten how I look. I have dark curly hair (bobbed), blue eyes and dark complexion. My birthday is May 14. Who is my twin? Are any of you "Camp Fire Girls"? I am. Do any of you take music? Please some of you write to me.

As ever,
MARTHA SHELTON.

ATCO, GA.

Hello Dear Friends: Here is another Georgia cracker that wants to join your happy club. I hope there is room for me. I am a little girl 11 years old, am 4 feet, 11 inches tall. I am a peach blonde with my hair bobbed. I like to read your letters very much and I wanted to have a correspondence with some one in the club. I read the paper every day and I like Winnie Winkle, Little Orphan Annie and Uncle Walt the best. I have completed the fifth grade. I went to school every day and was not tardy. I got a very pretty bathing cap from my teacher for going every day. My favorite study is spelling. Some one please answer my letter, as I like to send and receive them.

Another friend,
IRENE BOWMAN.

WOODVILLE, N. C.

Dear Boys and Girls: I wonder if you will let another little North Carolina girl join your happy band? I am 9 years old, am in the fifth grade and I go to Lewiston-Woodville school. We sure do have a nice time. Daddy buys The Constitution every Saturday and I have a fine time reading it. Some of you kiddies write to me and I will answer all the letters I get.

Your unknown friend,
KATE URQUHART.

DOUGLASVILLE, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: Will you let a Georgia girl join your happy band? I am 14 years old, weigh 116 pounds, have brown hair, blue eyes and fair complexion. I am about 5 feet, 4 inches tall. I live in the country and sure do like it. Listen, all of you boys and girls write to me and you will be sure to get an answer. Now don't delay to write to your

Your unknown friend,

Route 7.

WHITE, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: Will you move over and give me some room for just a few moments. I just want a little room. I have light brown hair, blue eyes, and dark complexion. I have no pets only one little brother and one little sister. Brother is two years old and sister is six. I have one sister older than I. She is 11. I am 9. I weigh 71 pounds. I am still blessed with both father and mother. My father takes The Constitution. What funnies do you like best? I like Walt, Andy, Winnie and Moon. All of you boys and girls write to me and I will be sure to answer all letters I receive. This is my first letter.

ELLEN SATTERFIELD.

DALLAS, GA.

Dear Unknown Boys and Girls: Will you let another Georgia girl join your happy club? I have been reading your letters every Sunday and enjoy them very much. Well, I am 5 feet, 2 inches tall, weigh 124 pounds, am 14 years old and have dark brown bobbed hair and brown eyes and fair complexion. My home is in Paulding county. Of the funnies I like Winnie Winkle, Little Orphan Annie and Little Chester. I will appreciate it very much if some of you boys and girls will write to me. I will answer all letters I receive.

Your unknown friend,
EVA RUTHERFORD.

DARK RIDGE, N. C.

Dear Boys and Girls: Will you give a North Carolina girl permission to join your club? I am 5 feet tall, have fair complexion, weigh 90 pounds, have dark brown hair (bobbed), blue eyes and am 12 years old. My birthday is January 22. Have I a twin? For pets I have a hen and 12 little chicks. We live on a farm. My father is a bee-keeper. Do you like honey? I sure do. We will have hundreds of bushels of fruit such as apples, peaches, cherries, etc. I have one brother and two sisters. I like all the funnies and I hope Uncle Walt and Phyllis will marry. I like the song that Grace Deaton wrote and the poems that were written by Gladys Gullatt and J. L. Rathface. All of you boys and girls write to me and I will answer.

Your friend,
ODA MCGUIRE.

MONCURE, N. C.

Hello Boys and Girls: Will you let a North Carolina girl join your happy band of boys and girls? What do you have for pets? I have a little kitten. Its name is Snowball. Lots of my girl friends have written to this club of boys and girls. I have 5 brothers and no sisters. I am the only girl in our family. Do any of you boys and girls ever go in swimming? I do. I go in nearly every day. I am 4 feet, 9 inches tall, have sandy hair, blue eyes, weigh 97 pounds, am between 10 and 15 years old. So you boys and girls can guess my age. My birthday is July 27. Who is my twin? My mother and father are both living. Well, all of you boys and girls write to me and I will be sure to answer every letter I receive. Because I like to write and receive letters too.

Your new friend,
MARGARET L. STRICKLAND.

UNION SPRINGS, ALA.

Dear Boys and Girls: Will you admit another Alabama farm boy into your happy band? I am 10 years old and am in the fifth grade at school. I was promoted to the sixth grade. Our class had 53 pupils. That was entirely too much for one teacher. Our school was out May 27. My birthday is December 29. Who is my twin? I am not idle about this farm because I have a sort of small farm about 20 by 15 feet. I am 4 feet, 3 inches tall. I think you kids will like me because I sell The Constitution in my town. I like The Gumps, Gasoline Alley, Little Orphan Annie the best of the funnies. I will answer all letters received.

Your friend,
JACK RAVENSCHRAFT.

DALTON, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: Will you let another bobbed-haired girl in your club? Please, say yes. I am 12 years old, have brown eyes and fair complexion. I go to school at north Dalton. My teacher sure is fine. I weigh 86 pounds, am 4 feet, 11 inches tall, and have lots of playmates. I have a pet dog that will dance. I read all of the funnies but I like Chester Gump and Orphan Annie the best of all. Write to me all of you.

Your unknown friend,

Dear Girls and Boys: Will you let another Georgia girl join your happy club? I read your letters every Sunday and enjoy them. I am 11 years old and am in the sixth grade. I am 4 feet, 10 inches tall and weigh 92 pounds. I have light hair and light blue eyes.

Your unknown friend,
CLARA ALFORD.

WASHINGTON, GA.

Hello Central: Give me the letter writers' club, please. Thank you. Boys and girls, I just wanted to talk to you so bad I decided I would call you up. I feel so lonesome as I am sitting out on the back porch by myself, no one at home but just lonely me! I have sang until I am tired and read until I am sleepy. As I went to lie down to take a nap I happened to pick up the magazine and saw the letter writers' club. You know I am never too sleepy to read the interesting letters you folksies write.

I am not going to ask you kiddies to move over and give me room for I already have a place. I have written once before and it was printed. I have already made some pen-friends but I want to make some more. If Mildred Otwell reads this I hope she will write to me. She was one that answered my letter when it was printed. She then lived in Cumming, Ga. Oh, listen girls! Are any of you a member of the canning club? I am. I enjoy the work fine. I am a third year member and have won a prize at the fair on my first and second year work. I have also won this year a trip to Camp Wilkins in Athens to stay a week.

My! What do you do this hot dry weather? For myself I am a regular bookworm. I also live on a farm and find lots to keep me busy. How many of you like to milk a cow? I surely do, but our cow will fight and I cannot milk her. I also like to ride a horse or mule and always do whenever I get the chance.

Oh! I wish some of you boys and girls could have been with me Sunday. I went to a singing convention at Hepbeith church and sure did have a grand time.

I am a typical blonde, have fair complexion, blue eyes and am of the slender type. I weigh 101 pounds and am a little girl sweet 14 years old.

Oh! Girls and boys, did you pass into another grade? I did and sure am glad. I passed from the eighth grade into the ninth and did not miss a day out of school, the first term I have ever been without missing a day. My yearly average was 98 1-2.

All of you boys and girls write to me and I will answer every one if it takes a stenographer to help me.

So long,
MARTHA ELIZABETH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: I need not introduce myself for I have already done so. My idea of writing this time was to get my hat for I forgot to get it last time. It rained June 5 and everybody sure was glad of it, for it has been so dry down here. Boys and girls we should all join in and make this club a success. We should get the editor of the letter writers' club to get a badge with "The Letter Writers' Club" engraved on it and all that wants to become a member send 10 cents and get a badge. Boys and girls what do you think about it? All that would like it that way send me a letter and maybe we can get it that way. I shall be a little slow in answering but I will answer them all.

Always your friend,
CARY WILLS BAILEY.

Route 1.

EKHARDT, S. C.

Dear Boys and Girls: Will you admit a boy from South Carolina into your club? I am sure you will. I have been reading the page for boys and girls for quite a while and I enjoy it. I am 5 feet, 6 inches tall, have black hair, fair complexion and my birthday is June 11. Who is my twin? Our school closed June 4. I will be in the tenth grade next session. Some of you kiddies write to me. I will answer all letters received.

I have been reading The Constitution for a long time and I find that there is no better than it.

Your unknown friend,
ALTON KINORD.

LETTERS' CLUB

Write a Letter Real Soon and Join "The Letter Writers' Club"

ELLENWOOD, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: I wonder what you are doing these hot days. I have written once before but have decided to write again. I am between 11 and 13 years old, weigh 146 pounds, am 5 feet, 1 inch tall, have brown eyes and brown hair and medium complexion. What do you do for pastime? I sent chairs for the factory at Rex, Ga. We all seat chairs. Have you any pets? I have three cats. One is a kitten and the others are two calves. My kitten's name is Jimbo and my calves are named Byron and Craig. What do you think of these for names? My school is out now and I am real glad it is out. I was in the third grade. My father and mother are both living and I also have one own brother and two half brothers and a half sister. I wish Elinor Whatley would hurry and answer my letter for I am real anxious to hear from her. I have a speech to write to you. I think it is real good. The name of it is:

THE PUZZLED BOY

"Well, whose boy am I, anyway? I fell down cellar yesterday. And gave my head an awful bump. (If you had only seen the lump!) And mama called me when I cried. And hugged me close up to her side. And said: 'I'll kiss and make it well.' Mama's own boy; how hard he fell!" I hope to get lots of letters.

Your friend,

LILLIE GRACE MITCHELL.

ELLENWOOD, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: Oh, no, you needn't move over for me for I have already joined the club. I am the Georgia girl that wrote before and live on a farm. We have been taking The Constitution for a long time and I read the letters and funnies. The best of all in the funnies are Chester, Annie, Winnie, Walt and Perry. My school was out May 28. I hope all of you will write.

Your friend,

LIZZIE MAE STANLEY.

Route 2.

ATLANTA, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: I have been reading the letters and I enjoy them very much. I just wondered if I couldn't write, too. I will be 8 years old September 16. I was promoted to high third. I have two sisters and one brother. They are older than I am. My daddy was buried two weeks ago and we are so lonesome. Won't some of you kiddies write to me? I will answer all I get. My youngest sister is 10 years old and we are very fond of each other. I wanted mother to buy my third grade books but she said if I had them now I would read too much. I sure do like to read. If you kiddies wish to write to me my address is Route 97, Box 95.

Your friend,

J. C. BLEDSOE.

RUPERT, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: Will you let another Georgia girl come in. I wrote once before but I don't guess any of you boys and girls remember me. I am a little girl 12 years old. My birthday is September 14. I notice one letter that was written by Catherine Phillips and her birthday was September 14. Only she was 14 and I am only 12. Have I another twin? Which one of the funnies do you like best. I enjoy all of them. For pets I have a little poodle dog named Jack, and 12 little yellow birdies to pet.

Your new friend,

CLARICE SUMMEROUR.

TEMPLE, GA.

Dear Boys and Girls: Will you let a Georgia girl in for a chat? I have brown eyes, black hair, medium complexion and am 5 feet tall. My birthday is March 14. What do you do for pastime? I don't do anything much but play. I have lots of good friends. I go to school at Draketown. School was out May 7. I will take up the fifth grade next term of school. How many of you boys and girls like to play jackstones? I do, for one. Ephie Buchanan and I sure have a big time playing jackstones. I am still blessed with father and mother, three sisters and two brothers. One of my brothers is in the army in Hawaii. All of you who care to write let your letters fly. You sure will get an answer.

FLOY DENMON.

Route 3.

Dear Boys and Girls: Is there room for just one more? If there is I want to join your club. I am a little Florida boy 11 years old. I have brown hair, blue eyes and weigh 95 pounds. My birthday is March 15. Who is my twin? I enjoy reading most of all. If any of you like to read poems just take a look at this one.

THE CRIME OF THE AGES.

I.
When Noah started to build the ark,
People for miles around
Gathered and watched him while at work.

'Mid silence most profound,
Some thought that he had lost his mind;
Of gumption he had none;
Some wondered how he'd float the thing
When all the work was done.

II.
But Noah gave them little heed,
He scarcely stopped to eat,
And in a real short space of time
The ark was quite complete.
He gathered in the bugs and beasts
And insects all in twain;
And then he seated himself down
To wait for it to rain.

III.
It's told that how for forty days
The rain in torrents fell,
Till water covered all the earth
Where folks were wont to dwell.
The ark it floated on the tide,
And in the course of time
The flood receded, and dry land
Appeared amid the slime.

IV.
Old Noah then began to loose
The inmates of the ark;
He turned the bugs and reptiles out;
The beasts he did debark.
But what a lot of suffering
He could have held in check
When the had the old mosquitos,
If he'd broken each one's neck.

All letters answered.

Hello Boys and Girls: Will you let me into your club again? It has been so long since I have written to the club I thought I would write again. For pets I have a little black dog. Its name is Mutt. It will soon be 9 years old. What do you boys and girls do for pastime since school is out? I don't do much of anything but sit around all the time. I am 5 feet tall, weigh 96 pounds, have light hair, fair complexion and gray eyes. I am between 13 and 16, so you can guess my age. My mother is still living, but my father has been dead for some time. Everybody write to me, large or small, young or old, because I like to get letters and also like to write them.

Your new friend,

BEATRICE WILKIE.

Dear Friends: Will you let a little Georgia girl join your happy band? I am 10 years old and am in the sixth grade at Concord school. I have two sisters and no brothers. For pets I have a little pig and a kitten. I have black hair (bobbed), blue eyes and fair complexion and weigh 62 pounds. Some of you boys and girls write to me and I will be sure to answer all I receive.

Your new friend,

ANNIE BELLE BANKS.

WEST PALM BEACH, FLA.

Dear Girls and Boys: Bum! Bum! Here we come! How about a Florida boy getting into your club? I have been a constant reader of your section for quite a while and so finally decided to write.

Do you girls and boys enjoy outdoor sports? I'm very fond of all outdoor sports, especially tennis and swimming, and am also fond of dancing. I am 5 feet, 11 inches tall, have grayish blue eyes, black hair, fair complexion and weigh 106 pounds. I'm expecting lots of letters. I will send a snapshot to all who write.

Your friend,

EDWARD BARBARE.

Dear Boys and Girls: I guess you remember me, for my letter appeared in The Constitution some time ago. We have been taking The Constitution ever since I can remember. I like to read the funnies. I like Little Orphan Annie and Uncle Walt best of all. Our school was out the second day of April. I was in the sixth grade but was promoted to the seventh. I live close to a river and go fishing nearly every week. What do you boys and girls do for pastime? After school was out I was kind of lonesome. I'm not so lonesome now, though. All of you boys and girls that want to may write to me and I guarantee that I shall answer all letters received. Send your picture if you can.

Your unknown friend,

VERNA GREGORY.

DRAKETOWN, GA.

Dear Kiddies: Will you please admit another Georgia girl to your club? I read the letters every week and enjoy them very much. I live on a farm, and have lots of pets, such as cats, pigs and bantam chickens. I have black hair, blue eyes, fair complexion, am 4 feet tall, 10 years old and weigh 60 pounds. I go to school at the Beulah junior high school and am in the fifth grade. How many of you like to go horseback riding? I do. It is my favorite sport. I hope to hear from all you boys and girls.

Your friend,

MINNIE ALLGOOD.

LILLIE MAE MORRIS.

KENBY, N. C.

Dear Boys and Girls: As a boy of 14, from the state of North Carolina, I wish to join the letter writers' club of The Constitution. I am a salesman for the Atlanta Constitution and sell 25 copies every week. I am also a salesman for the Crowell Publishing company, Curtis Publishing company, News and Observer, and various other publishing houses, such as the Macfadden Publication and the kind. Having had two units in the eighth grade at Kenby high school last year I have taken six subjects this year and will be able to enter the tenth grade next year, with the exception of Algebra, due to the fact that I had a conflict. I had a fine Latin teacher in the eighth grade. He taught my twin brother and sister, who graduated and received diplomas from this school. I have a pet dog named "Matsie," a name I chose from the comic section of The Constitution. He will jump over a stick when held about three or four feet from the ground. Play ball? Sure he can. He will run and bring it back to me when thrown. He can catch it when thrown into the air. He will catch chickens when needed.

I will be glad to exchange letters.

FRANCES MORTON.

ANGIER, N. C.

Dear Boys and Girls: I have not seen a letter from this town as yet but hope to see this one. I am a girl from the Old North State and would like to become a member of your splendid club. I am 15 years old, am 5 feet, 6 inches tall, weigh 120 pounds, have grayish-blue eyes, dark brown hair and medium complexion. My birthday is December 3. Do any of you have it? I suppose all of your schools are out now. Are they not? Ours closed for vacation May 28. My favorite study is English. What is yours? What are your pastimes? Mine are reading, cooking, writing and playing the piano. I like the last one best and it is a real worthwhile one, too, I think. I would like to correspond with all of you—especially those of my age and who live in Tennessee and Alabama. But all of you write immediately—if not sooner—and enclose photos if possible. Hoping to get at least one dozen letters soon I am and want to be.

YOUR PICNICS

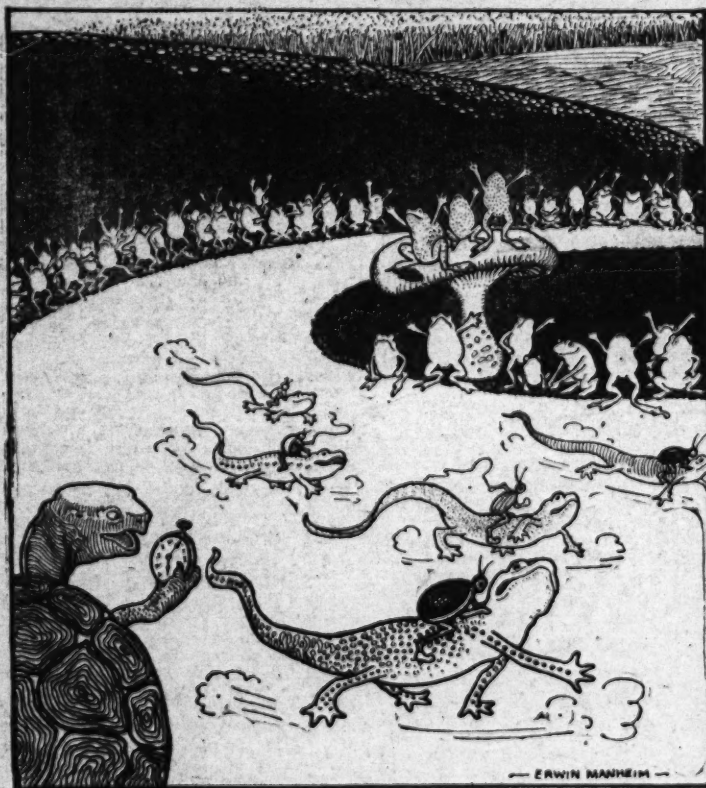

One of the greatest joys of summer is a picnic. How you love to get out into the woods and eat your lunch in the shade of the trees, resting on the cool, clean grass!

When you pick a site for such a picnic, don't you like to find a place that is clean, with no rubbish or papers strewn about? But are you sure that you yourself do nothing to leave such things when you go away from YOUR picnic place?

The woods are beautiful, but their beauty can be quickly marred by the thoughtlessness of human beings who consider nothing but their own pleasure. Don't be the one to spoil a place of natural beauty through carelessness.

Frogs See A Young Star Win The Salamander Steplechase

This week the Frogtown Campers are witnessing an exciting spectacle which was presented near their tents on the Salamander race track. It is the annual Salamander Steplechase. The picture caught them while they were watching the final and main event, the 50-yard crawl, in which Beetle Bug guided Spotted Salamander to a glorious victory over a fast field.

Spotted Salamander is in the two-weeks-old class, and promises to be one of the fastest crawlers that Swampland has ever known. Old Man Turtle, who acted as official time-keeper, sees a great future for the sensational winner of this important race.

the switchboard if Miss Grace isn't here. I'd better come, hadn't I?"

The tall man with the gray hair looked down at his office boy and smiled.

"Well," he finally said, "I hadn't thought much about it. It may be dangerous for you, George, but if you want to come as much as you seem to, it's up to you."

"Good!" ejaculated George. "I'll be down in the morning. Thanks!"

He started to dash away, but Mr. Judson detained him with a word.

"Wait a minute, George. You haven't ever been out to my house, have you? I'd like you to meet Bob and Betty. Can't you come with us now and go out for dinner?"

George fairly gasped. Invited to Judson's! Why, they lived in the nicest house in town! "Well," he finally gulped, when he had recovered his voice, "I'd have to call my mother, but—gee, I'd love to go."

"Fine," answered Mr. Judson. "Run in the office and call her. Well wait for you."

A few minutes later George was sitting beside Bob Judson while that young man skillfully piloted the big car up the hill away from the plant. And in the back seat, where George could see her out of the corner of his eye, sat pretty Betty Judson beside her father.

To Be Continued Next Week.

MR. NICKELDICK.

MR. SLIG AND THE POLICE.

BY WM. DONAHAY.

Mr. Nickeldick had to make a trip to Shagbark to attend to some business belonging to the estate of a rabbit that had been caught in a trap. It was a long, lonesome walk, and he had asked Mr. Slig to go with him.

Mr. Slig had agreed to go, but he was three hours late, and it was almost eleven o'clock before he arrived at Mr. Nickeldick's house.

"I overslept a trifle," he told Mr. Nickeldick.

"I have had the colored cat fix us up a lunch," said Mr. Nickeldick, "and we can eat along the way."

The rabbit and the opossum set off for Shagbark, chatting pleasantly as they walked along.

Shagbark was a very strict prohibition town. Movies, chewing gum, the Charleston and face powder were not allowed in the city limits.

The people who lived in the town never used wicked words, and they wore their Sunday clothes every day during the week. No one in the place was rude enough to use a guest towel, and no one ever laughed after eight o'clock at night.

"Well, it's all right to be strict about most things, but I can't see there is anything wrong about chewing gum," said Mr. Nickeldick as they walked along. "There are many things that would be worse to chew."

"I'm against chewing gum!" argued Mr. Slig. "It is a disgusting habit. It is a most disturbing thing to have some one yawp gum in your ear, their jaws working like a rivet machine."

"I'd rather hear gum chewing than to hear some people talk," said Mr. Nickeldick.

"Of course, we all have our likes and dislikes," answered Mr. Slig; then, drawing himself up and glaring sternly at Mr. Nickeldick, he hissed out his strongest argument:

"Have you, sir—have you ever had chewing gum stick to your heel?"

"Cool it with a piece of rice," grinned Mr. Nickeldick. "That's the best way to get it off. It sticks dreadfully when it's warm."

Mr. Slig clasped his paws behind his back and walked along in silence.

"I'm terribly fond of chewing gum, and I'm mighty glad I do not live in Shagbark," continued Mr. Nickeldick.

Mr. Slig's only answer was a sniff. They had been so busy talking they had forgotten all about their lunch, so they decided to save it until their business was over in the town.

"We can eat it on the way back," said Mr. Nickeldick.

As they drew near the town they saw a big fat pig in a policeman's uniform standing near the road. He was staring at them, and Mr. Nickeldick felt nervous.

"It's a nice day," he said pleasantly to the pig.

"Yus, yus!" grunted the pig, eyeing the package of lunch under Mr. Nickeldick's arm. "What have you got in that bundle?" he asked.

"W-W-Why, our lunch!" answered Mr. Nickeldick.

"I'll have to look into it," said the pig, stepping in front of the rabbit and the opossum. "There has been a lot of chewing gum smuggled into town lately by bootleggers, and I have orders to search every suspicious looking package that comes into town."

Mr. Nickeldick was somewhat peeved at the command, but there was nothing to do but obey, and he opened the package at once.

There were several lettuce and carrot sandwiches, several sweet pickles, two pieces of rabbit cake, and—horrors!—a package of chewing gum.

The colored cat knew Mr. Nickeldick's fondness for gum, and she had slipped a package into the lunch. The pig eyed the other two animals severely.

"I'll have to place you under arrest!" said the pig. "You were trying to bootleg chewing gum into town."

Mr. Nickeldick tried to explain, but the pig only smiled in a superior way and nodded his fat head.

"Yus! Yus!" grunted the pig. "Every one says it was a mistake when we catch them. You'll have to come along with me and tell the judge about it."

He caught Mr. Nickeldick and Mr. Slig by the arm and was about to lead them away when he suddenly remembered the lunch.

"I'd better get the lunch with the gum in it for evidence," he said as he released the two animals and turned back for the package of lunch that lay on the ground.

"Run!" whispered Mr. Nickeldick into Mr. Slig's ear. "Run, and I'll give the pig a push into the ditch." There was a deep ditch beside the road, and when the pig leaned over to pick up the package of lunch Mr. Nickeldick slipped up behind him and gave him a mighty push, sending him headlong into the ditch.

The two animals turned and with all their speed ran back the road they had come. They could hear the pig squealing at the top of his lungs. He was calling for help, and it made the rabbit and the opossum run all the faster.

"They'll be after us soon," gasped Mr. Nickeldick as they ran along.

"We'd better hide."

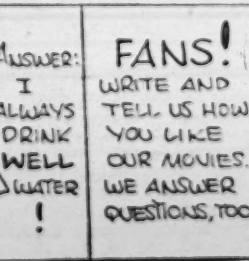

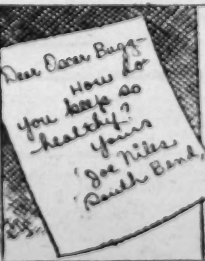

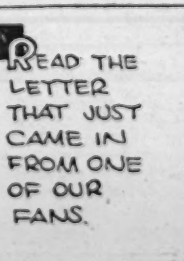

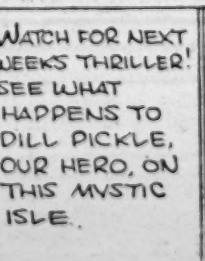

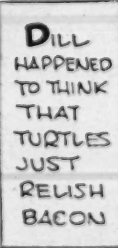

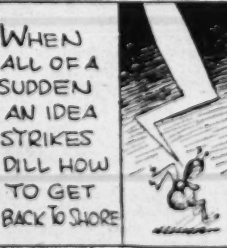

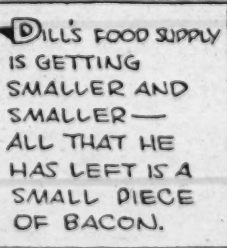

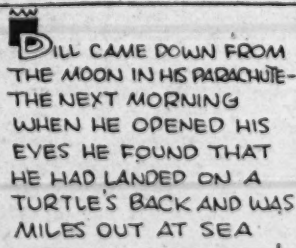

They stopped to rest and hide among some rubbish beside the road. Presently they heard a great noise. Mr. Slig peeked out and saw a spotted policeman whizz by on a motorcycle.

"They'll be searching for us everywhere," whispered Mr. Nickeldick. "We'd better disguise ourselves." They found a couple of wooden kegs on the rubbish heap, and they put these over their heads. They could see through the cracks in the kegs, and when they saw any one coming they would squat down and appear like a couple of old kegs that had been left standing beside the road.

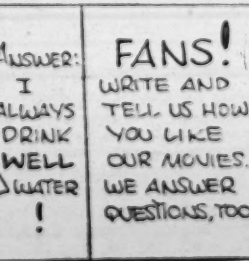

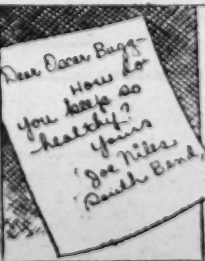

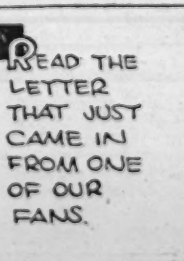

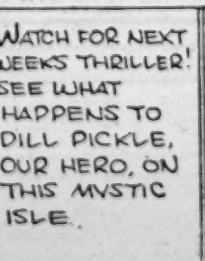

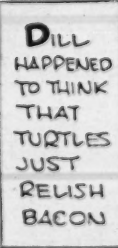

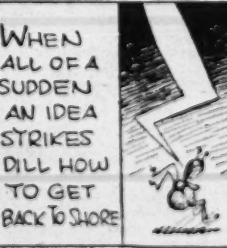

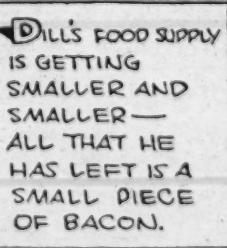

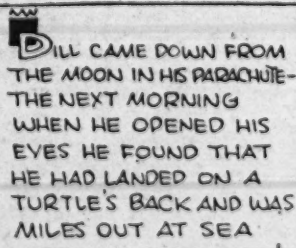

Once a fat badger sat down to rest on the keg under which Mr. Slig was hiding. Unfortunately, Mr. Slig's tail extended out from under the keg. The old badger noticed it, and, thinking it was a snake, he stamped on it with his heel. Mr. Slig screamed like an auto brake. The badger was so scared he never stopped to see what made the frightful noise. He dashed off without ever looking back, and Mr. Nickeldick laughed so hard he nearly burst his keg.

The two animals passed several policemen, but none of them ever thought of looking under the old kegs, so they arrived home in safety. The colored cat made rabbit tea and put something sirup on Mr. Slig's sore tail.
